VOL XXXIII NO. 285 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO THURSDAY DECEMBER 15 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

Jury Return True Bill Against Lindsay Men

THE CONSPIRACY CASE AGAINST THE LINDSAY BANKERS OPENED YESTERDAY.

Is There Evidence of Criminal Intent?—Charged With Conspiring to Defraud and Injure Market Price of Stock of Farmers' Bank.

Lindsay, Dec. 14.—In the County Court this morning the Grand Jury presented a true bill against Mr. A. B. McGill, J. J. Flury and J. L. Coulter, charging them with conspiracy to defraud and injure the market price of the stock of the Farmers' Bank.

In submitting the case of the defendants Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., submitted that there was no crime in clause three of the indictment which stated that the accused did unlawfully seek, in breach of an employment contract, to try to injure the Farmers' Bank.

After considerable references by Mr. Davidson counsel for the Crown, to show Judge Harding that there was unlawful intent, his Honor ruled otherwise.

The fourth clause of the indictment was next submitted by Mr. Cowan which stated that the parties did unlawfully conspire to have withdrawn funds from the Farmers' Bank and have them deposited in another bank. His Honor ruled that there was sufficient statement in this clause to make it criminal intent.

The case was proceeded with after the jurors were sworn, three being challenged by Crown and one by the defendants. Counsel for Crown are Mr. A. Davidson and Hartley Dewart K.C., of Toronto. For the defendants M. K. Cowan, K.C., of Toronto and Thomas Stewart, Lindsay.

Col. Mason, general manager of the Home Bank, and Mr. Travers, general manager of the Farmers' Bank, are both present.

YOUNG FRENCH-CANADIAN GIRL FOUND "NOT GUILTY"

Jury Was Out Only a Short Time, But Before Retiring Prisoner Made Pitiful Plea to Members in Broken English.

Cambridge, Mass, Dec 14.—Hattie LeBlanc, the pretty 17 year old French-Canadian girl, charged with the murder of Clarence F. Glover, was acquitted by a jury in Superior Court here today.

The jury was out only a few minutes and its deliberations followed a pitiful plea made in broken English by the young girl defendant.

The jury reported at 11.19 a.m.

Tears of joy streamed down the girl's face and she clasped her hands to her breast when the forman stood up and told the court that the twelve jurors found her "not guilty."

WOMEN WERE EXCITED.

Women spectators in the courtroom tried to crowd around the girl to congratulate her and for a time it looked as though Judge Bond would have to have the room cleared by force.

"I knew they would do it," declared Attorney Johnson, the girl's counsel who had fought so valiantly to save her life. "That was the only thing they could do."

THE JUDGE'S CHARGE

Judge Bond finished his charge to the jury in the LeBlanc trial and there was a tense silence in the room as the venerable jurist said his concluding words.

Just before the jury retired Hattie LeBlanc arose and made this statement to the jury:

"I did not do it and I want to go to my home with my papa—my father."

The girl's voice was so low the foreman of the jury could not hear her. Lawyer Johnson, of her counsel, repeated what she said.

BUZZ OF EXCITEMENT.

Then as the jury passed out of the court room there was a buzz of excitement. Hattie LeBlanc was taken to an anti-room. She was trembling with the emotion that the crucial point in her ordeal caused—trembling as she walked, her heart beating with hope and anxiety.

The little girl had been much depressed last night, because she expected the case to go to the jury as she anticipated an early verdict. When she was brought into court today she had regained her cheerful demeanor. She confided to her friends that she expected to be a free girl before night.

DID SHE HAVE THE COURAGE.

Judge Bond began his charge late yesterday afternoon and after he had spoken one hour and twenty-three minutes, he suspended his charge until court opened today. In his charge to the jury the Judge impressed upon the twelve men that they must consider whether they thought a young girl had the courage to shoot and kill a man the first time that she ever shot a revolver. Judge Bond also called the juries attention to the fact that the weapon had a fixture pestaining to firing it that would require some knowledge of it in order that it might be fired successfully. He said that the question of motive must be considered and also whether or not Hattie LeBlanc had an exclusive opportunity to kill Glover. The charge was one of the longest ever delivered in a criminal case in this state. It was unusually clear so that the jury followed it closely and easily.

HER FATHER AND SISTERS.

The court room was jammed today. Among those most vitally interested in the outcome of the fight for freedom of the little French-Canadian girl who were in the court room were Hattie LeBlanc's aged father and her two sisters, Irene and Lillian LeBlanc.

DOES NOT WANT INVESTIGATION

Senate Refuses to be Looked Into by the Public Accounts Committee.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec 14. The Senate refuses to be investigated by the Public Accounts Committee. This morning when the committee met, it was announced that the Senate had refused to give to the Auditor-General the vouchers for certain expenditures which the committee wanted to look into.

"We'll have a Veto Act in this country next thing," laughed Mr Carvell, when the Senate's action was announced.

However, the committee isn't satisfied, and will look into things later.

Torrential rains have flooded the Guadalquivir river and its tributaries.

Abolish Plural Voting Ireland in a Turmoil

London, Dec 14.—The fiasco of the present general election being held throughout Great Britain will likely lead to electorate reform. This election which has stagnated business and caused thousands of dollars loss has not aided in the slightest toward solving the constitutional questions which vex the empire.

Parliament will be asked to rehabilate the election system, the chief issue at stake being the abolition of plural voting. As the present election draws to a close and the electors see that the complexion of parliament will be the same as the old, interest in the results has been lost.

IRELAND IN TURMOIL.

Excitement throughout Ireland was at greater heat than ever today following the promulgation of war minister Haldane's speech that Ireland would have to accept the Liberal's home rule measure or take the consequences. Rioting was reported from Cork and Belfast and more than a dozen arrests were made.

GOOD VOTING WEATHER.

There was polling today in twenty-eight constituencies. The weather was fair and mild. During the day a number of yesterday's returns were announced.

At noon the returns showed the following:

Laborites, 35l
Irish Nationalists 60.
Independent Nationalists, 7.
Government Coalition, 304.
Opposition (Unionists), 242.

Joseph Wilson on Trial for Arson

The case of Joseph Wilson of Burleigh, charged with having committed arson in burning down the barn of Ezra McFadden on June 4th last was commenced before his Honor Judge Huycke at the court house yesterday morning.

The following jurors were called and challenged: Wm. Cavanagh, A. Davidson, Ed. Garbut, Robert Cameron, W. J. Sanderson, John R. Bothwell, John Anderson, Peter Thompson, G. Dormer, Wm. Renwick, R. Armstrong, Wm. Bolton.

Crown Attorney Wood in his remarks to the jury, stated that the barn of Edward McFadden was burned on June 4th. The evidence at the preliminary hearing was that several members of the family saw the accused running away between 9 and 10 o'clock on that night, and he had also made threats that he was going to burn it.

Ezra McFadden was the first witness called. He said that he lived in the township of Burleigh. The prisoner came to his house the night of June 4th at 7 o'clock. He had been drinking. The last witness saw of him that night, he was sitting on the side of the road. Then shortly after someone said the barn was on fire. He ran to let the horses out. Wilson hadn't made any threats to him. The barn was completely burned and everything in it, save one horse.

To Mr. O'Connell, witness said his home was five miles from Apsley on the Apsley road. The barn was 171 feet from the house. Wilson lived on a lot adjoining the west end of witness place.

"Was there any drinking going on," Mr. O'Connell asked.

Witness said that Michael McAveely had a bottle of whiskey. McFadden had about two tablespoonfuls but it was not good whiskey, and he did not take any more. The boys brought the horses to the stable about dark. John McFadden, son of the witness, said he went to the house for a bag of grain and when he returned to the barn it was all ablaze.

The court then adjourned for luncheon.

Mrs. Ezra McFadden was the first witness called in the afternoon. She was at home on Saturday, June 4th. She saw Wilson at her home about 6 o'clock in the evening. Her husband, Louis Coons, and herself were there when McAveely and Wilson came. There was a pig came into yard, and she wanted to know who it belonged to. Wilson claimed the pig.

Wilson said to her "If you don't tell me where that pig went you will suffer this night." She told him went down the road. He turned and becalled her a filthy name and struck her. He threw her down and held her until her husband made him let her up. A number of boys, including her own two sons, were coming up the road. She heard Wilson say to young Hales: "I'll burn down their barn to-night." She went down the road with a stick and told him to move on home and he said: "I will have either John's life or yours to-night." Some minutes later she saw the barn was on fire. She ran to the top of the hill and she saw Wilson runn ng from the barn. He was only about 15 yards from it. Witness said there was no doubt but that the man was Wilson.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that the Wilsons and they were always on friendly terms. Wilson gave them the lumber to build the barn. They paid him $10 for it. They never had any trouble until the night of June 4th.

OWEN SOUND PAIR WERE CAPTURED

Woman Left Four Children and Departed With Boarder.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—Rather surprised were Mrs. Lavina Lockhardt, 35 years old, and William Moden, 30 both of Owen Sound, when Detectives Archibald and Tipton boarded a C.P.R. train at North Parkdale station and took the pair into custody.

The local police acted on receipt of a wire from Owen Sound, saying that the pair had eloped.

Moden has been a boarder in the Lockhardt home. Yesterday morning, it is alleged, a quarrel occurred between the married couple and Lockhardt told his wife to get out. She did, and Moden went with her, the woman leaving four young children. Moden went back to the house to get some clothing for rs. Lockhardt and is charged with theft on that account. The pair were arranged in the Police Court this morning and were remanded until to-morrow.

Letters to The Editor

A Letter From Rev. Father McColl.

To the editor of The Times,—

Dear Sir,—The following quotation is taken from a report of my speech at a meeting of our Ladies' Literary Society, December 2nd:

"There was a very forcible sentence in Miss Holland's address. She told them the voice of the people was not always the voice of God. This was undoubtedly true, and of democracy she combatted—the democracy that made man omnipotent, and that set human law above divine, the democracy that was without God and without any reference to God or eternal justice. Such a democracy was a tyranny. There was a something superior to the will of the people—a something that was superior to all rulers and all law. That was the law of Eternal Right and Justice. The temporal power is not excused from the observance of this law, and a Christian State should be governed by religion, that is, it should be guided and influenced by the Divine Ideal of Right and Wrong."

When referring to the right kind of democracy I had in mind the democracy of Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States, in all of which we have governments influenced by Christian principles, or the divine ideal of right and wrong. By the wrong kind of democracy, I meant anarchists and the red republicans of some European countries who are atheists.

Mr. Burnham disagrees with my statements, and must therefore claim that the temporal order is independent of the law of God, and hence of God himself. According to him God has no dominion over temporal rulers, be they kings or the sovereign people, no right to sit in judgment on them. Their sovereign will and pleasure is the only rule of right and wrong. What the prince or the sovereign people will, is right, what they forbid, is wrong. Here is absolute political atheism. Mr. Burnham's principles are atheistic. Is he then an atheist? Let the public judge. This, no doubt, explains why he heaps such abuse upon Christians—why he makes statements calumniating Catholics; why he makes false assertions attributing to people things they did not say, why he claims the right "to think as he pleases and to do as he sees fit," as we must conclude, irrespective of the laws of God or Christian Governments. Such principles are a menace to law and order, to the lives, property and reputation of citizens. Any person influenced by him is to be pitied.

BAD ACCIDENT.

Nine Year Old Girl Has Her Leg Broken.

While getting a ride on a woodsleigh on Concession street, Pearl Valois, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. Chas. Valois, East City, met with a very painful accident on Tuesday afternoon. In some manner she slipped and fell beneath the sleigh, the runners of which passed over her with the result that she sustained a fracture of the leg. She is resting as easily as could be expected under the circumstances.

MANY IMMIGRANTS ARE DISEASED

Forty-Nine Per Cent. of the Consumptives Come From Other Countries.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 14.—The Dominion Government was yesterday asked to adopt a method of inspecting immigrants coming to Canada more effective than that now in vogue by a Toronto deputation, introduced to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, by Mr. Claude Macdonald, M.P.

The spokesmen of the delegation were Mr. Edward Gurney, Mr. W. J. Gage, Mayor Geary, and ex-Mayor Joseph Oliver, of Toronto. They said that a great many immigrants suffering from tuberculosis were entering Canada. In fact, 44 per cent. of the consumptives undergoing treatment in free sanitoriums came from other lands, the majority from Great Britain and Russia.

Will Meet Premier and Members of Government.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—Much public interest is manifested in the arrival in the capital of the great delegation of farmers who are coming from Western Canada to present their views to the Government on the tariff, reciprocity and other public questions in which they are vitally interested. Tomorrow the delegation from the West will confer with a similar delegation representing the farmers of Ontario and the Eastern Provinces. The formal conference with the Premier and his cabinet is set for Friday. It is to take place in the chamber of the House of Commons and is expected to consume nearly the entire day.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

The 93rd Annual Meeting of the Shareholders.

The Bank of Montreal is to be congratulated on the excellent showing made in the annual report to the shareholders which was presented to them on the 6th inst.

After deducting all losses, making due provision for all bad or doubtful accounts and charges of management, the total net profits for the year ending October 31st, last, were $1,797,992.81.

Four quarterly dividends of 2½ per cent. each were paid and $355,000 was carried to the credit of the profit and loss account.

Since the last annual meeting, branches of the bank have been opened at Barton-Victoria Street, Hamilton, Pendleton, B.C., High River, Alta., Perth, N.B., and Prince Rupert, B.C. The branches at Warsaw, Ont., and Andover, N.B., have been closed.

The assets of the Bank of Montreal have now reached the enormous sum of nearly two hundred and forty millions of dollars and are in such excellent shape that the bank is at all times, and in any emergency, ready to meet any demands that can possibly be made on it.

The President, Mr. R. B. Angus, in his address alluded to the continued prosperity of the country and predicted that with reasonable conservatism displayed by merchants and manufacturers, that prosperity was likely to continue. He alluded to the great wealth to be obtained from the yet undeveloped resources of the country, and added that the continued large immigration from abroad not only adds actual money to the capital of the country, but by increasing the agricultural population, creates a basis for greater additions to the national wealth and commerce.

At the conclusion of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the management and the old board of directors was re-elected.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, the Right Honorable Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., was elected Honorary President, and Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., Vice President and General Manager.

MORE SURPRISES IN CHINA.

What is going on behind the scenes in China? Where are the traditions and cycles of Cathay? A few weeks ago the throne yielded to the senate's demandfor an acceleration of the constitutional programme. The date of the promised convocation of parliament was advanced materially, to the astonishment of Western observers, who had formed the idea that the senate was a timid, pliant, controlled body. Now, again at the demand of this senate, the throne grants a constitutional cabinet as a New Year gift and consents to the abolition of absolutism either in the emperor, the regent or any power behind him.

The strenuous, ambitious, insurgent senate could not get along with an irresponsible, mysterious grand council, and, lo, a ministry with a premier at its head—a ministry presumably in some sense responsible to that remarkable senate—is ordered into full life!

The senate would not be making demands and taking functions unto itself were it not backed by powerful influences and interests. The throne would not be so amiable and accommodating were there not real driving power behind the senate. What is going on in slow, sleepy, stagnant Cathay? Let Portugal, Turkey Russia and even tidy England take notice of the messages coming from Peking.

GROWING MORE FRIENDLY.

How completely the bitterness of past days has disappeared from the relations between Canada and the United States was singularly illustrated recently. In discussing the situation of Maine, which projects like a thumb into Eastern Canada, the Springfield Republican says that both that State and Vermont are really "tributary or a part of Eastern Canada," and the New York Sun debates the question of the acquisition of Maine by Canada in much the same manner that it might talk of the Union of Jersey City with New York.

THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY. . .

(CONLINUED.)

on three European acrobats doing some feats of balancing. A clown was cracking jokes in France, some nuns were singing dolefully, and a trio of girls, wearing the conventional gauze and spangles of circus riders, were standing near a couple of piebald ponies.

He and his men dashed in among the audience and the Goojers ran for dear life when they caught sight of a sahib at the head of an armed party. The performers and the nuns nearly died of fright, believing that their last hour had surely come. But they soon recovered from their fear only to collapse more completely from joy. A French circus, it appeared, had camped near a party of nuns in the village on the main road, and were captured there when the news came that the English were swept out of existence. Most fortunately for themselves the nuns were regarded as a part of the show, and the villagers, after robbing all of them, penned them in the mosque and made them give a nightly performance. There were five men and three women in th circus troupe, and among the four nuns was the grave reverend mother of a convent.

Malcolm brought them to the village and caused it to be made known that unless every article of value and every rupee in money stolen from these unfortunate people, together with a heavy fine, were brought to him by day break, he would not only fire each hut and destroy the standing crops, but he would also hang every adult male belonging to the place he could lay hands on.

These hereditary thieves could appreciate a man who spoke like that. They met him fairly and paid in full. When the convoy moved off, even that amazing suit of armor, which was used for the state entry of the circus into a town, was strapped on to the back of a trick pony.

The nuns, he ascertained, were coming from Fategarh to Umballa and they had met the great retinue of Nana Sahib below Aligarh. With him were two Europeans, a young lady and an elderly gentleman, but they were travelling so rapidly that it was impossible to learn who they were or whither they were going.

Here then, was really good news. Like every other Englishman in India Malcolm believed that the Mutiny was confined to a very small area of which his own station was the center. He thought that if Winifred and her uncle reached Cawnpore they would be quite safe.

He brightened up so thoroughly that he quite enjoyed a sharp fight next day when the budmashes of Bulandshahr regarded the straggling convoy as an easy prey.

There were three or four such affairs ere they reached Agra, and his Frenchmen proved themselves to be soldiers as well as acrobats. On the evening of the 2nd of June he marched his cavalcade into the splendid fortress immortalized by its marble memorials of the great days of the Mogul empire.

The fact that a young subaltern had brought a convoy from Meerut was seized on by the weak and amiable John Colvin, Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces, as a convincing proof of his theory that the bulk of the native army might be trusted, and that order would soon be restored. Each day he was sending serenely confident telegrams to Calcutta and receiving equally reassuring ones from a fatuous Viceroy. It was with the utmost difficulty that his wiser subordinates got him to disarm the sepoy regiments in Afra itself. He vehemently assured the Viceroy that the worst days of the outbreak were over and issued a proclamation offering forgiveness to all mutineers who gave up their arms, "except those who had instigated others to revolt, or had taken part in the murder of Europeans."

Such a man was sure to regard Malcolm's bold journey from the wrong point of view. So delighted was he that he gave the sowars two months' pay, lauded Malcolm in the Gazette, and forthwith despatched him on a special mission to General Sir Hugh Wheeler at Cawnpore, to whom he recommended Frank for promotion and appointment as aide-de-camp.

This curious sequence of events led to Malcolm's following Winifred Maoyne along the road she had taken exactly three weeks earlier. The route to Cawnpore lay through Etawah, a place where revolt had already broken out, but which had been evacuated by the mutineers, who, like those at Aligarh, Bulandshahr, Mainpuri, Meerut, and a score of other towns, ran off to Delhi after butchering all the Europeans within range.

With a small escort of six troopers, his servant, and two pack-horses, he travelled fast. As night was falling on June 4th, he re-entered the Grand Trunk Road some three miles north of Bithoor, where, all unknown to him, Nana Sahib's splendid palace stood on the banks of the Ganges.

It was his prudent habit to halt in small villages only. Towns might be traversed quickly without much risk, as even the tiniest display of force insured safety, but it was wise not to permit the size of his escort to be noted at leisure, when a surprise attack might be made in the darkness.

Therefore, expecting to arrive at Cawnpore early next day, he elected not to push on to Bithoor, and proposed to pass the night under the branches of a great pipal tree. Churru, his Mohammedan bearer, was a good cook, in addition to his many other acquirements. Having purchased or made his master pay for, which is not always the same thing in India, a small kid (by which please understand a young goat) in the village, he lit a fire, slew the kid, to the accompaniment of an appropriate verse in the Koran and compounded an excellent stew.

A native woman brought some chupatties and milk, and Malcolm, being sharp set with hunger, ate as a man can only eat when he is young and it all day.

He had a cigar left, too, and he was searching his pockets for a piece of paper to light it when he brought forth that Persi-Arabic letter which reached him at the close of the second battle of Ghasi-ud-din Nuggur.

He was on the point of rolling it into a spill, but some subtle influence stopped him. He rose, walked to Churru's fire, and lit the cigar with a burn

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Nictoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

BRINGING UP TWO MOOSE

Mr. Samuel Webber, an English gamekeeper, who was for some years in the service of the Duke of Northumberland, and is now in charge of a lumber depot at Beauchine, near Mattawa, on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River, tells, in Rod and Gun, a most interesting story of the rescue and bringing up of two young moose—a bull and a heifer.

The animals were found fast in a log jam, and as they were emaciated and apparently deserted by their mother, it seemed clear that they had been in a dangerous position for some time. When brought to land they could not walk and were left on the banks of the river for some time in the hope that the mother would respond to their calls and return to them. As, however, this did not happen, Mr. Webber gave them some cow's milk, which they drank greedily, and placed them in a stable. Under such kindly care they soon recovered and thrived apace. When allowed out they continued tame, and though wandering a little distance to feed they returned for thir drink of milk both night and morning. Whenever they caught sight of their rescuer they followed him like dogs, and in one instance such attention and demonstration of good will appeared dangerous.

Fishing from a canoe in the river one evening, Mr. Webber was astonished to see one of the moose close to him, swimming strongly and with the evident determination of getting into the canoe with him. For some minutes he had an anxious time, but finally succeeded in eluding the unwelcome attention of his pet, and giving up fishing, returned to land in order that he might escape such companionship in a frail canoe.

The moose were offered to Messrs Holt, Renfrew & Co. for their wild animal enclosure at Montmorency Falls, but the members of the firm stated that they hadn't been able to rear moose and they were afraid a train journey would kill the animals. Mr. Webber also received a permit from the Minister allowing him to keep the moose.

From his experience Mr. Webber argues that moose can only be reared under certain conditions He has no doubt he could keep them in the bush as long as he wishes by allowing them to roam about so that they may get weeds and vegetation from the river bed. With lakes and rivers containing vegetable matter suitable for them the moose will live and thrive. He is doubtful, however, of their existence in a park unless it is a large one with plenty of water.

PAT ON BAPTISM

Pat who was noted for a quick tongue was digging potatoes when the parish priest came by. By way of a pleasant salutation the priest said:

"Good mornin' to ye, Pat, an' what kind of p'tatoes are ye diggin'?"

"Raw ones, your riv'rince."

"Och, ye're so smart. I'll just give you a question on the catechism. What is baptism?"

"It used to be four shillin's afore you came, but now it's twinty shillin's."

SAVAGE VS. CIVILIZED

Investigation Disproves Notion That White Man's Eyes are Poor

How often is it stated that the development of civilization has robbed the race of many of the keen senses which are popularly ascribed to the savage. He, it is said, has extraordinary vision, hearing, and sense of smell, powers whose keenness has through ages of disuse, long since disappeared among modern men.

The popular notion that the man of primitive instincts possesses such wonderful senses has been altogether exploded as the result of recent research. Natives of Brazil, a race credited with many remarkable feats of vision, have been subjected to a series of tests, and it has been found that their ability to discern the position of a letter or similar object at a distance though good, was not extraordinary but fell within the range of European powers. The steppe-dwelling Kalmuks, also renowned for distant vision, being able to detect the dust of a herd of cattle at a greater distance with the naked eye than a European could with a telescope, have also been examined; and their acuity was indeed found to be very high, averaging considerably above that of Europeans; yet only one or two out of the forty individuals tested exceeded the European record, while the greater majority fell within the range of good European eyes. Much the same result has been obtained from Arabs, Egyptians and quite a variety of peoples. Among the most reliable results are those of Rivers on a wholly unselected Papuan population. He found no very exceptional individuals among 115 tested yet the average was somewhat better than that of Europeans.

55 SHAVES IN 30 MINUTES

Most of the Men had Both Upper and Lower Lips Cleaned

Endeavoring to beat the world's "shaving record," seventy-one men in an hour, Mr. Ted Grimes, a barber of Broken Hill, New South Wales, succeeded in shaving fifty-five men in thirty minutes. The experiment thereof, writes an Australian correspondent, simply owing to the failure in the supply of unshaved men. Most of the fifty-five men had both upper lip and chin shaved. Subsequently a man was shaved as he was swinging Indian clubs on the stage.

BIRD THAT NEVER FLIES

Some Interesting Facts About the Swift-footed Ostrich

The ostrich, because of its resemblance to the camel, has been said to be the connecting link between the beasts and the birds. There is a curious excrescence on the breast of both the dromedary and the ostrich, on which they lean while resting; they have similarly formed feet; the same muscular neck; their food is much the same, and both can go an incredibly long time without water.

Moreover, an ostrich never flies, nor is it possible for it to lift itself from the ground in the slightest degree by the use of its wings; but, like the camel, it is very swift-footed. In its native country the shells of the eggs afford almost the only household utensils used. An egg will weigh from three to four pounds, and is equal to two dozen hen's eggs. It requires thirty-five minutes to boil one, and longer if required hard. A fresh egg is worth twenty-five dollars.

The keeper of an ostrich farm says the birds are the only thing he ever tried that he has not succeeded in taming. They are known to live to be seventy-five years old, and some think they will reach a hundred. They are about eight feet in height. Their hearing and sight are very acute, and these seem to be about all the sense they are blessed with. Their legs are very powerful, and are the only weapon of defence; when they attack an enemy they do so by kicking, but always strike forward and never backward.

The choice "ostrich feathers" are found only in the wings; the undressed feathers vary in price, having been as low as twenty-five dollars per pound and as high as three hundred dollars, and there are from seventy to ninety feathers in a poung. A single bird rarely furnishes more than a dozen fine feathers, and the birds, themselves, if fine ones, are valued at one thousand dollars per pair—Our Dumb Animals.

THE ANGORA INDUSTRY

F. P. Fletcher Will Raise Goats in Alberta Province

Fergus P. Fletcher, Alberta, is bringing the nucleus of a herd of Angoras from Montana. "There are many people in Alberta who regard the Angora as a beast with great possibilities in this country," he said, "and I am one of them. They are not only invaluable for clearing scrubby country, but they can be run with great profit on any piece of poor land. I have seen a herd of goats put on land that was absolutely useless, and they have improved it that much that it is now well prepared for other stock or grain growing; there has been an ever increasing demand for this in the past few years, and the prices realized in London England, during the years from 1905 to 1910 have been very gratifying. And there is no fear of an over production. The Angora industry is only in its infancy, but it is full of great possibilities, and when the general public become educated to eat goats' flesh the industry will grow fast. In all the big restaurants of Europe, England and the United States, the flesh of the Angora is deemed a great delicacy, and the demand for it is increasing all the time."

Mr. Fletcher expects to pass through the city again in about ten days with forty goats with which to start his herd.

OATS FIVE FEET HIGH

Mr. Alf. Cooper brought in some oats from his farm in Neebing township, near Fort William. The oats, which are green, stand five feet high and are well headed out with full kernels of grain. Six weeks ago he thought of ploughing it down as useless, but since then it has grown to its present size. He has thirty acres of such oats and his wheat is equally good.

SCIENTIFIC MATING

Millionaire Wants Yale to Teach Doctrine of Race Culture

New York, Aug. 20.—The time has come in the opinion of W. E. D. Stokes when the science of eugenics should be taught at Yale. In a letter to President Hadley, the millionaire suggests that study of race culture and the application of its principles to marriage will lead to the physical and moral betterment of the human race. Mr. Stokes submits that by scientific methods the value of horses, cattle and poultry has increased. Then why not, he argues, try to improve humanity through similar knowledge? He predicts the day when it will be a public disgrace to be the parents of any but healthy, intelligent, well formed children.

IMPROVING POULTRY

Beaverton Farmers Are Putting Brain into the Industry

Mr. J. Hare, Whitby, has been for the past six weeks devoting his time to the organization of "Co-operative Poultry Circles" in the vicinity of Beaverton. He reports marked success in this new line of effort. One organization, he states, is composed of over forty farmers, who have been receiving since organization three or four cents per dozen more for their eggs than the prevailing market prices. Live poultry is also handled through the organization. This movement is active in other parts of the Province, and undoubtedly promises to very greatly improve the present deplorable condition of the poultry industry.

The total net profits for the whole system showed a decrease of £11,300.

CHRISTMAS ROSES

"Canada is a potential Europe." The speaker was Miss Agnes Deans Cameron, an intrepid Canadian, who, accompanied by her niece, Miss Cameron Brown, made, eighteen months ago, a remarkable journey of over 20,000 miles, right to the edge of the Arctic Ocean and to points where the foot of white woman had not before trod. Miss Cameron has been in London on behalf of the Canadian Government. To a representative of "The Chronicle" she talked of many Canadian things.

At an early age she began teaching on Vancouver Island, but, disagreeing with the board of management, was discharged. Within a fortnight she had been elected a member of the board which had discharged her!

From relating the experience of public life Miss Cameron passed, by a natural transition, to talk of the woman's suffrage question.

"Do I believe in woman's right to the franchise? Why not? In Canada woman is as much a factor in the country's development and destiny as the man is, and has it in her power to do as much as the man to lay the foundation of a strong commonwealth on same lines. We have been taught all our lives that the sins of the fathers follow to the third and fourth generation; is it not reasonable to suppose that the virtues of the mothers do sometimes descend in direct line?"

The Size of Canada

When speaking of her native British Columbia she is most enthusiastic.

"The average Englishman," she said, "has but an inadequate idea of the size of Canada. British Columbia is large enough for us to place within it side by side at the same time two Englands, three Irelands, and four Scotlands, and, when you have these nine countries within the borders of this one province, there is no danger of their dropping out again or spilling themselves into the Pacific Ocean, for we still have 5,000 square miles uncovered."

The immense possibilities suggested by this statement of fact led naturally to some questions about Miss Cameron's record journey to the Arctic Ocean. Following the mighty waterways of the Athabasca River, Athabasca Lake, Slave River, Great Slave Lake, and the mighty Mackenzie, the explorer and her plucky young companion returned to civilization by the Peace River and the Lesser Slave River. The journey occupied six months, and was full of exciting and interesting experiences. At the Fond du Lac extremity of Athabasca Lake, and again at Old Fort Rae, on the north shore of the Great Slave Lake, the explorers touched points where white women had never been before. At the very edge of the Arctic Ocean Miss Cameron made an intimate study of two tribes of Eskimos of magnificent physique.

Roses at Christmas

As for the agricultural possibilities of these far northern regions, the explorer said: "The wheat that took the highest prize in the World's Fair at Philadelphia was grown in the little garden of the Grey Nuns at Fort Chipewyan on Lake Athabasca in about the same latitude as the Orkney Islands. At Fort Vermilion on the Peace River in the same latitude the Hudson Bay Company maintain a flour mill. Yellow harvests mature at a point 100 miles due north of any existing railway. I found the blue flowers of the cornflower at Fort Good Hope on the Arctic Circle, and at the delta of the Mackenzie, on the very edge of the Arctic Ocean, the air was heavy with the perfume of wild roses.

"In my native city of Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, it is no unusual thing to pluck roses in the open air at Christmas time. The Japan current is kind to us, ensuring for all south of Vancouver Island the most equable climate in the world. Our present Queen, on passing through Victoria on her Empire-circling tour, declared it to be the most English city outside of England. Indeed, the whole of British Columbia appeals particularly to English folk as being very much like home."

Gold Rush Prospects

Stewart brothers were the original locators of the town site of Stewart, and are still the heaviest owners of realty there.

Of the gold rush to that locality Miss Cameron said: "The mining is not 'poorman's', or placer mining. The ore is a free milling ore. There is no doubt about that. Mr. D. D. Mann, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway, who probably knows more about the Portland Canal country than anyone else, is reported from Montreal as stating that the ore is straight free-milling ore. Portland Canal is without doubt the most profitable gold-field on the map to-day.

"The fact which English people have not yet grasped is that the Portland Canal mines are not a thing of to-day or of yesterday; they have been established and have been producing for over four years. The strike which we have recently heard of is a very rich one indeed, but it is neither the first, nor will it be the last, to be chronicled on Portland Canal."

THE WORLD'S SHEEP FLOCKS

Australia leads the world in sheep farming, according to the following statement prepared by Vice Consul Henry D. Baker of Sydney, showing the number of sheep in the countries leading in this industry: Australia, 87,043,266; Argentina, 77,581,100; Russia, 58,510,523; United States, 54,631,000; United Kingdom, 30,011,833; New Zealand, 22,149,053; India, 18,029,181; France, 17,461,379; Spain, 16,119,051; Cape of Good Hope, 14,848,795; Uruguay, 13,916,796; Italy, 10,877,000; Austria-Hungary, 10,742,707. The estimated capital value of the Australian flocks is $220,352,000, and the annual gross output of the flocks is estimated at 75 per cent. of the value.

SUSPICIOUS

"Let me show you 'Love Letters of Wise Men,'" said the clerk in the book emporium.

"Are they signed?" asked the cautious bookworm.

"Then they must be forgeries. Wise men never sign their names to love letters."

WOMEN MAKE GOOD WAGES

Sixty women have gone from Spokane to Walla Walla to pick prunes, and they are making as high as $3.50 a day at the work. The crop this year is heavy, and stewed prunes promises to be a popular article of diet in many boarding houses next winter.

CRICKET PLAYER DEAD

George Palmer, One of Australia's Greatest Bowlers

The death has taken place in Australia of George Palmer, who was one of the finest Colonial bowlers ever seen on a cricket field. He came to England with the 1880 team, and was here also in 1882, 1884, and 1886. Born on February 22, 1861, he was in his fiftieth year. No bowler ever won fame at an earlier age. As a lad of eighteen he met with marked success for Victoria against Lord Harris' eleven at Melbourne, and was soon regarded as second only to Spofforth during his first three visits to England he was a great bowler, but in 1886, having in the meantime come on very much as a batsman, he was right up to his previous standard. At his best he had nearly every good point that a bowler of his style could possess. His delivery was the easiest and most natural that can be recalled. It seemed part of himself and he had in combination with remarkable spin a good variety of pace. No one ever bowled a better "worker" In addition to his other gifts he had more telling leg break than any bowler of his speed. Looking back upon his career in England as a whole, he must be placed with Spofford and Charles Turner. Many famous batsmen have declared that they never met a bowler who could be more difficult on a perfect wicket, his resources being so varied. For the great year of 1882 he took 138 wickets, and 1884 132 wickets.

ALL NIGHT IN A BOG

Story of a Brutal Attack on an Irish Farmer

The Killarney police are scouring the district in search of the perpetrators of an outrage on a farmer named John Clifford, of Glencar. The latter had cattle grazing on an evicted farm. Failing to dispose of them at Killorglin Fair, he sent a man named Rahilly to drive them back. Rahilly was attacked by three men, and was so terrified that he ran away, leaving the cattle on the roadside, but reported what had occurred to the owner, who at once went in search of his cattle. Observing them in a field he entered with the object of driving them home. He was driven out by the men, one of whom brandished a revolver in his face and threatened to shoot him. Clifford sought refuge in a public house, where a large crowd collected and denounced him for grazing his cattle on an evicted farm. After some time the crowd got him out of the house, and knocking him down savagely maltreated him, and left him on the roadside. The unfortunate man, fearing further molestation, hid all night in a bog. In the morning he struggled to the house of a man named Teahan, Castlemaine, where his wounds were attended to. Later on he again entered the field where his cattle were to take them home. He was attacked by seven men, who knocked him down and gave him another beating. His pockets were rifled, and $5.50, all the money in his possession, was taken from him. Ultimately he managed to get his eight head of cattle, and drive them to Killorglin. His assailants were strangers to him.

SHOWER OF FROGS

Came by Thunderstorm and Cried Like Rabbits

After a violent thunderstorm Mr Jack Ayre, Devonshire, found a long stretch of road covered with thousands of frogs, which, it is declared, "cried like rabbits." Mr. Ayre expresses the opinion that the frogs came down from the sky, and he is supported in his view by another resident of the district, who has had experience of monsoons abroad.

This expert says that in the stillness which precedes monsoons in tropical regions all sorts of creeping things come out of their hiding places and croak. They are often carried up into the air by whirlwinds, and when the monsoon breaks down they come again.

It was midnight when Mr. Ayre made his discovery. In the morning there were still a number of frogs left, but many were dead. On the other hand it is suggested that the frogs may have been washed out of a wood by the heavy rains.

A GILBERT WHITE STORY

Thomas Hoar, the devoted servant upon whom Gilbert White, the naturalist, depended to carry out his garden plans and to look after his comfort in many ways, was noted for his exactness. H. C. Shelley, in "Gilbert White and Selbourne," gives an amusing illustration:—

There was one occasion when Thomas came to report, "Please, sir, I've been and broke a glass."

"Broke a glass, Thomas! How did you do that?"

"I'll show you, sir," he rejoined, as he disappeared for a moment. Returning with a glass in his hand, he let it fall on the floor, remarking:

"That's how I broke it, sir."

"There, go along, Thomas; you are a great goose," said his master, adding to himself, "and I was as great a one for asking such a foolish question."—Youth's Companion.

WATCHMAN'S TERRIBLE DEATH

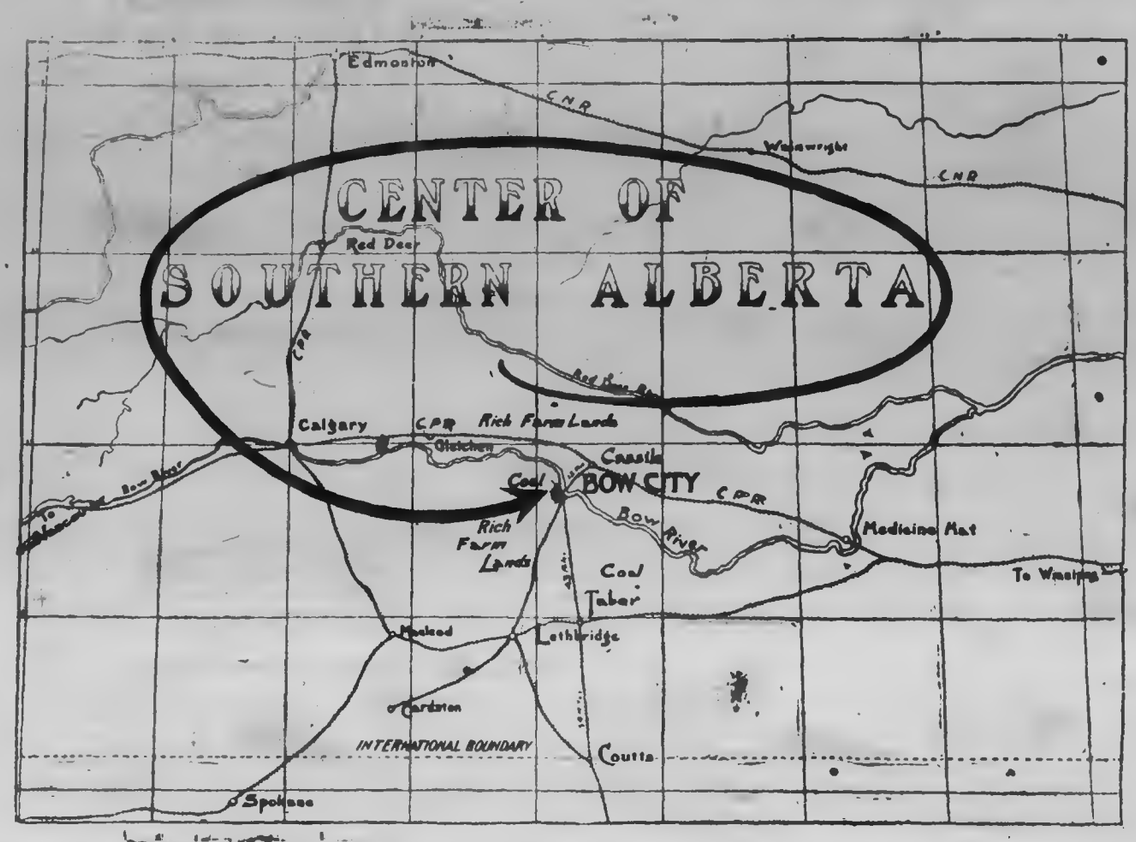
A fatal explosion, the cause of which is a mystery, occurred at the Prospect Mills of Messrs. Joseph Hoyle and Son, woollen manufacturers, Longwood, England. An engine tender, named Bray, had arrived at midnight to see that all was right with the boilers, when there was a terrific explosion and Bray had to flee from steam and boiling water. An investigation disclosed the dead body of the night watchman Heeley, terribly scalded, one of the coupling pipes of the boiler having burst.

WONDERFUL DOLL'S HOUSE.

An exquisite collection of miniature furniture, ornaments, china, and plate, collected by Lady Muriel Herbert, was on view at a doll's bazaar held at Lansdowne House, London.

The collection was made by Lady Muriel Herbert for her model doll's house, which was opened two years ago by Queen Alexandra. The house, which is seven feet high and five feet wide, has fifteen rooms, all luxuriously decorated. One is a banqueting hall, with marble pillars. There are several pictures and objects of art of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries, a library of tiny books, the smallest measuring 4½in., and a visitors' book an inch square containing the signatures of King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"



If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Alberta has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

"The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your apulication by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

TRAVELLING PUBLIC PAY.

Large interests, probably either C.P.R. or Canadian Northern, are reported to have recently purchased property just north of the C.P.R. right-of-way in North Toronto worth $500,000. The prices paid are reported as being in many cases more than double the previously estimated value of the property.

This means an extra $250,000 or probably $500,000, when the rest of the property is secured, of extra capital on which the public will have to pay dividends.

We believe that folks who have no desire to move or sell should receive some compensation for their trouble, but isn't 100 per cent. pretty high, especially when the public have to pay it?

The man who lives in a rented house, by the way, receives notice to quit, has all the trouble, and the owner receives the compensation.

Why not have a law fixing the purchase price for expropriation at, say 120 per cent. of assessed value? This would give ample compensation, save the public millions of dollars, and at the same time induce property owners to see that their property was assessed at its fair value, neither too high for fear of taxes, nor too low for fear of expropriation.

THE CANADIAN SENATE.

The Canadian Senate is continually furnishing arguments for its own abolition. One of the latest of these has to do with certain of its officials whom it insists upon bonusing. The auditor-general, in his report for the year ended on March 31, 1910, refers to the situation with disproval. He notes that he pointed out during the previous year that these employees were not classified in accordance with the Civil Service Act, and that the Department of Justice sustained his contention. He says:

"The effect of the classification was to give them salaries in excess of what they were legally entitled to. I requested the clerk of the Commons to have this excess refunded, or have it legally authorized by Parliament. This has not been done. I requested the clerk of the Senate to refrain from going his letter of credit for these excessive payments, but he was ordered by a resolution of the Senate to make the payments, as well as certain bonuses to which I have taken exception as being contrary to the provisions of the Civil Service Act."

In a letter to the Hon. Mr. Fielding, the auditor general makes the following further explanation:

"I asked the clerk of the Senate to refrain from making any increased payments to these persons. The Senate also proposed to grant certain sums to some of the officials. I took objection also to the payment of these as illegal. The Committee on Internal Economy and Contingent Accounts then recommended the adoption of a resolution authorizing the clerk to sign and issue checks for the proposed increases although they had been declared illegal by the Department of Justice. The Senate adopted the resolution. The clerk is now in the position of being ordered to make illegal payments, and, if he refuses, will be considered as being guilty of a serious breach of duty."

As the auditor says, "The situation at present is very unsatisfactory. The staff of the Senate is under the Civil Service Act. The Senate was a party to the passing of this act, and now declines to be governed by its provisions. If they can override the law in this instance, then they can pay whatever salaries they please to the staff, and expend their appropriations in any manner, legal, or otherwise, as they see fit. As they must have a credit for the payment of their accounts, I am unable to prevent illegal paytments. I can only object, but my objections are unheeded."

The auditor's suggestion is that "the Act should either be amended or its provisions complied with." A better solution would be to amend the Senate—or abolish it altogether.

E. S. CLOUSTON, General Manager.

Montreal, 31st October, 1910.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The President, Mr. R. B. Angus, then moved the adoption of the Report, seconded by the Vice-President, Sir Edward Clouston.

In moving the adoption of the report the President said:—

"With your permission, gentlemen, I move the adoption of the report just read.

"On this occasion we recall the fact that at last annual meeting of the shareholders the President was unable to attend, because of illness, which unfortunately, and to the great regret of his colleagues, resulted in his demise on the 2nd of February last. Sir George Drummond occupied a most distinguished position in the business community, and the shareholders of the Bank may well entertain a grateful appreciation of his services as President and of his work in the Senate, where his intelligent and patriotic efforts were largely devoted to the protection and development of the banking interests of the Dominion.

"To fill the vacancy created by the death of Sir George it was deemed advisable that I should, for a time, occupy the chair; and consequently I was elected to the Presidency on the 22nd of July,—while the directorate was at the same time strengthened by calling the Assistant General Manager, Mr. H. V Meredith, to a seat at the board. The expansion of business in recent years vindicates the expediency of this latter arrangement.

"The period under review has been marked by almost unbroken prosperity. The bounteous crops harvested during preceding years had raised the expectations of our farmers and excited the attention of intending immigrants, and although the bright prospects of the present season were somewhat dimmed by the excessive drought of June and July, causing partial failure of the wheat crop in some districts of the West, the actual result has proved more favourable than was then anticipated. The latest estimate of the harvest from Western grain fields, by parties well qualified to judge, gives a yield of which under the conditions existing may be regarded as fairly satisfactory.

98 million bushels of wheat
128 million bushels of oats
25 million bushels of barley & flax

"We are naturally most interested in the outcome of the ground and rapidly-growing country, for to it belongs the future. Still it may be long before it overtakes the productiveness and wealth of the older provinces, which in their undeveloped resources, timber, minerals and arable lands, afford abundant opportunities for expansion and settlement.

"On the first intimation of injury to the growing crops in the West the confidence of eastern merchants and manufacturers was somewhat shaken but the curtailment of business activity which followed was only temporary in its character and soon gave way before more hopeful indications. Business quickly revived and has continued good throughout the year.

"One notable feature may be remarked, that the Western people, farmers and settlers and tradesmen, shewed little sign of depression under the circumstances. The unusually dry season might serve as a warning to more careful tillage of the soil, but could not disturb the prevailing hopefulness and contentment. The agricultural results in the Eastern Provinces of the Dominion were upon the whole quite gratifying.

"Immigration from Europe and the United States of America was on an extensive scale, no less than 300,000 to 350,000 being the estimated number of arrivals during the season, enriching the country by valuable contributions in property and money and still more by additions to the agricultural population. Such an unprecedented influx of new settlers to a comparatively small community, many of them experienced farmers, could not fail to have a stimulating effect upon all the commercial interests of the country. The extraordinary expenditures on railway construction and other public works also largely contributed to this result. The rapid growth of all industrial enterprises no less than the great and profitable expansion of agricultural operations, together with the opportunity of acquiring unoccupied land, render Canada a popular field for the employment of European capital. Important transfers of money to this country are of daily occurrences and especially from England, where political and financial unrest has induced many people to seek new avenues for investment.

"Contributions through the Stock Exchanges and money markets of Europe to the financial enterprises of Canada have been extremely generous of late, and it is eminently desirable that the confidence thus displayed should not be abused. Some offerings have been made, it is feared, by over sanguine promotors whose statements it would be hard to justify, and in relation to schemes where the advantages to buyers are not quite apparent. It might be well to consider that, while money seeking investment is much more abundant in some countries than it is with us, there is seldom much lack of capital here for participation in enterprises that are unquestionably sound. Our friends abroad might reflect that a home market, especially in the case of industrial securities, will generally furnish some indications of value.

"In the earnings of the Railways, the output of factories and the large volume of commercial transactions there is evidence on every hand of widespread and almost universal prosperity throughout the land. The statement of the Bank's affairs now submitted shows that this Institution has participated to a considerable extent in these advantages: the net profits have been fair, about the same as last year and would have been more ample had not the Bank met an unfortunate complication through the error of an agent and the failure of a foreign bank. The earlier rumors concerning this matter were much exaggerated and to the best of our knowledge the ultimate loss has been fully provided for.

"I leave the General Manager to comment upon the Annual Exhibit and the more technical aspects of the situation but may here state that the Accounts, Cash and Securities of the Bank have been examined and verified by the Inspecting Officers and by Committees of the Board. The organization of the Bank is believed to be in excellent condition, and as is customary in this Institution, the reserves have been maintained at a very high standard of safety.

"In reference to a question that has exercised the minds of some of our friends, who marvel that the Bank premises account remains at the comparatively modest figure of $600,000 while the known expenditure under that head have of late years been unusually large; the fact is, as stated, the explanation being that the Directors have been indisposed to burden their assets with any large item that could not be promptly converted into cash, and they have consequently charged directly against revenue the entire expenditure connected with the Building extension and maintenance of the Bank's premises: these amounts have been considerable owing to the necessity of opening branch offices in new settlements and enlarging facilities at important centres where business has outgrown the existing accommodation

"The Directors are, however, of opinion that the call for extraordinary outlays of this nature has almost passed and that such charges will hereafter cease or greatly diminish

"It is unnecessary that I should attempt to give a specific account of the various industries of the country, but in reference to the more important natural products it may be noted that the lumber business has been fairly good in the east, and unusually active on the Pacific Coast. Exports to the United Kingdom have not been as large as in former years, but have been offset by the greater home demand.

"The wood pulp mills have found a good market for their product, notwithstanding adverse duties in the United States.

"There has been a wholesale falling off in the export of produce from this port during the past season of navigation, owing partly to decreased production, and also largely to increased home consumption.

"A marked decline in the exports of live stock, which was observable during the last few years, and was probably to be accounted for by the requirements of new and expanding settlements and the home consumption of a growing population, seems now to be checked. It was natural to suppose that in view of our unequalled facilities for cattle raising the condition would only be temporary, and it is gratifying to find a change for the better has set in—the shipments, especially from the West, having largely increased

A true index to the rapidly increasing trade of the country may be found in the combined imports and exports of the past fiscal year, which amounted to the big total of $693,211,221, as compared with $571,268,767, showing an increase of $121,945,454 over the previous year.

It is to be noted, however, that the excess of imports over exports is increasing: the Government revenues are buoyant, but Canada's borrowings from Europe are very large, and will doubtless continue so, while expenditures for railway building, the improvement of navigation and for the legitimate needs of growing municipalities are maintained on the present extensive scale.

With regard to trade, the wholesale dry goods houses report that business during the past year has been exceedingly good, and payments have shown a fair average, while failures have been rare. The same remark applies to groceries, iron and hardware trade, leatheri boots and shoes, and other branches.

"I am aware these are but running comments, and to give any adequate description of the season's results would call for a review from the Atlantic to the Pacific. With our partial shortage of crops in the Western Provinces, we have one reassuring view exemplified this season, namely, that with the newly developed territories, the field is now so extensive that what affects one part of the country adversely or otherwise, is unlikely to induce similar conditions elsewhere. Even the visitation of the drought was by no means uniform. The weater was so capricious that the injury from that source occurred in widely separated spots; and the result of the harvest although less than anticipated, was yet immense, considering the small population which has to share its benefits.

"We are, therefore, safe in saying that the country as a whole has undoubtedly experienced a fair degree of prosperity throughout the year and no doubt need be entertained as to its continued and rapid growth in wealth and population; if, however, we are to realize our best expectations, we must carefully avoid undue inflation. In some districts there has been excessive speculation in town and village properties, but the movement already shows signs of the movement already shows signt of languishing, while farm and fruit lands maintain their value or steadily appreciate.

"Money has been very abundant throughout the year, and from a lender's point of view the rates of interest, except for a brief period, have been abnormally low, thus rendering it difficult to employ our surplus funds to advantage in London or New York, where short or call loans are readily available. But this department of the subject will be left to the General Manager, Sir Edward Clouston, who seconds the adoption of the report."

The conclusion of the President's address was greeted with applause by the meeting.

SIR EDWARD CLOUSTON.

In seconding the adoption of the report, Sir Edward Clouston said:—In my address last year I made the remark that I should be very much disappointed if we did not make a better showing of profits during the year we have just passed through, and, though I did not say it, I had in my mind that I might be able to suggest to the Directors that it was time to do something for our shareholders in the way of a bonus. Unfortunately, my anticipations were not realized. Our profits show $28,000.00 less than last year.

The general statement, as you see by the copies you hold in your hands is a strong one and exhibits the steady progress the Bank is making. For the first time in our history our circulation exceeds our capital, as we were obliged to make use of the emergency circulation authorized by the Government.

Our Deposits have increased $18,000,000, but this does not fairly show the actual increase in our regular deposits, as last year we had some large special deposits which were withdrawn during the year. Our readily realizable assets, that is our Reserves, are about the same, though they show a slight decrease in percentage to our liabilities. The amount of money employed outside of Canada has been reduced $14,000,000. Fault has been found with us by critics who have not given sufficient consideration to the subject for keeping such large balances in other countries, but experience has taught us that it is not only safer for the Bank but for Canada, that we should hold large reserves which we can draw on in case of necessity without disturbing financial conditions in our own country. The important position of the Bank of Montreal in the financial fabric involves the keeping of a large portion of our assets in a form immediately available for conversion into cash. Our responsibilities in this respect force us to be content with a very low return on the money we lend on Call in London and New York, a return, which for long periods during the past year was little better than two per cent at either centre, and taxes to come out of that. It is not to be supposed that we would ignore the superior advantages of a 5 per cent Call rate in Canada, could we employ $10,000,000 or $20,000,000 here, with the certainty that we could get it, back on three hours' notice any day we wanted it.

Of the increase in our Investments, $5,000,000 is accounted for by the purchase of a Municipal issue which has been largely disposed of since the close of the Statement.

Our loans and advances have increased $21,000,000 and call for no special comment, except that they evidence that we are doing our share in assisting the development of our rapidly growing country.

The present Session of Parliament will see introduced legislation of importance to Bankers, at our Charters come up for the usual decennial renewal. Though the Bankers Association has not been taken into the confidence of the Government about any proposed alterations or amendments, I think it hardly likely that there will be any great change. The Act is a very good one as it stands, is thought well of by financial authorities in other countries, and answers admirably the requirements of our own. When trouble arises it is apt to be condemned by unthinking critics, but it is not the fault of the Act but of those who work under it, and no amount of legislation will gaurd against the fallibility of the personal factor and keep men from being fools or knaves.

The President has spoken on the general trade of the country, which may be characterized as satisfactory, with a promising outlook. There is possibly too much real estate speculation in some sections of the country, and Municipalities are borrowing rather heavily; the greater part of however, is quite legitimate, arising from the rapid growth of the newer cities and towns throughout the West.

To them flows the ever increasing tide of our immigration, which from the best figures at present available, will this year number over 300,000 souls. The quality of this immigration is admittedly high, and when one considers that it represents in a single year about 1-20 of the country's population, it is well that it is so. To this influx of population, as well as to the greatly increased prosperity of the people, is probably due the fact that while our production of such food-stuffs as butter, eggs, cheese, etc., has increased during the present twelve-month, the exports of these products have declined, indicating a large home consumption.

As regards the general prospect, in the older countries there seem to be at least enough pessimists to counter-balance the optimists. In Canada we have many of the latter, and few of the former,—too few, perhaps, at times, to sufficiently regulate our youthful exubrance it might be well to remember that the prosperity we have enjoyed may be largely due to a continuity of policy and a disposition to employ experience rather than theory as the basis for the conduct of our affairs. Such principles have made us self-reliant, and seem best calculated to ensure our future progress and permanent stability. (Applause).

THE DISCUSSION.

Mr. John Taylor then asked if he might be allowed to say a few words without moving an amendment. This was immediately granted by the Chairman.

Mr. Taylor—"I am sure, Mr. President, that we here are all delighted to see you sitting in your capacity as President of this Bank. Your name has been associated with the Bank of Montreal for very many years, and some of us remember the day when the Shareholders launched it on the road to prosperity. But although the Bank is still on the road to prosperity I am sorry to say that in my opinion, the Shareholders are not being taken into the confidence of the Directors as they should, and I do not think that they are being given as full information as they should demand.

"Something is said to-day regarding losses in Mexico. You, Mr. President, have given us some facts, but no figures. I contend that a bank's business is done in figures, and should be expressed in figures.

"And further there is the matter of Bank premises. All our Shareholders know that we want the best bank premises to carry on our business. But I have known banks to do enormous business in moderately expensive premises. I think the Directors of this Bank have gone out of all bounds in the money they have spent on bank premises. Such expense, it seems to me, was not needed for business, and this is above all a business concern."

The President—"If there are no further remarks I will reply to Mr. Taylor's enquiry.

"With regard to the Bank's premisses we have recently had prepared a careful estimate of the amount invested in bank premises, or rather of their present value, and find that the total amount would be somewhere between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000. But this extends over the whole Dominion. We have no less than 147 different buildings in that list, and while the shareholders might have had fuller particulars as to the progress of that account, enquiry at any time would have elicited the information we are now giving.

"Recently we have completed the erection of this building, for it was really re-constructed, I think very successfully, and we are putting up some other buildings. But I think that after this year there will be no further call for buildings of importance. The erection of branch offices throughout the country is likely to go on in a limited way, but the amount needed for that will not be large.

"With regard to losses, it has not been customary with this bank or any other bank in the Dominion or elsewhere to give an account of its losses, so long as the Shareholders were satisfied that from the profits of the bank the ultimate loss has been made good We have been unfortunate as I remarked in my address, this year is making a loss abroad, but that may be considered a past matter.

"If there is no further discussion, I will put the question for the adoption of the report."

The annual report was then unanimously adopted.

It was moved by Mr. H. Joseph, seconded by Mr. W. Stanway, that the thanks of the meeting be presented to the President, the Vice-President and Directors for their attention to the interests of the Bank.

This was unanimously adopted.

The President—Gentlemen, I thank you for this manifestation of your confidence On behalf of the President, Vice-President and Directors, I wish to thank you for the continued confidence you have displayed, and I hope that we shall have another prosperous year, and that whoever has the honor of occupying this chair during the coming twelve months will have a more satisfactory and prosperous year. (Applause).

Moved by Mr. C. R. Hosmer, seconded by Mr. A. Baumgarten, that the thanks of the meeting be given to the General Manager, the Assistant General Manager, the Inspectors, the Managers and other officers of the Bank, for their services during the past year.

This was unanimously adopted.

The General Manager, (Sir Edward Clouston)—On behalf of myself, the Assistant General Manager, and the other officers, I wish to thank you for this kind motion. I also have to thank the staff of the Bank for their great loyalty to the Bank and myself under very trying circumstances. (Applause).

Moved by Mr. H. Dobell, seconded by Mr. James Kirby, K.C., that the ballot now open for the election of Directors, be kept open until 2 o'clock unless fifteen minutes elapse without a vote being cast, when it shall be closed, and until that time, and for that purpose only, this meeting be continued.

The ballot for the election of Directors was then proceeded with, and without much delay the Scrutineers appointed for that purpose reported the following gentlemen duly elected, the old Board being re-elected:—

Messrs.—R. B. Angus, A. Baumgarten, Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., E. B. Greenshields, C. R. Hosmer, Sir William C. Macdonald, Hon. Robert Mackay, H. V. Meredith, D. Morrice, James Ross, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O., Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

At a meeting of the Directors held later the Right Honorable Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., was elected Honorary President of the Bank, Mr. R. B. Angus, President, and Sir Edward Clouston, Bart., Vice-President.

A MODERN CRUSOE

Three Years With "Friday" On An Uninhabited Island

The romance of a modern Robinson Crusoe and the Southern Seas was heard by the President, Sir Samuel Evans, who was asked to presume the death of one John Willis Kirkaldy as having occurred in or since the year 1895. Mr. Powers said that Mr. Kirkaldy emigrated to the South Seas in 1885, and had no fixed abode. He traded in New Zealand and the Pacific Islands, and corresponded regularly with his mother and sister until 1892. In that year he was shipwrecked on an unnamed and uninhabited island of the Solomon group, where he remained much like Robinson Crusoe, for three years, when he was rescued by a chance vessel calling at the island for water.

His lordship.—Was there a "Man Friday"? (Laughter.)

Counsel.—Yes, in the shape of a gentleman named Van Brun, of whom, however, nothing is known. After they were taken off the uninhabited island, continued counsel, the two went to New Zealand, when the correspondence between Mrs Kirkaldy and his family at home was resumed. He appeared to have suffered from ague contracted on the island, and from Auckland, New Zealand, where he was staying, he wrote saying: "I am a mere wreck of myself." From the Royal Hotel, Sydney, New South Wales, Mr. Kirkaldy wrote saying that he was very ill, and that he had arranged to return to "Man Friday" (Mr. Van Brun), who was in New Zealand, and afterwards was going on "a big trading" in the Solomon Islands. Several letters were subsequently written to Mr. Kirkaldy which came back through the Dead-Letter Office, and he had not since been heard of.

His lordship.—He does not seem to have found "Friday" on the uninhabited island. "Friday" seems to have gone with him.

Mr. Powers.—Yes, they were wrecked together.

Replying to a letter which the mother wrote to him, Mr. Kirkaldy said: "You say, 'Do settle down; you have roamed enough.' But what inducement have I, a lonely man without ties of any description?"

His lordship.—I see he caught turtles on this unnamed island which he says was about 50 acres in extent. He appears to have described the aguo, but unfortunately not the island, which would be more interesting.

Leave was granted to presume the death as in or since 1895.

TOO WONDERFUL WHISKEY

A Remarkable Description of the Welsh Brand

Mr. Lloyd-George informed the House of Commons that the only distillery set up in Wales has been closed, which from the poetical point of view only is a matter of regret "Some years ago," writes a correspondent, "I visited this establishment and found there quite a big brewing of the 'cratur,' or the Welsh equivalent for the same. But what amused me was a document I came across some time afterwards in which Welsh whiskey was lauded to the skies in the following terms:—"Welsh whiskey is the most wonderful whiskey that ever drove the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes in the brain of man. It is the mingled souls of peat and barley washed white with the waters of the Theweryn. In it you will find the sunshine and shadow that chased each other over the billowy fields, the breath of June, the carol of the lark, the dew of night, the wealth of Summer and Autumn, a rich content, all golden with imprisoned light."

MOVING A CHURCH TOWER

The remarkable feat of moving a church tower to permit of the church being enlarged is being accomplished in Belgium. The work is being done by two engineers, and the vast undertaking occupies only eight workmen. New foundations have been prepared for the tower about thirty feet away, and along the machinery constructed for its transport the tower, which dates from the fourteenth century and is said to weigh 2,700 tons, is now being moved. Already about 8 feet has been covered, and it is hoped that the tower will by the end of the week have reached its new site. Large crowds assemble each day to witness the singular spectacle.

DETRUCTIVE CATERPILLARS

A. C. Wood, Alexandria, brought to The Guardian office in Charlottetown two very large green caterpillars which he found on apple trees in his orchard. They were as thick as one's little finger, and measured from two and a half to three inches in length, green in color and, judging by the way they had feasted on apple tree leaves placed in the parcel for their benefit, of voracious appetite. The caterpillars proved to belong to the American Emperor Moth, a very large and destructive moth which devours many times its own weight in pear, apple and other fruit tree leaves, and should be destroyed wherever and whenever found.

PROFESSOR AND STUDENT

It is told of an English professor that he once wrote on the blackboard in his laboratory:

"Prof. Atherton is pleased to inform his students that he has this day been appointed honorary physician to her Majesty the Queen."

In the course of the morning he had occasion to leave the room, and found on his return that some student had considerately added to the announcement these words:

"God save the Queen!"

IN THE DARK

Diogenes returned from his search for an honest man.

"Given up the chase?" they inquired.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

VOL. XXXIII NO. 286 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO FRIDAY DECEMBER 16 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

Thinks All Eastern Canada will Become French in Language

Montreal, Dec. 14.—In fifteen years and before that time comes, the eastern provinces, Quebec, Ontario, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick will have become French in language and Roman Catholic in religion.

This is a reply Mr. Bourassa is said to have made to a remark by William Maxwell, the well-known war correspondent, that in a few years Quebec will not hold the balance of power in Canada. According to Maxwell, Bourassa's overpowering ambition is for a French enclave bolstered by the Monroe doctrine, and the rest of the confederation bowing at its doors, pleading for admission to the Atlantic coast. Reports say Bourassa is keeping well out of the public eye in Paris.

A LIVE ISSUE IN SASKATCHEWAN

Elevator Question a Live Issue in West.

Regina, Sask., Dec. 14.—The Saskatchewan legislature will convene today for its annual session, though no business is to be transacted until after the holidays, to which time an adjournment will be taken immediately after organization. Of the business to come before the session the most important is the proposed legislation dealing with the ownership and operation of the grain elevators of the Province. Both private and government ownership have been advocated, but the plan most likely of adoption is that recommended by the Elevator Commission, which provides a scheme for a co-operative company controlled by the grain growers and aided by the government.

POSTPONED TILL TUESDAY.

The meeting of the T.A.S. Ladies' Literary Society has been postponed until Tuesday, December 20th, so as not to clash with the Mount St. Joseph's Bazaar. This will be the last meeting for the year 1910, and as a finale the executive are giving the strongest programme so far. The star attraction will be Mr. W. J. Father Casey. In addition, the pupils of St. Peter's and St. Mary's will give appropriate choruses. It is unnecessary to bespeak a full house, as those who have attended previous meetings can testify.

NEW PROTESTANT HOUSE OF REFUGE.

Presentment by Grand Jury Returned at County Court Session.

Court House, House of Providence, Protestant Home, all in the city of Peterborough and the county House of Refuge at Lakefield. We recommend that a new floor be laid in a portion of the lower hall of the court house, and also that suitable matting be purchased and put down in the aisles of the court room.

In the jail we found everything in first-class condition, clean and tidy! There are several prisoners confined in the cells, all of whom appear to be in good health.

In one department there is an inmate, an elderly woman, who is insane, and we recommend that she be removed to a suitable institution, where she can be taken care of. In another department there are a number of elderly men who are confined there, not because they are criminals but on account of their age, and have nowhere else to go, and we strongly recommend that these inmates be removed to the House of Refuge or some other poorhouse, where they can be taken care of as they should be.

At the House of Providence we found everything in excellent condition, and must congratulate the Roman Catholics of the city and county on the manner in which they take care of their poor. At the Protestant Home we found the inmates all very comfortable and well fed and dressed, and although the building is very much out of date, it is well managed and taken care of. At the county house of Refuge we found about 30 inmates, most of whom are old and infirm, while some work with the farm work.

The inmates are well taken care of and treated kindly, and the building is in good repair! The stock kept on the farm is in first-class condition, and it is a credit to the manager, Mr. Beavis.

Signed on behalf of the Grand Jury.

T. F. DRUMMOND,
Foreman.

The passing of a law to permit the formation of co-operative societies;

The foregoing, in the opinion of the farmers' organizations, represents in a general way the chief points of the programme which the Government should adopt with a view to furthering the best interests of the several million persons engaged in the agricultural industry in Canada. The details of the programme are left to be worked out later, with such modifications relating to the tariff and trade preference as may be found necessary.

A policy of reciprocity in natural products and timber, and free trade in agricultural implements with the United States, would, it is urged, prove a great boon to the Canadian farmer, both as to buying and selling as it would enable him to get his implements and farm equipment cheaper, and to sell his wheat for more, as the Western farmers claim the prices of wheat in the Metropolis market range considerably higher than the price in Winnipeg.

In regard to the proposed Hudson Bay Railway, the farmers are emphatically in favor of Government construction, ownership and operation of the line, believing that private ownership would result in a monopoly that would be hurtful to the interests of the public.

The establishment of a chilled meat trade in Canada and the passing of a law to permit the formation of co-operative societies are matters that have long been advocated, particularly by the Western farmers, in the belief that the entire country would be greatly benefitted thereby.

The Western grain growers consider the demand that the terminal elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur, which form the outlet from the West to the seaboard by way of the great lakes, be taken over and conducted as a public utility, as one of the most important items of the entire programme. They allege that the present system of private ownership and operation constitutes a natural monopoly which has proven detrimental to the interests of the public, through the mixing of inferior grades of wheat with the better samples.

Professor Falconer Speaks At Canadian Club Dinner Last Night

DELIVERED AN ELOQUENT ADDRESS AT THE BANQUET AT THE NATIONAL HOTEL.

About one hundred members and guests of the Canadian Club sat down to the dinner at the National Hotel last evening. After the good things provided by the cuisine of the National had been fully enjoyed, the chairman introduced Dr. Falconer, President of the University of Toronto, in a few well chosen words.

On rising, Dr. Falconer was cordially greeted by the company and prefaced his remarks by saying that this was not the first time he had spoken in Peterborough, though on the previous occasion it had not been before the Canadian Club.

He never liked to speak twice in one place on the same subject and the subject he had chosen for tonight he was quite sure he had not spoken on here before.

It was a broad and convenient title and could be given a turn suitable to the Canadian Club.

He remarked that there was no better audience to address than the Canadian Club. He did not say this to flatter them, but because it was the truth, and he had heard two prominent Americans say that the Canadian Clubs furnished the most intelligent audiences they had ever addressed. The Professor went on to say that the Canadian Club was an expression of our individuality. There was no doubt about Canadian individuality and there was a grand future to be looked forward to. Those who are Canadians know why there is this individuality, and in the recent South African war it was shown to the world.

The Western part of the country is so new that it has not done much, but the English-speaking peoples of the eastern provinces have gone through a long series of struggles.

These might be divided into two Strata.

The first stratum being composed of the loyalists who first settled in the country, the second stratum consisted of those who more recently came from the old land. They were sturdy, hardy and persistent and earned the right to be called a native. The confederation of Ontario fought out the first really constitutional government.

They wanted reform, but also to remain loyal to the old Empire. (Applause).

We have a broader democracy and a freer government than they have even in the old country, and have stirred the imagination of all the people of the earth.

In the old country public men have larger scope and gain more prominence, but Canada has turned out many men of great ability, men who could hold their own anywhere.

Ushered into such a wealth of inheritance as this country possesses, we are apt to let business take the place of principles. He remembered, when a boy, with what earnestness public questions were argued and bred a strong race of men who thought more of principle than expediency.

The lecturer went on to enumerate the resources of the country and alluded to our great public works, and stated that through them business had taken too great a prominence to the detriment of principle. People had begun to think that our natural resources were inexhaustible, but were they?

In the United States the situation had become such that the government had taken up the question of the conservation of the forests and other resources of the country. This is where "An ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure," and our government at Ottawa is taking steps in the right direction.

If our forests are allowed to be denuded as they have been in the past, the country would suffer serious loss.

The rainfall would not be sufficient the streams dry up, the land unproductive and barren. Manhood always makes nations, and instead of using up our resources so as to obtain the most rapid pecuniary results, we should look to the welfare of coming generations. This would have a good moral effect on the community.

The law of morality is not to waste. We must look to the rights of posterity. The Western farmers are today impoverishing the soil by it and in a few years the soil will be worthless.

The students of the Ontario Agricultural college are being taught how to use the soil so as to improve it and make it more productive year by year instead of impoverishing it. Thrift should be ingrained in the children both in school and in the home.

Canadians are a gifted people and can hold their own with any other people.

Put down in a country in which it is easy to make a living, there is danger of becoming wasteful and extravagant and forgetful of the duty we owe to those who come after us. It is easy to say that if we make mistakes time will repair them, but these mistakes must be paid for.

A nation is not a great nation from material resources, but because of the manhood and ability of every portion of the country to work together pleasantly. The French revolution of the 18th century and the American civil war were the results of forces that had been working for at least two generations back, but both could have stopped if taken in time and here "An Ounce of Prevention would have been much better than a pound of Cure." ...

We are at the beginning of a national life, and without giving it much thought.

Canadians are not a new people, but an old people placed in a different environment.

As part of the population is composed of those who have lived under a different form of government and under different social conditions, we should inculcate tolerance of the views of others.

Tolerance is freedom from prejudice, being able to put yourself in another man's place. Tolerance marks intelligence.

In moving a vote of thanks to Dr. Falconer, Mr. Walker said that the address given this evening showed that Toronto University had found a man to whom we could leave the education of our youth with confidence. Mr. F. D. Kerr seconded the motion in a few pertinent remarks and the meeting closed with "God save the King," by the whole audience.

CHILD MURDERERS GO TO PENITENTIARY

McNulty and Mary Dolan on Their Way to Kingston.

Toronto, Dec. 15.—Thomas McNulty and Mary Dolan, convicted child murderers, and sentenced to spend the remainder of their lives in the Kingston Penitentiary, were at the Union Station for a short time this morning, en route from Barrie. The pair were in charge of two county constables and a lady officer. They arrived at 9 a.m., and immediately transfered to the eastern train. Miss Dolan and the lady officer accompanying her occupied a seat in a first class coach, while McNulty and his guards were in a smoking compartment. They were both in apparently the most cheerful frame of mind and did not seem put out by the inquisitive gaze of railway employees. Miss Dolan was not handcuffed at any time. McNulty had been shackled, but when nearing Toronto he requested the guards to remove them. This was done and he smoked a cigar in quiet contentment.

MRS. GLOVER MAY FACE A CHARGE

Relatives of Her Husband Will Try to Have the Woman Indicted.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 15.—Relatives of Clarence F. Glover, of whose murder 17 year old Hattie LeBlanc was acquitted yesterday, after a sensational trial, announced today that they would attempt to have Mrs Lillian M. Glover, widow of the slain man, indicted and put on trial for his murder. They will carry the case over the head of District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex County, who decided to drop the case following the refusal of Judge Bond to permit the prosecution of Mrs. Glover on the evidence that had been introduced against her in the LeBlanc trial. The brothers of the laundryman declared they would also take up the matter with the Attorney-General-elect, Jas. M. Swift.

STRIKERS MAY DIE FROM STARVATION

Chicago Garment Leaders are Attempting to Force a Settlement of Trouble.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—Settlement of the garment workers' strike was put off to-day when strikers in several places refused to cast ballots on the proposition offered by the employers.

To force a vote, the Union leaders threatened to count every vote not cast as a vote in the affirmative.

The strikers are determined to keep up the fight for a closed shop and increased wages. They declare they would just as soon starve while striking as to starve while working ten or twelve hours a day.

Many families are facing starvation as a result of the cold weather. More than one hundred were evicted from their dwellings yesterday and today gas was shut off in many cases for failure to pay the bills.

Union leaders are attempting to force a settlement of the trouble before any persons die of starvation.

He is asking for sufficient funds to carry him and his daughter to British soil in order that he may revive his claim to a pension from the British government.

For bravery in the Indian mutiny he was awarded the Victoria Cross and received a personal gift of twenty sovereigns from Queen Victoria.

The Trial of Joseph Wilson for Arson

WILSON'S WIFE AND DAUGHTER SWEAR THAT HE DID NOT LEAVE HOUSE AFTER SUPPER.

Much Contradictory Evidence in the Case—Defence Calls a Number of Witnesses.

The case of Joseph Wilson charged with burning down the barn of Ezra McFadden in June last, was resumed before His Honor Judge Huycke yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The evidence for the prosecution was concluded and a number of witnesses called for the defence. More called when the court resumed at 2 o'clock.

Frank McFadden, who lives in Burleigh, and is a cousin of the complainant, was the first witness called this morning. On the evening of June 4th he was at the house of McFadden. Wilson called Zadok Hales outside, but did not hear what he said. He heard Mrs. McFadden order Wilson home. He went as far as the barn, sat down for a while and then went on. He had gone home before the fire had started and by the time he had got back the barn was half burned. Mrs. McFadden used considerable bad language to Wilson in driving Wilson off the place.

THE DEFENCE.

Mrs. Norman Wilson was the first witness called for the defence. Just after they arrived John McFadden came along and yelled "fire!" She and her husband got up and went over to the blaze. She did not think there was any wind. She was talking to Mr. and Mrs. McFadden, who were talking of having Wilson arrested. Mrs. McFadden told her that she thought she saw one or two persons, but she wasn't sure. She was sure there was a woman for she saw her holding up her skirts.

Johnny McFadden said he thought he saw a man running from the barn. Next Morning witness went over to McFadden's place. McFadden asked her if she thought Jimmie Wilson would burn down his barn. She said she did not think so. He said "then it must have been Joe."

Mrs. Louisa Brown was next called. She is a sister of Wilson. Her home is at Apsley. She had come down to spend Sunday at Wilson's. She had just driven in, and the young boy just had the horse unhitched when he caught sight of the fire. They went and got a lantern and hurried over to McFadden's. Witness heard Mrs. McFadden say she thought it was a woman she saw running away, for she seemed to be holding her skirts. She heard Percy say he saw someone but he couldn't tell whether it was a man or a woman! Johnny said he thought it was a man. Mr. McFadden appeared to her to be under the influence of liquor in the house.

Thomas Hales, called, stated he lived one mile from McFadden's place. When he arrived at the fire the roof of the barn had fallen in. Witness smelt liquor there. He saw Percy McFadden with a flask of whiskey. McFadden Sr. acted as though he had been drinking. Percy McFadden stated there that Wilson had set the barn on fire.

Norman Wilson, brother of the accused, lives about a quarter of a mile from McFadden's place, called. He stated that Johnny McFadden came over and told him of the fire. He went over, followed later by his wife. Mrs. McFadden told witness that she believed it was his brother who had burned the barn.

Mrs. Catharine Lane said she lived in Apsley. On the Monday morning after the fire Percy McFadden was talking to her and in the course of the conversation told her about their barns being burned. He told her he saw a man coming out of the barn that night. He was not thirty feet from him, but he didn't know who he was.

Mrs. Joseph Wilson, wife of the prisoner, was next called. In June last her husband was doing government work on the road. Her husband was away on the day of the fire. He came home in the evening about half an hour after they had tea. He was home before dark. After he finished supper, he sat at the end of the table until he went to bed. He was never outside the house after he came home. She said that one could tell he had been drinking, but he was not by any means the worse of liquor.

Jane and Lottie Wilson, daughters of the accused, said that she remembered the McFadden fire. That evening their father came home about 8 o'clock. After he had his tea he sat talking at the end of the table. He then went to bed.

Rev. C. Lord of Apsley, was next called. The accused was a member of his church. He had known him 16 years. His reputation was good, except as to his drinking. He did not think he would commit such an offence.

Rev. Mr. Garbutt of the Methodist church of Apsley said that Wilson was an honest, hard-working man, but subject to drink.

Wm. Tucker of Anstruther, stated that he was Reeve of the Township of Burleigh and Anstruther. Wilson's reputation was good.

The court then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

"LET US DRIVE TO THE WINDS THE BOURASSAS AND MONKS"

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper Speaks of the Navy Before Halifax Canadian Club.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 15.—Sir Chas. Hibbert Tupper was the guest of the Canadian Club at luncheon yesterday.

Speaking on the naval question, Sir Hibbert said he thought there was a great misconception in regard to the present agitation in Quebec. If Quebec seems to vote against militarism and a navy, it should be remembered that there are men in Ontario and on the plains who do not wish to contribute one cent to a national or imperial defence. These men must be educated. He thought it a pity that this great matter should be left to one party.

Bourassas and Monks who would destroy and render to no effect the dreams of Howe and the men who dreamed of imperial grandeur in which Canada should have a honorable part."

There is little danger from a cold or from an attack of the grippe except when followed by pneumonia, and this never happens when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. This remedy has won its great reputation and extensive sale by the remarkable cures of colds and grip, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence.

NINE HOURS PER DAY IS DEMANDED

Trades and Labor Council Takes this Stand.

At a meeting of the trades and labor council held on Wednesday evening it was decided to support only such candidates for aldermen at the forthcoming municipal elections who were in favor of constituting nine hours per day for all city work, whether done by contract or by day work.

It was also decided to make a demand for a reduction in street car rates during certain hours. At present 6 tickets are sold for a quarter, and the trades and labor council think that eight should be supplied for this money.

PESTILENCE IN STORM'S WAKE

Madrid, Dec. 15.—Famine and pestilence are following in the wake of terrific cyclones which have swept Spain from the Bay of Biscay to the Mediterranean. Torrential rains have left the rivers out their banks and scores of villages are either cut off today or are deserted. Scores of men and women have been driven mad by the flood horrors.

In some parts of the interior roadbridges, and railroad tracks have been washed away. Many buildings have collapsed. Premier Canalejas and his ministry held a conference today to prepare a bill for the relief of the suffering.

The British steamer Gravina was almost demolished by being dashed against a jetty at Corunna by the high wind.

LIVED BY FRAUD.

An enterprising woman of New York has demonstrated that it does not take very much of a start to make a living, and, judging from her case, a very good living. Self-made millionaires delight to tell of the days when they started out with 30 cents to make a fortune and succeeded.

This woman started with nothing but a banana skin, and, if her own account is to be credited, she made something like $4500 out of the investment. It is true that her business affairs have landed her in the courts, but she lived high while the graft lasted. Her particular trick was to conveniently let a banana skin fall on the car steps and then step on it and wait for the claim agent to come around and settle.

Her Waterloo came when she tried the trick on the New York Central and the road discovered, after it had settled for $500, that the banana skin had come from the lady's pocket book just before she took her tumble. Now they have sued her and started criminal action.

This recalls the story of the London woman who was recently caught after she had tapped about all the tills in the theatres with a scheme which was to buy a ticket, attend the show and then bill the management with her claim of a lost purse.

Which goes to show that the belief that the world owes everyone a living is not dead yet by any means.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

ing stick. Then summoning a smart young jemadar with whom he had talked a good deal during the journey, he asked him to read the chit. The woman who supplied the chupatties fetched a tiny lamp. She held it while the trooper bent over the strange scrawl, and ran his eyes along it to learn the context.

And this is what he read:

"To all whom it may concern—Be it known that Malcolm sahib, late of the Company's 3rd Regiment of Horse, is a friend of the Persian-born princess Roshinara Begum, and, provided he comes to the palace at Delhi within three days from the date hereof he is to be given safe conduct by all who owe allegiance to the Light of the World, the renowned King of Kings and lord of all India, Bahadur Shah, Pual-Ilahi Panah-i-din."

The trooper scowled. Those concluding words "By the grace of God, Defender of the Faith" perhaps touched a sore place, for he, too, was a true believer.

"You are a long way from Delhi, sahib, and the visit is a week old. I suppose you did not pay the expected visit to her Highness the Begum?" he said.

"If you are talking of the Begum Roshinara, daughter of the King of Delhi, put in the woman, who was ready enough to indulge in a gossip with these good-looking soldiers, "she passed through this place to-day."

"Surely you are telling some idle tale of the bazaar," said Malcolm.

"No, sahib. My brother is a grass-cutter in the Nana's stables. While I was at the well this morning a carriage came down the road. It was a rajah's carriage, and there were men riding before and behind. I asked my brother if he had seen it, and he said that it brought the Begum to Bithoor, where she is to wed the Nana."

"What! A Mohammedan princess marry a Brahmin!"

"It may be so, sahib. They say these great people do not consider such things when there is aught to be gained."

"But what good purpose can this marriage serve?"

"Where have you been, sahib, that you have not heard that the sepoys have proclaimed the Nana as King?" she asked thuddily.

"King! Is he going to fight the Begum's father?"

"I know not, sahib, but Delhi is far off, and Cawnpore is near. Perchance they may both be kings."

A man's voice called from the darkness, and the woman hurried away. Malcolm, of course, was in a position to appraise the accuracy of her story. He knew that the Nana, a native dignitary with a grievance against the Government, was a guest of Bahadur Shah a month before the Mutiny broke out, and was at the Meerut hunting lodge on the very night of its inception. Judging by Princess Roshinara's words, her relations with the Brahmin leader were far from lover like. What, then, did this sudden journey to Cawnpore portend? Was Sir Hugh Wheeler aware of the proposed marriage, with all the terrible consequences that it heralded? At any rate, his line of action was clear.

"Get the men together, Akbab Khan," he said to the jemadar. "We march at once."

Within five minutes they were on the road. There was no moon, and the trees bordering both sides of the way made the darkness intense. The still atmosphere, too, was almost overpowering. The dry earth, sunbaked to a depth of many feet, was giving off its store of heat accumulated during the day. The air seemed to be quivering as though it were laden with the fumes of a furnace. It was a night when men might die or go mad under the mere strain of existence. Its very languor was intoxicating. Nature seemed to brood over some wild revel. A fearsome thunderstorm or howling tornado of dust might reveal her fickleness of mood at any moment.

It was man, not the elements, that was destined to war that night. The small party of horsemen were riding through the scattered houses of Bithoor, and had passed a brilliantly-lighted palace which Malcolm took to be the residence of Nana Sahib, when they were suddenly ordered to halt. Some native soldiers, not wearing the Company's uniform, formed a line across the road. Malcolm, drawing his sword, advanced towards them.

"Whose troops are you?" he shouted.

There was no direct answer, but a score of men, armed with muskets and bayonets, and carrying a number of lanterns, came nearer. It must be remembered that Malcolm, a subaltern of the 3rd Cavalry, wore a turban and sash. He spoke Urdu exceedingly well, and it was difficult in the gloom to recognize him as a European.

"We have orders to stop and examine all wayfarers—" began some man in authority; but a lifted lantern revealed Frank's white face; instantly several guns were pointed at him.

"Follow me!" he cried to the escort.

A touch of the spurs sent Nejdi with a mighty bound into the midst of the rabble who held the road. Malcolm bent low in the saddle and a scattered volley revealed the tree-shrouded houses in a series of bright flashes. Fortunately, under such conditions, there is more room to miss than to hit. None of the bullets harmed horse or man, and the sowards were not quite near enough to be in the line of fire. After a quick sweep or two with his sword, Malcolm saw that his men were laying about them heartily. A pack-horse, however, had stumbled, bringing down the animal ridden by Chumru, the bearer. To save his faithful servant Frank wheeled Nejdi and cut down a native who was lunging at Chumru with a bayonet.

More shots were fired and a sowar was wounded. He fell, shouting to his comrades for help. A general melee ensued. The troopers slashed at the men on foot and the sepoys fired in discriminately at any one on horseback. The throng was so great and the fighting so strenuous that Malcolm did not hear the approach of a body of cavalry until a loud voice bawled:

"Why should brothers slay brothers? Cease your quarrelling, in the name of the faith! Are there not plenty of accursed Feringhis on whom to try your blades?"

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2.625 oz. of gold and 3.267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meire, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

WOMAN'S TRANSITION

Lord Aberdeen Attributes It to Growth in Public Life

Lord Aberdeen, speaking in England, referred to what he called "the added and increasing demands upon women by the great transition going on around us in the position of women." He added:

"I once heard of the father of a large family—all daughters whose means were rather circumscribed, as is often the case with military men. Some friend suggested that the daughters might do something. 'They do a great deal,' said their father; 'look at all those beautiful embroideries.' It was pointed out to him that doing something meant in the way of earning a living, whereupon he at once indignantly replied. 'My daughters are the daughters of a gentleman.' (Laughter.) That state of mind has received several rude shocks lately. Times have changed, and our daughters and their position have changed with them. There is the more reason that we should spend thoughtful care in fitting them for the wider outlook which is opening before them."

THE INDIAN AND THE MARBLES

An Amusing Story Gathered From a Kentucky Settlement

Mr. Watt, in his "Chronicles of a Kentucky Settlement," tells how a boy of eleven years of age showed an Indian how to play marbles 100 years ago. The boy, Joseph A---, had been playing along behind the teams, "dumpunk" marbles, a dozen or more of which he had brought with him from Philadelphia, when he was much alarmed on coming in the road, directly in front of him, a large, fierce looking Indian, rifle in hand, and otherwise equipped with tomahawk and belt, after the manner of his race.

The boy's first impulse was to shout for help, but it struck him that the Indian was unarmed as to the missiles probable marbles might be, and he determined to resort to a little friendly diplomacy. Picking up the marbles and hooking them out on the palm of his hand, he also excited the dusky stranger, and with as calm a voice as he could command said, "Marbles! Do you want one?" May have been. I have more." The Indian took one marbles and examined one of them, so closely that the boy supposed the savage had never before seen such a toy, and was trying to determine its use. Upon this he took two other marbles from his pocket, and casting one of them some six or eight feet from him, he properly adjusted the other between his thumb and finger, and showing the position to the Indian, took deliberate aim. He hit the marble that he shot at so plump that it was knocked several yards. The one he had shot spun round in almost the same place from which the other had been driven. It was a good shot. The Indian, observing the game, uttered something like a grunt of approval, and placing the marbles given him in his pouch, without a word or a gesture, stepped from the road and disappeared in the forest.

EMPTY CRADLES

Father Vaughan Says Low Birth Rate is "Simply Appalling"

Father Vaughan, speaking in London, referred to the fall in the birth rate, more especially among the well to-do and leisured classes. The decreases from 37 and 38 to 24 and 25 per 1,000 was simply appalling in one generation. In the slums of the City and East-end life was teeming, while in the squares of the West-end life was declining. Its cradles were as empty as its churches. Married life was fast ceasing to be recognized as a divine institution—a contract binding man and wife till the hand of death did them part. They were preparing material in England for a history of "The Decline and Fall of the British Empire," and he much feared it would be a far sadder story than the Roman one told by Gibbon.—The Chronicle.

A VULTURE ESCAPED

While an attendant in the Glasgow Zoo was cleaning out one of the bird cages the other day a large bird of the vulture species escaped, and, falling a victim to the prevailing craze for aviation, winged its way out of the building. It got on to the house-tops of the district and flew in a westerly direction. A large crowd gathered and followed the escaped bird. The attendant offered two shillings to anyone who would recapture the fowl and many tried to lay hands on it. After being at liberty for a considerable time, and apparently having had quite enough of the view of Glasgow's roofs, the bird permitted itself to be caught.

TATTOOED BY LIGHTNING

Two men named Caspian and Smith were killed by lightning and another badly injured at Linton, England. The men, who were fishing, took shelter from the storm under a larch bush, where they were struck by a flash of lightning. Two were killed instantly, and the third was much burned, but was breathing, and was revived with the aid of artificial respiration. The men killed were marked on the bodies with the exact resemblance of the bush, and a leg with the hair had fingerprinted on his back a representation of a tree near by. He was also injured except for shock.

YEARNED FOR A KIND WORD

Strange Farewell Letter of Young Woman Suicide

An extraordinary letter was read at the inquest at Portsmouth on Margaret Gillard aged twenty-nine, who hanged herself. In the letter she said:

"By committing myself to a suicide's grave I shall die as I have lived—God forsaken and friendless. Many a time my soul has yearned for a kind word or action, but my whole life seemed cursed. Of course, the world's opinion will be 'insane.' My verdict will be, 'Too sane, too sensitive.' Rake up all your condemnation against me—deceiver, fool and miser. Bury them all with me, to be forgotten in a silent and lonely grave. Trample the earth over me, as you all have my life. . . ."

The girl's father, a naval pensioner, said his daughter was a single woman and a dressmaker. There was nothing to justify the suggestion of ill-treatment made in the letter. She had no love troubles, and had never walked out with young men. Her Post Office banking book (produced) showed that she had a credit balance of £40. She did not make friends. Her business was very successful and it was all her own. Witness knew of no reason whatever why she should take her own life.

A verdict was returned of "Suicide while of unsound mind."

A MARK TWAIN PREFACE

Why Candy Stores Do Not Sell Hardware

There is a characteristic bit of the old-time Mark Twain in the volume, "Mark Twain's Speeches," which the Harpers have just published. The preface, scarcely half a page long, was written by Mark Twain himself, and is a confidential note to the reader:

"If I were to sell the reader a barrel of molasses, and he, instead of sweetening his substantial dinner with the same at judicious intervals, should eat the entire barrel at one sitting, and then abuse me for making him sick, I would say that he deserved to be made sick for not knowing any better how to utilize the blessings this world affords.

"And if I sell to the reader this volume of nonsense, and he, instead of seasoning his graver reading with a chapter of it now and then, when his mind demands such relaxation, unwisely overdoses himself with several chapters of it at a single sitting, he will deserve to be nauseated, and he will have nobody to blame but himself.

"There is no more sin in publishing an entire volume of nonsense than there is in keeping a candy store with no hardware in it. It lies wholly with the customer whether he will derive from them the benefits which they will afford him if he uses their possibilities judiciously."

KING EDWARD'S MEMORY

His Life and Reign to Be Commemorated in London

The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, has addressed to the Lord Mayor a letter in which he says that the Government have been considering the question as to the best method of commemorating the life and reign of King Edward VII. As a result of their inquiries they are disposed to think that the object in view would best be secured by local rather than national memorials. They feel that the memory of a King who showed so keen a desire to become acquainted with all classes of his subjects in every part of the United Kingdom would more appropriately be honored and preserved by each county or large city marking specially for itself, and in a manner most suitable to the local conditions, the love and veneration in which he was held. The Prime Minister suggests that the Lord Mayor should take the initiative in carrying out the project of a London memorial. The Lord Mayor has replied, expressing the gratification it will give him to inaugurate such a movement, and stating that he is taking steps to form an influential Mansion House Committee to make the necessary preparations.

SEAT IN THE TRAIN

Railway Company Not Bound to Provide One

An important case to the travelling public has been decided in Scotland. Some time ago William Peaney, superintendent, Local Government Board, and residing at Boatland, Perth, raised an action against the Caledonian Railway Company for $10.50, as compensation for damages for breach of contract in respect that on July 23, 1909, the defenders issued to him a first-class ticket for a seat in the 9.10 a.m. train from Perth to Edinburgh via Stirling, and that he was occasioned inconvenience, annoyance, and fatigue by having to stand in the corridor of the train.

The defence was that Perth was an intermediate station between Aberdeen and Edinburgh and that the day in question, being a particular day owing to the Highland Show at Stirling, the carriages were filled up prior to the pursuer's arrival at the train, and that the defenders' servants had done everything in their power to provide pursuer with a seat.

Sheriff-Substitute Sym, after hearing proof and parties' agents, found that the day was one of exceptional crowding of trains owing to its being the cheap day of the Highland and Agricultural Society's show at Stirling; that pursuer, unable to get a seat, had to stand in the corridor between Perth and Stirling; that defenders had made all reasonable and proper arrangements to accommodate the traffic; and that the defenders had tendered to the pursuer the difference between first and third-class fare. His Lordship found in law that in the circumstances the defenders were not liable in damages.

G.T.R. Receipts.

The Grand Trunk October statement shows that gross receipts of Grand Trunk proper increased £25,000; working expenses increased £30,000. BETWEEN:

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH (hereinafter called the "Corporation") of the First Part.

of the Second Part.

WHEREAS the party of the Second Part and his associates have represented to the Council of the said Corporation that they propose to make tests and borings in the vicinity of the City of Peterborough for the purpose of ascertaining if sufficient natural gas can be obtained to enable them to supply the inhabitants of the City with the same for domestic and manufacturing purposes and have requested the said Council to agree that in case within one year from the date hereof such natural gas should be found in sufficient quantities for the purposes aforesaid to grant to the party of the Second Part or his assigns or a company to be hereafter formed the right to use the streets and public lanes in the said City for laying pipes thereon for the purpose of supplying such natural gas to those who may become consumers thereof and in the opinion of the Council of the said Corporation it is desirable and in the public interest if the said party of the Second Part or his assigns or the said Company performs, fulfils and keeps the covenants and agreements hereafter contained to grant such request upon and subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter mentioned.

THIS AGREEMENT THEREFORE WITNESSETH that in pursuance of the premises and the agreement on behalf of the Corporation hereinafter contained the party of the Second Part for himself and his assigns hereby covenants and agrees with the Corporation as follows:

1. THAT he and his associates will as soon as possible and not later than the first day of March, 1911, commence and thereafter continue boring operations within the County of Peterborough and within one year from the date hereof will spend at least Six Thousand dollars ($6,000) in same and take such other action as may be necessary to ascertain within said time if a sufficient supply of gas for the purposes aforesaid can be obtained in the vicinity of the City of Peterborough and will use due diligence in prosecuting the said work and endeavoring to procure and furnish natural gas, and will within said term of one year from the date hereof furnish the Corporation with evidence satisfactory to the Corporation that said sum of $6,000 has been expended for the purposes aforesaid and said work has been continuously prosecuted and in default of such evidence being furnished it shall be prima facie taken that the same has not been done.

2. THAT if such natural gas sufficient for the purposes aforesaid is found, the party of the Second Part and his associates or a company to be hereafter formed will within two years from the date hereof lay the necessary pipes from the source of the supply of such natural gas to the City of Peterborough and do such other works as may be necessary to supply and will supply the inhabitants of the said City with the same within said two years.

3. THAT the pressure under which such natural gas shall be supplied shall be not less than four ounces per square inch at the meter of the consumer and the price to be charged therefore under said pressure shall not exceed fifty cents per one-thousand cubic feet for domestic use nor twenty-five cents per one thousand cubic feet for manufacturing purposes.

4. THAT at all times a good and efficient service will be furnished and gas supplied to the inhabitants of the said City desiring to use the said natural gas so long as there is a sufficient supply for the said purpose, and the users of said gas for domestic purposes shall have at all times the first right to the said gas and manufacturers shall be entitled only to any surplus that may remain after all users of said gas for domestic purposes have been supplied.

5. THAT in case the said party of the Second Part or his assigns or the Company to be hereafter formed for the purposes aforesaid shall fail to start said boring operations on or before the 1st day of March, 1911, and within one year from the date hereof expend the said sum of $6,000 therein and shall have found natural gas sufficient for the purposes aforesaid or should fail to instal the said system and furnish the said natural gas within two years from the date hereof or if the operations for either of said purposes are abandoned, stopped, or suspended for a period of two months at any time then in any of said events, any rights and privileges hereby granted or agreed to be granted by the Corporation shall ipso facto cease and be at an end and the said party of the Second Part or his assigns or the said Company shall not nor shall either of them enjoy, acquire or be entitled to the right to use the streets and lanes of the said city for the purposes aforesaid or any of them and should the said party of the Second Part or his assigns or the said Company at any time after such installation fail to operate said system and furnish gas as aforesaid, provided such failure to operate is not caused by strikes, accidents or unforseen or inevitable casualty and in that case not exceeding thirty days, or should sell natural gas to any other person, persons or company and a higher price is charged to consumers for it than is provided for in this agreement, or should enter into a combination or amalgamation with or an arrangement or agreement for sharing or dividing profits or sell out to any other person or company doing a like business in the City of Peterborough, then in any of said events the right to use the streets and lanes of the City of Peterborough and all rights and privileges hereunder shall ipso facto cease, or in case of the breach of any of the other terms hereof, then the right to use the streets and lanes of the said City and all rights and privileges hereunder shall, after notice has been given as hereinafter mentioned, cease and determine unless default and the same has not been remedied within two months after the notice has been given, ipso facto cease.

6. THAT before the said party of the Second Part or his assigns or any company formed as aforesaid shall lay, relay or change any pipes for the distribution of natural gas on any of the streets or public lanes in the said City an application accompanied by a plan and profile shall be furnished the City Engineer showing the purposed location of the said pipes on the said streets or lanes or parts of said streets or lanes on which it is desired to lay such pipes and the approval of the Engineer shall be obtained before any work is done, and unless such application is furnished before the first day of April in any year no pipes shall be laid, relaid or changed or any of the said streets or lanes during that year without the express consent of the Council being first obtained and no such pipes shall be laid without such consent being first obtained and wherever practicable the lanes shall be used for such purpose instead of the streets—provided however that in case it is necessary to make connections from the pipes already laid to the street line of the property of any person desiring to use the said natural gas and at least three days previous notice in writing is given to the said Engineer designating the connections it is desired to put in and his approval is obtained thereto such connections may be made, and all such connections shall be put as nearly as possible at right angles to the street line, and provided further that in the event of any leaks occurring in the pipes, repairs to prevent same may be made after notice to the said Engineer either by telephone or letter and in case of notice by telephone the same shall the same day be confirmed by letter to the Engineer.

7. THAT all said works shall be done under the control and to the satisfaction of the Engineer and the person or company doing the same shall not do unnecessary damage to or incumber or obstruct the streets or lanes on which said work is being done, and shall preserve a free and uninterrupted passage for persons and vehicles on the said streets and lanes, while the work is in progress, and shall place guards or fences at the openings and at night place lighted lamps on same and take all other necessary precautions for the prevention of accidents to persons using the said streets or lanes and shall finish the work with expedition and at once replace the soil and immediately restore the streets and lanes to as good a condition as they were in before the said work was commenced and will leave the said pipes and connections so that the same will not interfere with, obstruct, injure or damage the Corporation's sewers, water-pipes, water tables, drainage and other Corporation works or the private property of any person, firm or corporation.

8. THAT the person or company doing or operating the said work and supplying said natural gas shall and will indemnify and save harmless and keep indemnified and harmless the said Corporation from all claims, actions, damages, loss, costs and expenses whatever arising or occurring by reason of the construction, maintaining, repairing or operating the said system or in any way connected therewith or relating thereto or resulting from or rising out of the same or by reason or on account of any matter or thing done permitted or omitted to be done by the said person or company under or by reason of this agreement, or the failure or neglect of the said person or company to do or perform anything which he or the said Company is by agreement or by law required to do or perform and will pay to any person firm or body corporate any damages, such person, firm or body corporate may sustain in consequence of any act omission or default of the said person or company doing or operating the said work or supplying said natural gas.

9. THAT if required by the Corporation the Street Commissioner or some other officer appointed by the Council shall be appointed to superintend the opening and filling in the trenches and replacing the soil and restoring the streets and lanes to their proper condition and the person or company doing said work shall on demand pay the reasonable expenses of such superintendence.

AND THIS AGREEMENT FURTHER WITNESSETH that in consideration of the premises the said Corporation hereby agrees with the said party of the Second Part and his assigns that provided natural gas sufficient for the purposes above mentioned is sought, found and supplied in the manner and within the times above mentioned and he or his assigns or a Company to be hereafter formed for the purposes aforesaid performs, fulfils and keeps the covenants and agreements above set out on the part of the party of the Second Part or his assigns or the said Company to be performed, observed and kept that the said party of the Second Part (or his assigns or a company to be formed as aforesaid after first entering into an agreement with the said Corporation in the terms hereof) may for a period of twenty years from the first day of January, 1911, use such of the streets and public lanes of the said City of Peterborough as may be required for the purposes aforesaid upon and subject to the terms and conditions above mentioned for the purpose of laying pipes and connections for supplying natural gas to the inhabitants of the said City but nothing herein contained shall be deemed to limit or interfere with the control of the streets or public lanes of the said City by the said Corporation under The Municipal Act or any By-law or agreement now in force or hereafter passed, or entered into.

AND IT IS FURTHER AGREED by the said Corporation that provided the said party of the Second Part or his assigns or a company to be formed for the purposes aforesaid performs fulfils and keeps the covenants and agreements above set out on the part of the party of the Second Part or his assigns or a Company to be hereafter formed as aforesaid to be performed fulfilled and kept and authority can be obtained for that purpose for which authority it hereby agrees to apply on being paid the cost thereof, that for the first ten years of the said term of twenty years the said Corporation will not grant to or allow any other person firm or corporation the use of the streets and public lanes of the said City or any of them for the purpose of laying pipes for supplying natural gas to the inhabitants of the said City.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

The Final Pollings Contest Ends Monday

BRITAIN'S MOST REMARKABLE ELECTORAL CONTEST IS JUST ABOUT OVER

A Neck and Neck Event—Each Side Gained One Seat Yesterday—War Minister Haldane Returned—Bad Day for O'Brienites.

London, Dec. 16.—To-day saw the final polling in the general elections in England, though candidates will be elected in scattered Scotch and Irish constituencies on Monday, ending Britain's most remarkable electoral contest.

Both Unionists and Liberals made gains yesterday, and early in the afternoon returns showed that the Government coalition forces had a lead of 102 seats, although the complete majority will reach 138, leaders declared.

STRONGLY ENTRENCHED.

The Liberals will be strongly entrenched in the next Parliament, while their coalition will be able to block or control legislation. The wind up of the elections make it evident that the grave constitutional questions can hardly be settled in Parliament. The solution must come it is believed, through conferences of the leaders.

The Unionists gained the seat for High Peak electorate of Derbyshire, and the Liberals made a gain at Leek, Staffordshire.

Mr. Haldane, Secretary of State for War, was returned to Parliament from Haddingtonshire, Scotland, defeating the Unionist candidate. Minister Haldane's majority last January was 745, and it was even smaller in the present instance.

WINNIPEG HAS NO CAR SERVICE

ALL EMPLOYES OF COMPANY GO ON STRIKE—CITIZENS WALK TO THEIR WORK.

How the Trouble Arose—Every Effort to Effect a Settlement Failed—The Strike Really Came as a Surprise.

Winnipeg, Dec. 16.—When Winnipeg awoke this morning it was to find that not a street car was moving and "We Walk" was the slogan.

Thousands in the suburbs and outlying districts had to trudge miles to business.

The strike really came as a surprise, as although it had been talked of for some time, it was not seriously believed that it would occur. The decision was arrived at at a mass meeting of the men early this morning, when they unanimously voted to strike, after discussing the terms of the reports of the Board of Arbitrators and also the report of the committee which met the officials of the company as a last resort.

ROOF COLLAPSED

Skating Rink Wrecked While Skaters Had a Close Call.

Owen Sound, Dec. 16.—What might easily have proved a serious catastrophe happened at Park Head, a village ten miles from here, when the entire roof of the rink collapsed. Quite a number of the hockey boys had gone on the ice when the rafters at the west end began to break. Immediately there was a rush for the door which was jammed with people endeavoring to make their escape Strange to say there was only one injured. The building was owned by George Cooke, of the Cottage Hotel, and is a total wreck.

BOY SCOUTS WILL PARADE TO CHURCH

Boy Scouts to Attend Park Street Baptist Church To-Morrow.

A very interesting and what should prove instructive service to all, both parents and boys, will take place on Sunday morning at the Park street Baptist Church, when the Y.M.C.A. Boy Scouts will hold their first church parade, and will be addressed by their popular chaplain, the Rev. W. C. Riddiford.

Mr. Riddiford is very much interested in the scout movement, and believes in it, and will take for his subject next Sunday morning, "The Boy Scout Movement, Its Place, Purpose and Power in a Boy's Life."

All parents who are anxious to understand this movement will find it to their advantage to be present at the Park street Baptist church next Sunday morning.

In the evening the Rev. Walter Daniels, field secretary for the Northwest Missions, will give an address, in which he will tell us whether the growing western provinces need one language or two, and which one they want to learn the most. Mr Daniels is in a very interesting speaker and you will be well repaid if you come and hear him.

PRESENTATION.

Miss Jennie Buyers Was Honored by Her Associates.

A pleasant event took place at the Novel-Ti Co. the other evening when Miss Jennie Buyers, who has been a member of the staff for a number of years, was presented with a valuable silver bread plate and a beautiful silver cake basket. The Novel-Ti Co. has always been noted for the superior and refined class of goods produced, and it is now to be congratulated on its training, as Miss Buyers has been forming a tie of a lasting nature and the knot will be tied by a reverend gentleman of the city shortly. The gifts were accompanied by many good wishes for her future happiness. Miss Buyers thanked Mr. Attwood and her associates for the kindness shown her and for the beautiful presents.

CONSIDERS TARIFF

World Wide Interest Being Taken In This Matter.

(Special to The Times).

Tokio, Dec. 16.—The Japanese Imperial Diet will be convened at Tokio Tuesday. The country is now wrestling with several great political problems and the latest advices report much popular dissatisfaction over the Government's policy, especially in regard to the tariff. As a consequence of this condition of affairs the proceedings of the Japanese parliament will be followed with worldwide interest. The disposition of the tariff question, especially, is a matter of great importance to England, the United States and other countries.

JAIL ON WHEELS TO ARREST DRUNKS

(Special to The Times.)

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 16.—An unusual distinction has been gained by East Point, an incorporated suburb of this city. Besides having all the convenience of modern cities, East Point has provided the law-breaking elements with a jail on wheels, and instead of dragging an obstreperous drunk to prison, the town constable hitches a team of mules to the prison, drives over and loads up.

On the trial day, the load of malefactors is towed over to the court room.

This portable prison has accommodations for twelve prisoners.

Child Beaten to Death in a Horrible Manner

HEARTRENDERING STORY OF A MOST BRUTAL MURDER AT GODERICH.

Child Writing on Slate—Hesitated to Obey Command to Write Down Figures—Man Flew Into Rage.

Goderich, Dec. 16.—A terrible tragedy occurred late last evening at the home of George Vanstone, Trafalgar street, when George the baby boy, about six years of age was beaten to death in a horrible manner by his father.

The child had been writing some numbers on a slate for his mother and sister and the father called him over and requested him to write the numbers from 1 to 20.

For same reason the child refused whereupon the father began to beat him to try to make him write the figures. The more the child refused the more infuriated the father became until he quite lost control of himself and in a perfect frenzy beat the boy to death.

The mother had become alarmed at the first show of temper on the part of her husband and had gone out several times for assistance but for some reason could not get hold of any one to come in and interfere with her husband.

It seems incredible that the man could continually beat the child until it died with no one to interfere, as the house is very close to other houses.

Finally the mother ran for assistance to the residence of Dr. J. C. Hunter several blocks distant, and returned with the doctor to her home. They found the father pacing the floor with the child in his arms, quite calm. On examination the boy was found to be dead.

DID NOT REALIZE CRIME.

The father seemed unable to realize that he had killed his little son and stupidly refused to believe that the child was dead. Meanwhile P. C. Moore had been sent for and took Vanstone in charge on his arrival. Vanstone did not resist arrest, but seemed unable to comprehend why he was being taken into custody.

THE WEAPON OF DEATH.

The instrument used by the father to accomplish his horrible purpose was a broomstick in fact two brooms were used, one of which was broken in two from contact with the little one's body. The child's body was beaten almost black from head to foot. Three other children which comprise the family were terrified by their father's frenzy and remained huddled in another room while the tragedy was being enacted.

White Haven, Eng., Dec. 17.—Twenty persons were buried alive in a land-slide here to-day when a retaining wall gave way. HURLED 500 FEET

Two Large Boilers in Power House at Fredonia Exploded Together.

Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 16.—With a roar that startled everyone within the radius of a mile, two large boilers in the Fredonia power house at Fredonia, N.Y., exploded last night, killing instantly L. Burrows, a fireman, and hurling William Bishop, another fireman, to the top of the Buffalo and Lake Erie Traction Company house, 500 feet away. Bishop is terribly scalded and bruised. Fragments were scattered in all directions and possibly 100 people had hairbreadth escapes from the flying missiles. Among the buildings damaged were the State Normal school, the Postoffice and the Columbia hotel, several street cars on the Buffalo & Lake Erie Traction line were damaged.

The loss is estimated at $150,000.

IS BRITAIN A LUNATIC NATION?

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW DECLARES HER WAY OF LIVING DEMONSTRATES THE FACT.

Knock Down Half the Cities and Rebuild Them—Referendum Will Destroy the Nation If It Is Adopted.

London, Dec. 16.—Speaking at Streatham on the elections, Mr. Bernard Shaw said Socialists contended that there was not sufficient capital in the country. They wanted capital for knocking down half of London and over half of every town in England. At least half of most English towns were simply a disgrace to civilization. A nation which lived in this condition and yet sent two millions out of the country every every year ought to be in a lunatic asylum, and what we were worrying about this election was as to the particular gentlemen who should be our keepers.

Mr. Shaw so observed that as Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne had become enthusiastic converts to the referendum he thought there was some possibility of its establishment in this country. If it were established he would try to get something which went along with it. Being imitiative this meant that the country would not only be able to vote on what was proposed in Parliament, but any citizen would be able to propose a law and get it voted on by referendum. All he would propose, if he had the chance, would be that no local authority should in future be allowed to raise more than 62 cents in the pound rates. It would be passed by an overwhelming majority, and the effect would be instant destruction of England.

The London County Council levied $40,000,000 a year, and yet the very men who grumbled about it voted for the men who drew $80,000,000 a year from the metropolis in ground rents. This belonged to London and yet Londoners handed it over without going to the trouble of deducting their rates from it.

The Divorce Colony Has Very Gay Ball

Reno, Dec. 16.—A gay ball at which none but an exclusive number of the women of the divorce colony and their male acquaintances participated, took place last night in an obscure hall some distance from the centre of the city. The invitations were handed out with admonitions of secrecy.

The hall with a capacity for hardly more than a score of dancers, was decked in green and white flowers and an orchestra with "Mum's the word" engaged. The thirty persons present mixed their own cocktails.

It is learned that it was the most fashionable gowned group of women ever assembled in this city, each vying with the other to undo her expensive gowns and displays of jewels. It is estimated that the latter alone represented $75,000, while some of the gowns were imported from Paris.

When the hilarity was at its height Mrs. J. H. Woodruff, of New York, solo violinists with Sousa all through his European tour a few years ago, who is here for divorce, grabbed the violin from one of the orchestra and began to render a choice selection. The orchestra was thus compelled to stop, the dancing ceased, and all listened to her skilled music. Then she grabbed her partner, exclaiming, "I wish I had my own fine instrument with me." the dance went on again

New Reign of Terror Under Young Turks

CHRISTIAN POPULATION IS BEING LITERALLY CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Bulgarians Sentenced to Imprisonment and Torture Indiscriminately.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 15. The Macedonian situation is rapidly becoming intolerable, according to T. Nikoloff, the traveller who has just crossed the frontier into Bulgaria, after a tour of investigation of conditions in the adjoining Turkish province.

The young Turks, he asserts, have even surpassed Abdul Hamid, and under their rule a reign of terror prevails which is crushing the whole Christian population to death. Under the pretence of disarmament, Nikoloff declares that the Turkish Government imprisons, beats, tortures, and kills indiscriminately.

Most of the victims are said to be Bulgarians who have figured as leaders in movements for reform, but neither old men, women, nor children are spared. What is taking place in Macedania, Nikoloff says, is not pacification, nor even repression, but extermination of all Christians. Nor are the Bulgarians the only sufferers he adds, Greeks, Albanians, and others are equally oppressed.

The outrages to which they have been subjected have not only failed to frighten the Bulgarians into submission, but promise to drive them into speedy revolution. Whenever they can find arms and experienced leaders, they will be ready. In fact, they are already organizing bands and taking to the fields. In many cases, the Greeks and Albanians, forgetting their traditional animosity toward Bulgaria, are joining these guerilla parties in the struggle against the Turks.

Letters to The Editor

Mr. J. H. Burnham's Reply to Father McColl.

To the Editor of The Times,—

Sir,—The Rev. Father McColl writes a very acceptable letter in your issue of yesterday. He says, "When referring to the right kind of democracy I had in mind the democracy of Great Britain, Canada . . . ." Of course I could not tell that then was the "idea in his mind." If I had thought for one moment that this was "the idea in his mind" I would certainly have agreed with him, and then he would not have felt called upon to say that I was an atheist, an almost unpardonable charge. But I cannot let mere names or persons interfere with the argument, and on looking at it carefully I find that the present situation now agreed upon by both of us is that the church is not in any sense in control of or superior to the State, but that the people rule all things as in Great Britain, Canada, etc. The established, with Father McColl's warm approval, the "sovereignty of the will of the people" (something expressly condemned less than two months ago by the Pope in his decree). The State is, of course, bound to proceed as nearly as possible in conformity with the principles of justice (called by some "eternal justice") and in accordance with the will or law of God, manifested through humanity to humanity, and not, of course, under any pretence to be disregarded. The democracy of Britain and Canada, as a whole or State, takes no thought of the Pope, but of the principles of religion in general, and this Father McColl agrees with. There is no getting away from what he said. The democracy which he admits to be a right democracy does not, as a democracy, recognize any human determining power but itself. To God is God, with no vicar on earth but the people. All this leaves to humanity, otherwise known as the people, the right and privilege of interpreting and following the commands of God the Father, as revealed to every human soul, regardless of the Pope. I confess that I did not know that this was sound Catholic doctrine before, but I am exceedingly pleased to find Father McColl say that it is sound, then, of the people's being in any way beholden to the Pope or under his rule and guidance; they are beholden only to the principles of eternal law and justice, the divine ideal. With this I agree, and while it is not what the Pope says in his recent decree, it leaves one free to say in future that Father McColl is with the people, whatever the Pope may say. That my conclusion from his letter is a fair estimate of Father McColl's position is established by the fact that a large number of people called it "a complete capitulation," "throwing up the sponge," "abandoning papal claims," etc., etc. But I do not wish to use any word of a triumphant nature. I am satisfied that he believes in the right of the people to rule themselves. The "sovereignty of the will of the people" through condemned in the "Le Sillon" decree of the Pope of a few months ago is admitted by Father McColl to be the correct principle. If Father McColl will repeat his letter from the public platform he will be cheered to the echo by every Protestant in the city, including

REARING CHILDREN.

A Chicago physician has promulgated another set of scientific rules for rearing children.

Ordinarily this is the self-imposed task of unmarried ladies of uncertain age and confirmed bachelors, but occasionally when business is dull a medical practitioner will tackle the problem.

The code set forth may be briefly summarized in the single warning: "Don't coddle the child." Good advise, no doubt. But the mistake made by most of the scientific rule-makers is that they do not differentiate between children and vegetables.

The principles involved in the successful cultivation of cabbages or string beans may be codified and followed with more or less success, due allowance being made for differences of soil and climate. But when it comes to following hard-and-fast rules in the rearing of children—that is quite another matter. No two children ever were or ever will be alike in temperament, disposition, moral sense, or physical qualities. What is coddling for one would be almost ill treatment and neglect for another.

What is most needed in scientific rules for the training of parents—rules that will permit them to know and understand their own offspring.

TRAVELLING PUBLIC PAY.

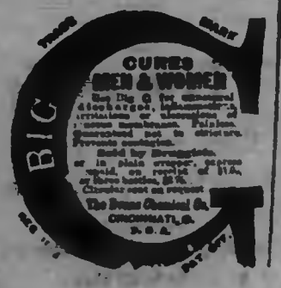
Large interests, probably either C.P.R. or Canadian Northern, are reported to have recently purchased property just north of the C.P.R. right-of-way in North Toronto worth $500,000. The prices paid are reported as being in many cases more than double the previously estimated value of the property.

This means an extra $250,000 or probably $500,000, when the rest of the property in secured, of extra capital on which the public will have to pay dividends.

We believe that folks who have no desire to move or sell should receive some compensation for their trouble, but isn't 100 per cent. pretty high, especially when the public have to pay it?

The man who lives in a rented house, by the way, receives notice to quit, has all the trouble, and the owner receives the compensation.

Why not have a law fixing the purchase price for expropriation at, say 120 per cent. of assessed value? This would give ample compensation, save the public millions of dollars, and at the same time induce property owners to see that their property was assessed at its fair value, neither too high for fear of taxes, nor too low for fear of expropriation.



THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

Then the young officer saw, too late, that he was surrounded by a ring of steel. Yet he strove to rally his escort, got four of the men to obey his command, and, placing himself in front, led them at the vague forms that blocked the road to Cawnpore. In the confusion, he might have cut his way through had not Nejdi unfortunately jumped over a wounded man at the instant Frank was aiming a blow at a sowar. His sword swished harmlessly in the air, and his adversary, hitting out wildly, struck the Englishman's head with the forte of his saber. The violent shock dazed Malcolm for a second, but all might yet have been well were it not for an unavoidable accident. A sepoy's bayonet became entangled in the reins. In the effort to free his weapon the man gave such a tug to the bit on the near side that the Arab crossed his fore-legs and fell, throwing his rider violently. Frank landed fairly on his head. His turban saved his neck, but could not prevent a momentary concussion. For a while he lay as one dead.

When he came to his senses he found that his arms were tied behind his back, that he had been carried under a big tree, and that a tall native, in the uniform of a subadar of the 2nd Bengal Cavalry, was holding a lantern close to his face.

"I am an officer of the 3rd Cavalry," he said, trying to rise. "Why do you, a man in my own service, suffer me to be bound?"

"You are no officer of mine, Feringhi," was the scornful reply. "You are safely trussed because we thought it better sport to dangle you from a bough than to stab you where you dropped. Quick, there, with that heel rope, Abdul Huq. We have occupation. Let us hang this crow here to show other Nazarenes what they may expect. And we have no time to lose. The Nana may appear at any moment."

CHAPTER V.

A Woman Intervenes

That ominous order filled Malcolm's soul with a fierce rage. He was not afraid of death. The wine of life ran too strongly in his veins that craven fear should so suddenly quell the excitement of the combat that had ended thus disastrously. But his complete helplessness—the fact that he was to be hanged like some wretched felon by men wearing the uniform of which he had been so proud—these things stirred him to the verge of frenzy.

Oddly enough, in that moment of anguish he thought of Hodson, the man who rode alone from Kurnaul to Meerut. Why had Hodson succeeded? Would Hodson, knowing the exceeding importance of his mission, have turned to rescue a servant or raise a fallen horse? Would he not rather have dashed on like a thunderbolt trusting to the superior speed of his charger to carry him clear of his assailants? And Nejdi! What had become of that trusted friend? Never before, Arab though he was, had he been guilty of a stumble. Perhaps he was shot, and sobbing out his gallant life on the road, almost at the foot of the tree which would be his master's gallows.

A doomed man indulges in strange reveries. Malcolm was almost as greatly concerned with Nejdi's imagined fate as with his own desperate plight when the trooper who answered to the name of Abdul Huq brought the heel-rope that was to serve as a halter.

The man was a Paythan, swarthy, lean, and sinewy, with the nose and eyes of a bird of prey. Though a hawk would show mercy to a fledgling sparrow sooner than this cut throat to a captive, the robber instinct in him made him pause before he tied the fatal noose.

"Have you gone through the Nazarene's pockets, sirdar?" he asked.

"No," was the impatient answer. "Of what avail is it? These dhota sahibs have no money. And Cawnpore awaits us."

"Nevertheless, every rupee counts. And he may be carrying letters of value to the Maharajah. Once he is swinging up there he will be out of reach, and our caste does not permit us to defile our hands by touching a dead body."

While the callous ruffian was delivering himself of this curious blend of cynicism and dogma, his skilled fingers were rifling Malcolm's pockets. First he drew forth a sealed packet addressed to Sir Hugh Wheeler. He recognized the government envelope and, though neither of the pair could read English, Abdul Huq handed it to his leader with an "I told-you-so" air.

It was in Frank's mind to revile the men, but, most happily, he composed himself sufficiently to resolve that he would die like an officer and a gentleman, while the last words on his lips would be a prayer.

The next document produced was the Persi-Arabic scrawl which purported to be a "safe-conduct" issued by Bahadur Shah, whom the rebels acclaimed as their ruler. Until that instant, the Englishman had given no thought to it. But when he saw the look of consternation that flitted across the face of the subadar when his eyes took in the meaning of the writing, despair yielded to hope, and he managed to say thickly:

"Perhaps you will understand now that you ought to have asked my business ere you proposed to hang me out of hand."

His active brain devised a dozen expedients to account for his presence in Bithoor, but the native officer was far too shrewd to be beguiled into setting his prisoner at liberty. After re-reading the pass, to make sure of its significance, the rebel leader curtly told Abdul Huq and another sowar to bring the Feringhi into the presence of the Maharajah, by which title he evidently indicated Nana Sahib.

The order was, at least, a reprieve, and Malcolm breathed more easily. He even asked confidently about his horse and the members of his escort. He was given no reply save a muttered curse, a command to hold his tongue, and an angry tug at his tied arms.

It is hard to picture the degradation of such treatment of a British officer by a native trooper. The Calcutta brahmin who was taunted by a Lascar—a warrior-priest insulted by a social leper—scarce flinched more keenly under the jibe than did Mal

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 1¼ miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayniete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Nictoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

WHY JOHN SMITH DID NOT JOIN

An Analysis of the Broken Promise That He Would Go Into a Certain Scheme

Six men worked six hours to get John Smith to go into a scheme with them.

"All right," he said at last, "I'll come in with you. I'll send you a cheque in the morning."

A fine upstanding man was John Smith, with an eye like an eagle and a jaw like iron, and when he said that he would join the other six he hit the table such a blow that it rattled the inkwells.

But when the six congregated together the next morning to enjoy John Smith's cheque they found instead a letter from him stating that after further reflection he had decided not to go into the scheme after all.

Whereupon the six communed together and sought for whys and wherefores.

Said the first, the youngest, and the most impassioned:

"We didn't appeal enough to his enthusiasm. Hang it all, that's the thing—enthusiasm. We confined ourselves too much to facts and figures. The multiplication table's all right, but it never set the world on fire. Hereafter we must put a little more excitement into the game. Carry them off their feet, sweep them along with us—that's the thing to do."

"We ought to have made it clearer that he couldn't lose. A man can go to business every hour of the day. It's easy. But what he is looking for is a proposition where he can't lose. Make him think it's an opportunity instead of a risk. People aren't taking risks, but they are grasping opportunities."

Said the third, a cynic:

"The trouble is this: We didn't show him plainly enough he was going to make something out of nothing. That's the only thing that hits them. We all have the same streak in us. We are trying to do the same thing ourselves. We put the thing forward to him as a legitimate business proposition. Well, that isn't good enough. We've got to look sly and crafty, and show him how we can get money for nothing. Then we've got to tap our nose and wink and say, 'Want to come in, and get some of it?' That's the only thing they'll fall for."

Said the fourth, a facetious member: "The whole thing was pitched in too serious a key. We went at him too earnestly. We kept him under a tension all the time, and as soon as he got away the tension broke and the whole thing was off. After this we must get up a laugh once in a while to relieve the strain. Tell 'em a few jokes, tell 'em a few stories, make 'em think we're all a lot of good fellows enjoying ourselves. No more funereal stuff for us, or we'll lose them all, just the same as we lost Smith. You mark my words."

Said the fifth, the optimist:

"Perhaps it's just as well that Smith didn't come in. He's such a big, domineering sort of man that he might have given us a lot of trouble. Still, for future guidance, I think we dwelt too much upon the dark side of things. We thought we were covering all possible contingencies, but, as a matter of fact, we were only suggesting unpleasant thoughts to his mind. We told how we could beat our competitors, instead of reassuring him this only raised the fact that we would meet with competition. We told him how we could handle the shop-worn stuff, instead of encouraging him, this only suggested to his mind the fact that there would be shop-worn stuff. And so on. All the same, I must say that I thought we had him sure."

Said the sixth, a man of years and wisdom:

"No, gentlemen, you're all wrong. We had him all right till he got home. Our trouble is this. We are arguing with the wrong man. We ought to have taken the matter up with MRS. John Smith, that's all."—New York Sun.

WHEN THE BABY CRIES

It Is Trying to Speak, and Parents Should Try to Understand

A vigorous protest against treating the baby "as if he were an unmitigated fool" is entered by Florence Hull Winterburn in the July number of The American Baby. "We assume," she says, "that when the baby cries he needs to be hushed, just as if the noise he makes were a sort of automatic creaking from loosened screws. He is taken up, and jerked up and down or rocked to distract his attention, and fairly bullied into silence. It really seems as if we might give baby credit for a little sense; his note of trouble may mean something after all."

The baby's cries, Mrs. Winterburn asserts, are the baby's language, and we ought to take some pains to learn what it means. "A lusty, vigorous cry," she asserts, "indicates temper and wilfulness," and is never heard until the baby has learned to be angry either through seeing signs of ill temper in others or through being unnecessarily thwarted in his natural impulses. Suffering has its characteristic notes, and there is the sharp cry of pain, varying from the full, loud cry of colic to the terrible, sharp, sudden shriek indicating brain trouble. Catching, breathless, cries, accompanied with a flushed face and hurried breathing, indicate some trouble of the lungs. Whimpering and fretfulness suggest intestinal disorders."

DEATH AFFECTS FAIR

Jack Stewart, the twelve-year-old and only son of Mrs. W. R. Stewart, of the Stewart ranch, Alberta, died suddenly recently of heart failure. Thirty five horses brought in from the ranch for Clarksholm Fair did not, owing to the sad accident, compete.

ESCAPES BEAR HUG

Harold Lozo, of Star City, Sask., Avoids Fatal Hug by Jumping Into a Creek

Harold Lozo, a lad of thirteen, living with his uncles, the Fleming brothers, near Star City, Saskatchewan, was attacked by a bear. He had been sent on an errand to a neighbor's, was returning, and had just reached a bridge over a creek which crosses the farm. Hearing something behind him the lad turned in time to see a huge black bear at his very heels. Harold drew his knife and had it half open when the bear rose on its hind legs and grabbed for him, knocking the knife out of his hand. The boy immediately dropped into the creek, and being a swimmer, dived under the bridge, bravely fooling the bear and thus saving his life.

Apparently the bear had been lying in a bluff near the trail, and seeing the boy pass, had followed him, catching him at the bridge. Bruin gave two or three growls of disappointment and finally walked away. Chase was immediately given but no bear could be found.

The berries being scarce this year, bears are getting bold and hungry. Harold's overalls and shirt were torn by the claws of the animal, otherwise he is none the worse for his adventure.

OYSTER SHELL SCALES

While looking over several young orchards in the southern districts of Hastings, Mr. O. D. McIntosh, Stirling, says he finds a great many dead and dying trees. Many of them are badly affected with oyster shell scales and the egg masses of the apple tent are very abundant, and unless something is done before next summer the trees will no doubt suffer severely. The green apple aphis is a serious pest this summer. The growth of young wood this year, in most cases, is excessive, and it will be well for the trees if they are headed back some for next year. Early spring is probably the best time to do the pruning of young trees. It is while trees are young that they get their shape to the grower's liking, and those who are buying trees will do well to get two-year-old trees, and then see that they get a good start. The Codling Worm is getting in its work this year in the old orchards, with the result that very many wormy apples may be seen in most of the old orchards. If the only losses were the wormy apples, it would not be so bad, but the extra expense of picking and sorting to get a few good ones very materially affects the price the buyers can afford to pay for apples.

A LONG TRAIN

Pennsylvania Engine Hauled 120 Steel Cars

A monster train of loaded cars of over a mile and a quarter in length was hauled over the middle division of the Pennsylvania road between Altoona and Harrisburg, August 18. The train was made up of 120 steel cars, all of 100,000 pounds capacity. A year ago a model H. B. engine hauled 105 cars over this division, and at that time the feat was regarded throughout the country as remarkable. The same model engine pulled the train on the last big haul, and representatives from a number of engineering journals, together with Freight Superintendent W. C. Copley, accompanied the train. Telephonic communication was established between the engine and caboose of the train, and the engineer was directed by the officials from the rear end of the train. An average speed of more than 20 miles an hour was maintained over the division.

GIRL AT THE WHEEL

Fast Ride in Motor Boat to Bring Young Man to the City Hospital

Frederick W. Fuess became seriously ill of appendicitis at St Lawrence Park, Ogdensburg, and the doctors stated that an operation must be performed within a few hours if the life of the young man were to be saved. Miss Ruth Remington volunteered the services of her fast yacht, and she had the boat in readiness at the dock. Miss Remington guided the boat to Ogdensburg, and the run of 38 miles was made in the fast time of one hour and twenty minutes. Mr. Fuess was then removed to the city hospital, where Dr. Madill was in readiness, and the operation was performed at once and a life saved.

LOGGERS' NARROW ESCAPE

They Had to Make a Quick Dash From the Flames

One hundred loggers employed in the camp of Hastings' Mills on Wales Island, British Columbia, one hundred miles up the coast, last Saturday, had to board a logging train and through blinding smoke and angry flames seek refuge on the beach at Granite Bay, five miles away. A bush fire, fanned by a west wind, travelled five miles in less than an hour and a half, destroying the valuable standing timber. It cleared a pathway a mile wide. The loggers abandoned their camp after loading their supplies and donkey engine on flat cars. The run to the beach was made down grade at a record speed. They had a close call.

SOME LARGEST THING IN CANADA

Canada has the largest wheat field in the world, the largest elevator and the largest mill, says Oakville Star. The largest lift lock in the world is at Peterboro'. The longest bridge span is being built at Quebec. The largest railway yard in the Empire is at Winnipeg, and the largest collieries in the world are at Nova Scotia. Canada has the most prolific and extensive sea fisheries in the world, the largest silver, nickel and copper mines and the thickest known coal seam in the world.

G.T.R. Receipts.

The Grand Trunk October statement shows that gross receipts of Grand Trunk proper increased £35,000; working expenses increased £36,000. A MODERN CRUSOE

Three Years With "Friday" On An Uninhabited Island

The romance of a modern Robinson Crusoe and the Southern Cross was heard by the President, Sir Samuel Cains, who was asked to pronounce the death of one John Willis Kirkaldy, having occurred in or since the year 1895. Mr. Powers said that Mr. Kirkaldy emigrated to the South Seas in 1885, and had no fixed abode. He traded in New Zealand and the Pacific Islands, and corresponded regularly with his mother and sister until 1894. In that year he was shipwrecked on an unnamed and uninhabited island of the Solomon group, where he remained much like Robinson Crusoe, for three years, when he was rescued by a chance vessel calling at the island for water.

His lordship. Was there a "Man Friday"? (Laughter.)

Counsel.—Yes, in the shape of a gentleman named Van Brun, of whom, however, nothing is known. After they were taken off the uninhabited island, continued counsel, the two went to New Zealand, when the correspondence between Mr. Kirkaldy and his family at home was resumed. He appeared to have suffered from ague contracted on the island, and from Auckland, New Zealand, where he was staying, he wrote saying: "I am a mere wreck of myself." From the Royal Hotel, Sydney, New South Wales, Mr. Kirkaldy wrote saying that he was very ill, and that he had arranged to return to "Man Friday" (Mr. Van Brun), who was in New Zealand, and afterwards was going on "a big trading" in the Solomon islands. Several letters were subsequently written to Mr. Kirkaldy which came back through the Dead Letter Office, and he had not since been heard of.

His lordship.—He does not seem to have found "Friday" on the uninhabited island. "Friday" seems to have gone with him.

Mr. Powers.—Yes; they were wrecked together.

Replying to a letter which the mother wrote to him, Mr. Kirkaldy said: "You say, 'Do settle down; you have roamed enough.' But what inducement have I, a lonely man without ties of any description?"

His lordship.—I see he caught turtles on this unnamed island which he says was about 50 acres in extent. He appears to have described the ague but unfortunately not the island which would be more interesting.

Leave was granted to presume the death as in or since 1895.

TOO WONDERFUL WHISKEY

A Remarkable Description of the Welsh Brand

Mr. Lloyd-George informed the House of Commons that the only distillery set up in Wales has been closed, which from the poetical point of view only is a matter of regret "Some years ago," writes a correspondent, "I visited this establishment and found there quite a big brewing of the 'cratur,' or the Welsh equivalent for the same. But what amused me was a document I came across some time afterwards in which Welsh whiskey was lauded to the skies in the following terms:—"Welsh whiskey is the most wonderful whiskey that ever drove the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes in the brain of man. It is the mingled souls of peat and barley washed white with the waters of the Theweryn. In it you will find the sunshine and shadow that chased each other over the billowy fields, the breath of June, the carol of the lark, the dew of night, the wealth of Summer and Autumn, a rich content, all golden with imprisoned light."

MOVING A CHURCH TOWER

The remarkable feat of moving a church tower to permit of the church being enlarged is being accomplished in Belgium. The work is being done by two engineers, and the vast undertaking occupies only eight workmen. New foundations have been prepared for the tower about thirty feet away, and along the machinery constructed for its transport the tower, which dates from the fourteenth century and is said to weigh 2,700 tons, is now being moved. Already about 8 feet has been covered, and it is hoped that the tower will by the end of the week have reached its new site. Large crowds assemble each day to witness the singular spectacle.

DETRUCTIVE CATERPILLARS

A. C. Wood, Alexandria, brought to The Guardian office in Charlottetown two very large green caterpillars which he found on apple trees in his orchard. They were as thick as one's little finger, and measured from two and a half to three inches in length, green in color and, judging by the way they had feasted on apple-tree leaves placed in the parcel for their benefit, of voracious appetite. The caterpillars proved to belong to the American Emperor Moth, a very large and destructive moth which devours many times its own weight in pear, apple and other fruit tree leaves, and should be destroyed wherever and whenever found.

PROFESSOR AND STUDENT

It is told of an English professor that he once wrote on the blackboard in his laboratory:

"Prof. Atherton is pleased to inform his students that he has this day been appointed honorary physician to her Majesty the Queen."

In the course of the morning he had occasion to leave the room, and found on his return that some student had considerately added to the announcement these words:

"God save the Queen!"

IN THE DARK

Diogenes returned from his search for an honest man.

"Given up the chase?" they inquired.

THE INQUISITIVE WORMS

"I am going for worms," the fisherman said, "but I need no spade. This bottle of soapsuds takes its place." Reaching the hollow, he showered the suds upon the ground, moistening a circle five yards in diameter. Then he sat down on a log and filled his pipe. "They'll be up in a minute or so," he said.

Sure enough, by twos and threes the small black worms poked their tiny heads out of the soil and looked inquisitively about. The fisherman gathered them into a bait can.

"It's their curiosity brings them up," he said. "Woodpeckers knowing this, bring them up by stamping on the soil."

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold - Silver - Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

A RELIABLE REPRESENTATIVE WANTED TO REPRESENT US IN ONTARIO.

CHRISTMAS ROSES

"Canada is a potential Europe." The speaker was Miss Agnes Deans Cameron, an intrepid Canadian, who, accompanied by her niece, Miss Cameron Brown, made, eighteen months ago, a remarkable journey of over 20,000 miles, right to the edge of the Arctic Ocean and to points where the foot of white woman had not before trod. Miss Cameron has been in London on behalf of the Canadian Government, as representative of "The Chronicle." She talked of many Canadian things.

At an early age she began teaching on Vancouver Island, but, disagreeing with the board of management, was discharged. Within a fortnight she had been elected a member of the board which had discharged her!

From relating the experience of public life Miss Cameron passed, by a natural transition, to talk of the woman's suffrage question.

"Do I believe in woman's right to the franchise? Why not? In Canada woman is as much a factor in the country's development and destiny as the man is, and has it in her power to do as much as the man to lay the foundation of a strong commonwealth on sane lines. We have been taught all our lives that the sins of the fathers follow to the third and fourth generation; is it not reasonable to suppose that the virtues of the mothers do sometimes descend in direct line?"

The Size of Canada

When speaking of her native British Columbia she is most enthusiastic.

"The average Englishman," she said, "has but an inadequate idea of the size of Canada. British Columbia is large enough for us to place within it side by side at the same time two Englands, three Irelands, and four [illegible] when you have these fine countries within the borders of this one province, there is no danger of their dropping out again or spilling themselves into the Pacific Ocean, for we still have 5,000 square miles uncovered."

The immense possibilities suggested by this statement of fact led naturally to some questions about Miss Cameron's record journey to the Arctic Ocean. Following the mighty waterways of the Athabasca River, Athabasca Lake, Slave River, Great Slave Lake, and the mighty Mackenzie, the explorer and her plucky young companion returned to civilization by the Peace River and the Lesser Slave River. The journey occupied six months, and was full of exciting and interesting experiences. At the Fond du Lac extremity of Athabasca Lake, and again at Old Fort Rae, on the north shore of the Great Slave Lake, the explorers touched points where white women had never been before. At the very edge of the Arctic Ocean Miss Cameron made an intimate study of two tribes of Eskimos of magnificent physique.

Roses at Christmas

As for the agricultural possibilities of these far northern regions, the explorer said: "The wheat that took the highest prize in the World's Fair at Philadelphia was grown in the little garden of the Grey Nuns at Fort Chippewyan on Lake Athabasca in about the same latitude as the Orkney Islands. At Fort Vermilion on the Peace River in the same latitude the Hudson Bay Company maintain a flour mill. Yellow harvests mature at a point 500 miles due north of any existing railway. I found the blue flowers of the wild flax at Fort Good Hope on the Arctic Circle, and at the delta of the Mackenzie, on the very edge of the Arctic Ocean, the air was heavy with the perfume of wild roses.

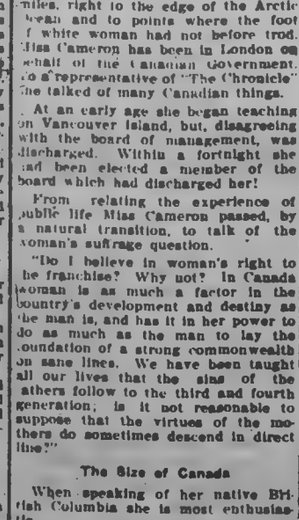
"In my native city of Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, it is no unusual thing to pluck roses in the open air at Christmas time. The Japan current is kind to us, ensuring for all south of Vancouver Island the most equable climate in the world. Our present Queen, on passing through Victoria on her Empire-circling tour, declared it to be the most English city outside of England. Indeed, the whole of British Columbia appeals particularly to English folk as being very much like home."

Gold Rush Prospects

Stewart brothers were the original locators of the town site of Stewart, and are still the heaviest owners of realty there.

Of the gold rush to that locality Miss Cameron said: "The mining is not 'poorman's', or placer mining. The ore is a free milling ore. There is no doubt about that. Mr. D. D. Mann, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway, who probably knows more about the Portland Canal coun try than anyone else, is reported from Montreal as stating that the ore is straight free-milling ore. Portland Canal is without doubt the most profitable gold-field on the map to-day.

"The fact which English people have not yet grasped is that the Portland Canal mines are not a thing of to-day or of yesterday; they have been established and have been producing for over four years. The strike which we have recently heard of is a very rich one indeed, but it is neither the first, nor will it be the last, to be chronicled on Portland Canal."



THE WORLD'S SHEEP FLOCKS

Australia leads the world in sheep farming, according to the following statement prepared by Vice-Consul Henry D. Baker of Sydney, showing the number of sheep in the countries leading in this industry: Australia, 87,643,246; Argentina, 77,581,100; Russia, 58,510,523; United States, 54,421,000; United Kingdom, 30,011,823; New Zealand, 22,149,053; India, 18,039,181; France, 17,461,379; Spain, 16,119,061; Cape of Good Hope, 14,848,795; Uruguay, 13,915,796; Italy, 10,877,000; Austria-Hungary, 10,743,707. The estimated capital value of the Australian flocks is $320,352,000, and the annual gross output of the flocks is estimated at 75 per cent. of the value.

FOR HOMELY GIRL ONLY

"I want a hammock that will not break down," said the fair maid, addressing the floorwalker of the department store.

"I'm sorry, miss," he rejoined, "but we haven't any in stock that we could guarantee in your case."

"What do you mean by 'my case?'" asked the young lady.

"Just this," answered the party of the floorwalking part: "If you were a homely girl we could guarantee any hammock you might select."

KILLED BY A BEE STING

While gathering mushrooms at Kirdford, Sussex, England, where he was spending his holidays, Mr. Wm. Mortimer Rhind, was stung on the forehead by a bee, and in half an hour he was dead. The medical verdict is that death was the result of shock. Mr. Rhind, ever since he was a lad, having had an abnormal dread of bees. He was severely stung by one when at school.

BITTEN

Standing by the entrance of a large estate in the suburbs of Glasgow are two huge dogs carved out of granite. An Englishman, going by in a hack, thought he would have some fun with his Scotch driver.

"How often, Jock, do they feed those two big dogs?"

"Whenever they bark, sir," was the straightforward reply.

PAWNED FOR DEBT

"Widespread Custom" in West Africa Discussed in the House of Commons

A question was asked by Sir George White in the House of Commons as to evidence given at the recent Nigeria Liquor Traffic Inquiry that "thousands of children are pawned by their parents for gin, and kept in a condition of domestic slavery for many years." In reply, Colonel Seely, Under Secretary for the Colonies, said: "As regards the widespread custom throughout West Africa of pledging or pawning persons—not necessarily children—as security for debt, I cannot do better than quote from the recent report of a Committee, composed entirely of native gentlemen, on the laws and customs of the Yoruba country: 'When a lender advances money to a borrower, he asks the latter to provide an acceptable surety, who is responsible in default of payment by the borrower. The borrower is drawn into service for the lender one day in the week, the service representing interest for the money advanced; he lives in his own house. But if a child is provided as a substitute, he is to live with and work for the lender as his child, the consideration for the loan being that the borrower is deprived of, and the lender enjoys the services of, the borrower's child. But by this arrangement the child does not become the slave of the lender. The child does not forfeit his rights and privileges as a free born. He can behave to the lender precisely in the same way as to his own father; indeed, he enjoys more freedom with the former, for he can at any time refuse to live with him. On the other hand the lender is responsible to the public authorities for injury to the health of the child and for his death.

"The custom, although not involving slavery, is discouraged as far as possible by the Government, and appears from the evidences of Father Coquard, a missionary of nineteen years' experience in the country, to be becoming less prevalent. Should cases occur in which the person pledged is put into a condition of servitude, the offenders are punishable under the law against slave dealing. Certain statements were made by witnesses before Sir Mackenzie Chalmers' Committee as to the pawning of children for gin, but no evidence whatever was put forward to show that the practice had more connection with debts for liquor than any other debts. Indeed one of the native witnesses, Bishop Johnson, questioned on his point, replied, 'People who drink certainly get into debt more than others, but the habit is general all over the country, whether they drink or not. It is an institution in the country.'"

MELVILLE

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville ?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many fold in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark ?

Melville—A Distributing Centre ; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognised by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of trensportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constrdcted from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melvill as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

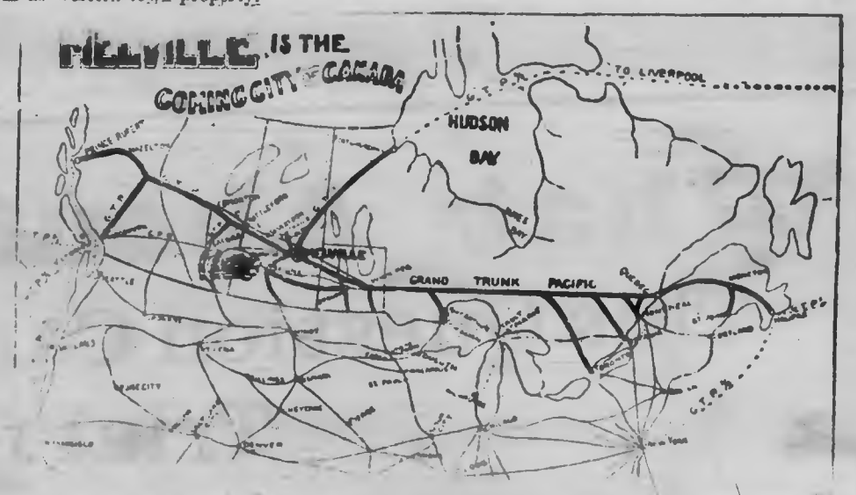
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by warehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enfoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West of Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more promising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

Let Us Tell What We Have For You at Melville

Much serious thought was given to the location of our property before it was platted. Our chief consideration was, of course, to choose that part towards which the tide of both business and home-making was flowing. Also we wanted to keep as close as possible to the railway station and the business centre. In Melville View we believe we have accomplished both objects. It is THE LOCATION. Melville View represents what is today, probably the best investment in the very best district in Western Canada.

We offer you lots at prices ranging from $50 to $100 each, with $10 extra for corners. The terms are one-fifth cash, balance $2.50 per lot per month with interest at 6 per cent, or 7 per cent discount for all cash. Wall Maps in Demand.

Rev. Father Maguire of Emily, was in the city yesterday on business, and called at the Times office where he purchased three of the handsome new wall maps of Victoria County which has just been issued from this office. The reverend father evidently knows a good thing when he sees it.

Child Scalded.

What might have been a serious accident occurred yesterday morning at 185 Simcoe street, when the little two and a half year old son of Mr. Samuel Feinberg got scalded about the arms and breast. The little one was sitting in a high chair near the stove and by some means or other upset a small pot of hot water. Some of the hot water splashed onto the child and scalded it about the breast but it was not found necessary to have a physician. The little one is now getting ob fine.

Bowling at Y.M.C.A.

Y.M.C.A. bowling alleys were the scene of a very close and exciting game on Thursday night, when High Rollers and Lancashire Trio met for the first time. The first game went to the Tri without much serious opposition, but in the second game the High Rollers proved the right to the name and hung up a new team score for the tournament and won the second game handily. The third game was very close and was only decided on the last balls, the Lancashire Tri winning the last game by seven pins. This leaves the trio and Miggets ties for first place in the league.

In the intermediate basket ball league the Burglars had no pity for the Shamrocks and robbed them of another game in spite of their protests. Score, Burglars 30, Shamrocks 0. Sawbones and Rowdies postponed their games.

Intermediate Hockey Team Do Good Work.

The Peterborough Intermediate O. H.A. team had its first real workout of the season with two full teams on the ice, and the way the players performed brought a smile to the faces of the executive members present, while there was a big bunch of satisfaction among the couple of hundred railbirds who watched the doings. A practice game was played with the two teams working at top speed and showing splendid form and condition for so early in the season. There should be no difficulty in selecting a team that will go some distance and it was no wonder that the management chortled with glee during the practice. Fred Kelly, the former Ingersoll boy was at right wing and opened the eyes of the fans with his clever stick-handling, great speed and pretty shooting; while Sorel, a husky youngster who played with the Milton team last year cavorted on the opposite side of the rink and uncovered speed, the ability to stick in his position and a splendid shot from the boards.

POCKET PICKED

While Drunk William Kelly Claims He was Robbed of $30.00—Vags Sent Up.

Wm. Kelly again appeared in the Police Court on a charge of getting drunk while on the black list. He pleaded guilty, and was fined $10.00 or one month in goal. He had been in the shanties for the last two months and came to the city a few days ago. He got drunk and was found in one of the hotel yards last night. He claims that when he came to the city he had $30.00 in his pocket. The right hand pocket of his trousers had been ripped, open indicating the use of a knife. whatever money he had was stolen. He could not pay his fine, so will hang up his stocking in Castle Nesbitt th a Christmas.

An old man named Andrew Fawcett was given six months on the bill also. He had no home and no place to go, was in bad health and in poor circumstances generally, so His Worship, Magistrate Dumble, deemed the above the only course to pursue.

Thomas Hoyland, another sixty-three-year-old "Weary Willie," was hoisted for three months on the hill. He is well known to the local police. He claimed to have worked in the C. G.E. until December, when his health gave out, and since that time has been unable to work. He was here quite a while ago and left for the West, going to Winnipeg, where he spent a while, but at last come back.

WILSON NOT GUILTY

After being out one hour and forty minutes, the jury in the case of Joseph Wilson, who was charged with burning down the barns of Ezra McFadden in June last and whose trial has occupied the attention of the County Court for the past two days, returned a verdict of "not guilty." The jury retired at twenty minutes to five and returned to the court room at twenty minutes after six. His Honor in discharging the prisoner, told him that he might consider himself fortunate. This should be a lesson, and in view of the fact that several witnesses had stated that the accused'd only fault was drinking in consideration for his wife and family, he should give it up and do what was right. When court resumed yesterday afternoon the prisoner was called.

The prisoner Joseph Wilson, went into the box and made a complete denial of the charge of burning McFadden's barns. He remembered the incident with Mrs. McFadden, but after he went to his home about eight o'clock that night he never was away from it until next day. He knew nothing of the fire until Sunday morning, when his brother Norman came and told him. He did not remember the conversation With Zedak Hales.

This was the last witness called, and Mr. O'Connell then proceeded with his address to the jury, followed by Crown Attorney Wood's and His Honor's addresses.

DEMAND LOWER TARIFF—FRENCH AND ONTARIO DELEGATES PRESENTED SEPARATE MEMORIALS.

Lengthy Resolutions Were Submitted —Dessent From French Societies— Over Eight Hundred in Delegation.

Ottawa, Dec. 16. The Canadian farmers this morning, eight hundred strong, marched to Patliament Hill and presented their demands for reciprocal trade for Government ownership of many utilities and for advanced legislation calculated to be a benefit to the great agricultural interests in Canada.

In the history of deputations to Ottawa, and they come thick and fast, none has ever approached in came, until he quite lost control of size or in importance that which filled the chamber and galleries of the House of Commons this morning. There were men from the east, from the central Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, together with hardy pioneers of the west and those of more recent arrival. There were English, Scotch, Irish and French elbowing with representatives of the Scandinavian race.

GATHERED IN OPERA HOUSE

Mobilizing at the Grand Opera House, bright and early, the farmers marched six abreast to the Commons chamber and the spectacular showing attracted much attention. Reaching the hill they were photographed and then entering the House they filled the Commons chamber floor and galleries. The House had had a late sitting and the farmers were seated before members had well awakened.

They trooped into the Commons chamber in an unending stream and at once appropriated the seats of the members save a few early birds, such as George Taylor, Dr. Sproule and a few others who were early in their places. In Sir Willfrid Laurier's seat sat a spectacled gentleman with whiskers and an expression as serious as though he was assuming the full measure of responsibility of the statesman whose place he filled. Another red whiskered gentleman sat where Mr. Borden does. The crowd overflowed to the precincts of the chamber as well as the galleries.

Up in the Senators' gallery a contrast was presented. There a few of the captains of industry were seated. Among them were Mr. W. H. Rowley, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association; Senator Melvin Jones, head of the Massey-Harris concern, C. C. Ballantyne, of Montreal, and several others. They followed the proceedings very closely.

Adjourns for the Holidays.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 15.—The Dominion House of Commons adjourns today for its customary holiday recess. It will reassemble in the second week of January.

Edison's royalties on moving picture machines alone amount to over $8,000 a week. No wonder he finds it hard to believe there can be a more admirable world than this.

What About Brain Food?

This Question Came Up in the Recent Trial for Libel.

A "Weekly" printed some criticisms of the claims made for our foods. It evidently did not fancy our reply printed in various newspapers, and brought suit for libel. At the trial some interesting facts came out.

The following facts, however, were quite clearly established:

Analysis of brain by an unquestionable authority, Geoghegan, shows of Mineral Salts, Phosphoric Acid and Potash combined Phosphate of Potash), 2.91 per cent of the total, 5.33 of all Mineral Salts.

Considerable more than one-half of Phosphate of Potash.

Analysis of Grape-Nuts shows: Potassium and Phosphorus, (which join and make Phosphate of Potash,) is considerable more than one-half of all the mineral salts in the food.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey, an authority on the constituent elements of the body, says: "The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, Potassium Phosphate (Phosphate of Potash.) This salt unites with albumen and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve fluid or the gray matter of the brain. Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve fluid, but Potassium Phosphate is the chief factor, and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life."

Further on he says: "The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

The natural conclusion is that if Phosphate of Potash is the needed mineral element in brain and you use food which does not contain it, you have brain fag because its daily loss is not supplied

On the contrary, if you eat food known to be rich in this element, you place before the life forces that which nature demands for brain-building.

In the trial a sneer was uttered because Mr. Post announced that he had made years of research in this country and some clinics of Europe, regarding the effect of the mind on digestion of food.

But we must be patient with those who sneer at facts they know nothing about.

Mind does not work well on a brain that is broken down by lack of nourishment.

Worry, anxiety, fear, hate, &c., &c., directly interfere with or stops the flow of Ptyalin, the digestive juice of the mouth, and also interferes with the flow of the digestive juices of stomach and pancreas.

Therefore, the mental state of the individual has much to do (more than suspected) with digestion.

This trial has demonstrated:

That Brain is made of Phosphate of Potash as the principal Mineral Salt, added to albumen and water.
That Grape-Nuts contains that element as more than one-half of all its mineral salts.

A man who sneers at "Mind" sneers at the best and least understood part of himself. That part which some folks believe links us to the Infinite.

Mind asks for a healthy brain upon which to act, and Nature has defined a way to make a healthy brain and renew it day by day as it is used up from work of the previous day.

Instructive Lecture to Local Boy Scouts

The subject taken up by Dr. McPherson in his lecture to the Boy Scouts on Saturday evening was "First Aid in Case of Fractured Bones."

The doctor explained the difference between simple, compound and complicated fractures, and showed the method of folding broad, medium and narrow bandages, and their different uses. He then referred to the use of splints and dwelt on the necessity of preventing motion in the injured parts. To accomplish this in the case of fracture of the arm or leg it would be necessary to use long splints reaching from above the joint next above the injury, to the joint next below it. For instance, suppose the fracture was between the knee and the ankle, the splints should reach above the knee and below the ankle joint.

The doctor stated that the collar bone was the one most frequently and most easily broken, and the fracture was caused by coming down heavily upon the point of the shoulder. He then illustrated upon a living subject, the proper method of reducing the fracture and applying the bandages.

Scout Master J. W. Neale, then took up the question of the delegates to the Ottawa conference on Boys' Work, and it seems likely that the Peterborough Boy Scouts will be well represented there.

Man Tortured by a Gang of Tramps

BODY FROM ANKLES TO NECK IS A MASS OF BURNS AND AND FACE AND FEET FROST BITTEN.

"Burned in Fire by Men" Was All Dilliher Could Say Before He Lapsed in Unconsciousness.

New York, Dec. 17.—With his body from ankles to neck a mass of burns, and his face and feet frost bitten, Edward Dilliher of Scranton, Pa., is lying in the hospital at North Hudson, N.J., to-day, in a serious condition. Dilliher absolutely stripped of clothing, ran into the barroom of a hotel in Granton, N.J., last night, and fell unconscious to the floor. When he revived momentarily he was only able to tell his name, and murmur meekly:

"Burned in fire by men."

Dilliher then relapsed into unconsciousness and later became delirious. He will probably die.

The man's terrible condition and his disjointed utterances gave rise to the belief that he had fallen victim to a band of railroad tramps, who had tortured and robbed him, and left him in the open to die from his injuries and from exposure. The police to-day are working on this theory, and seeking all possible clues as to the identity of his torturers.

GETS SEVEN DAYS.

Robert Keagan Out on Suspended Sentence.

Robert Keagan and Albert Meakins appeared before His Honor Judge Huycke at the County Court Friday afternoon on a charge of stealing seven bottles of gin from the wholesale store of Alex. Elliott. Both pleaded not guilty, being represented by Mr. G. N. Gorhon of O'Connell & Gorhon. The prosecution was conducted by Crown Attorney R. E. Wood. Considerable evidence was taken, several witnesses being called. However, it was not sufficient to prove the prisoners' innocence, and His Honor convicted the two on the charge of theft preferred against them. In the case of Keagan he was allowed to go on suspended sentence and in Meakins' case, on account of his youth, he was only sentenced to seven days in the county jail. His Honor promising to allow him out the day before Christmas.

TURKEYS FOR TORONTO.

Toronto Buyers at the Market on Saturday.

On the market Saturday morning were representatives of the J. A. McLean Produce Company, Toronto, Ont., who bought up turkeys in large quantities for their company. Their object in so doing was to get as many dressed fowl as possible, and during the Christmas week will sell the same to the material advantage the company to the dealers and storekeepers.

Mr. Fennell, who was the chief buyer, reported an excellent business. At twelve o'clock he had purchased an immense number of all kinds of fowl, which he had piled up in one corner of the market hall.

As it was well advertised around the rural sections that the above mentioned purchasers would be in the market, the farmers naturally expected to make a good thing out of it, and consequently asked prices for their produce at away above what they ordinarily would have done. However, the standard price of 18c per pound was reached, and at that price the majority of the fowl was purchased, and the buying was very profitable for the produce firm, and also the farmers.

COALITIONISTS GAINED TWO

Unionists Gain Montgomery and Banbury is a Gain for the Liberals.

London, Dec. 17.—The latest returns give the Liberals, Unionists and Nationalists each another gain, leaving the coalitionists with an advantage of two in the totals of the gains and losses. Montgomery Burough has reverted to Unionism, while the Banbury division of Oxfordshire turned out the Unionist member, Capt. R. B. Brassey, and seated the Liberal candidate, Eustace Fiennes.

Queen Mother's Place in Coronation Parade

London, Dec. 17.—There is no truth whatever in the statement that Queen Alexandra will not attend the coronation. The Duke of Norfolk already has the Queen-mother's position at the historic ceremony allotted, of course, strictly according to precedence. Her majesty's position as a member of the British royal family is as clearly defined as that of all other members of the blood royal.

FRENCH-CANADIAN HAD 35 CHILDREN

Was Probably the Largest Family on Record.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—What is probably the largest family on record in the Province of Quebec is left by J. B. Grouix, of Hull, who died in that city yesterday afternoon, after an extended illness, at the age of 77 years.

Deceased came to Ottawa when it was known by the old name of "Bytown." He married, and by his first wife had one child. On her death he married again, and by this wife 21 children were born. When she died over twenty years ago, he again entered into the bonds of matrimony and by his third wife, who survives, the number of children was increased by 13 more.

MOTHER OF LITTLE FREDDIE VANSTONE TELLS AWFUL STORY

HOW HER SON WAS KICKED AND BEATEN TO DEATH BY HER FATHER.

Tears and Entreaties were Alike Useless—Enraged Man Insisted That Child Should Count Up to Twenty.

Goderich, Ont., Dec. 17.—The evidence given by Mrs. Vanstone at the inquest into the death of her son, Freddie, pointed strongly towards the probability that the murder was committed during a fit of temporary insanity. She stated that early in the evening shortly before eight o'clock her husband got Freddie started to put down the figures on a slate from 1 to 10, but he didn't get them down to suit the father, who threatened to beat him if he didn't do it. The little fellow didn't succeed, and according to the testimony of the witness, Vanstone declared: "You are going to put the figures down from 1 to 20 or I'll know the reason why." The father then hit the boy over the head with his fist, blackening his ear, and causing a swelling of his face. He continued to urge the boy on and every time he would look at the work he would hit him. Loosing all control of himself the enraged man put the boy down on the floor and kicked him.

The mother here said she interfered and pleaded with her husband to cease, calling attention to the condition of the lad's face and ear, remarking that he would not be able to attend school the next day. "I don't care if he doesn't go out of the house for a week," was the reply.

The witness here said she interfered again, putting her arms about her husband's neck, but his reply was: "You go on. I'm going to make him do it."

I was at this point that the mother received a kick intended for her boy. She had placed herself between her son and the father in an attempt to shield him and received the full force of the blow.

The witness went on to tell how the boy was placed on a chair again in order to make the figures from 1 to 20. He succeeded in making them up to 12, but was unable to write 13. She went to show him how, but the father refused to allow her. The boy was again hit with his father's fist, and then put down on the floor and brutally kicked.

BARN BURNED.

$500 Damage Done, But Cause of the Fire Unknown.

A rather bad fire broke out on Saturday afternoon in the stable at the back of Mr. John Murphy's residence 57 Smith street. The damage was about $500. The fire had been going some time before it was noticed. Mr. Murphy is employed in the Quaker Oats Co. factory and just came home to dinner about one o'clock. They were sitting at the table after dinner when one of the children ran in saying that the barn was on fire. An alarm was quickly sent in from Box 47 and the brigade was soon on the scene. Two lines of hose were soon laid and the firemen set to work in earnest. Two cows, a dog and some kittens, as well as a ton and a half of hay were in the building. The two cows were gotten out, but the dog and all but one of the kittens were suffocated. The barn was almost totally destroyed. The fire started in the back part of the barn in a shed and was under way before the firemen got their. Mr. Murphy stated that it was a miracle that he managed to get the cows out. He said that he was nearly overcome by smoke himself. About $150 insurance was carried on the building. The cause is absolutely unknown, as Mr Murphy said that that no light or fire had been near the barn since 6 o'clock in the morning.

EASTERN TOWNSHIPS BANK.

Fifty-First Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders.

On another page will be found the annual report of the directors of the Eastern Townships Bank which was held at Sherbrooke, P.Q., on the 7th inst.

The affairs of the Bank are in such a flourishing condition that the directors felt warranted in increasing the dividend payable on January 1st next to nine per cent. per annum, the reserve fund having reached 75 per cent. of the paid up capital of the bank. The net profits for the year amounted to $410,696.99. The amount added to the reserve fund was $150,000, making it now $2,250,000.

Collections are reported fair and insolvencies normal in number and importance.

Owing to the large tide of immigration flowing into the country, both from England and the United States the country is growing fast and much money and credit will be required to finance its development.

Our moneyed institutions therefore will be expected to provide increased facilities so long as the rapid development continues.

To attain this object, the directors favor the increase in capital of our present institutions in preference to increasing their number.

In pursuance of this view, the directors recommended that the capital of the bank be increased by $2,000,000, bringing it up to $5,000,000.

This recommendation was favorably received by the shareholders and the directors were authorized to apply to the Treasury Board of Canada for its approval of an increase of capital stock of $2,000,000, raising the capital of the Eastern Townships Bank to $5,000,000.

The new shares to be issued and allotted in such manner and proportion and at such times as the directors of the bank deem proper.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Mr. William Farwell was re-elected president and Mr. H. C. Miner, Vice-President.

BRITAIN SWEPT BY FIERCE GALE

MUCH DAMAGE AND LOSS OF LIFE REPORTED FROM THE SEAPORTS.

Twenty Persons Killed—A Landslide at Whitehaven Buries Alive a Score of People.

Loadon, Dec. 17.—It is thirty years since England has known such floods as are now devastating immense stretches of the country. The deluge of rain practically has been incessant since the first of December, only two days out of the sixteen being without rain. The farmers have suffered heavy losses.

Large areas of territory are so inundated that five-barred gates are covered with water, which, in some parts of the country is 12 feet deep.

In many villages houses have been flooded and the residents are living in the upper storeys.

The outlook in the Thames valley is grave. The river has risen ten inches in the Henley district with in the last 36 hours and flooded enormous areas. Many residents have been irretrievably ruined.

Sharks Devoured Crew of Cutter

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 17.—Theodore Anderson, a seaman, arrived here from Brisbane with a thrilling tale. Anderson was aboard the Hugh Norman when she struck a reef between Broome and Freemantle on the Australian coast. The crew taking to the cutter, were devoured by sharks after it had been swamped and the captain also met the same fate, when after two days drifting he plunged overboard and swam towards land.

Without food for six days, Anderson finally braved the sharks and after swimming for an hour reached a deserted part of the coast and soon found a small settlement where he was cared for.

Much Depravity in the Back Townships

FATHER AND SON BOTH CHARGED WITH INCEST— FATHER CONVICTED.

Gets Sentence of Five Years—Case of Horrible Depravity and Unnatural Conditions Revealed in Court.

Fort France, Dec. 17.—A case of horrible depravity and unnatural conditions was revealed in court before Judge Fitch, when James A. Evans, 60 years of age, was charged with incest with his daughter Elizabeth, and his son, James A. Evans, Jr., charged with a similar offence against his sister Sarah. The family live in Sifton township, a few miles north of Pinewood, and the charge was laid by Eliza Evans, wife of one and mother of the other prisoner.

The evidence showed a terrible condition of affairs. The younger man and his sister were living together in one shack of one room, and the father, mother and other daughter in a similar shack of one room. There are two illegitimate children.

Judge Fitch heard the case in camera. He sentenced the father to five years, and the son was remanded. His lordship in commenting on the disgraceful state of affairs in some of the back townships, said that here was an opportunity for a moral and social reform committee.

Letters to The Editor

Public Library Books.

To the Editor of The Times,—

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly allow me through your columns to bring to the notice of those who have overdue books belonging to the Public Library, the absolute necessity of returning them at once to the Librarian for the purposes of cataloging and classification. The advertisement asking for overdue books to be returned which was lately inserted in all three papers in this city has resulted in about eighteen volumes being brought back to the Library. There are hundreds of books missing from the shelves many of which of course have succumbed to the wear and tear consequent on usage, but there are very many in the houses of our citizens which have been held for months and years, and in the interests of all readers should be returned at once. Some valuable reference books are also missing, second or third volumes of a set, which, if not returned, will render the series to which they belong comparatively valueless.

I am sure it only necessary to bring this matter in a proper light before our citizens to ensure the return of whatever volumes may be in their possession.

Yours, Etc.

Rev. Father McColl's Reply to Mr. J. H. Burnham.

To the Editor of The Times,—

Dear Sir,—Just a word in reference to British, Canadian and United States democracy. I maintain that in none of these countries does the constitution admit the absolute sovereignty of the people, which, in itself, is political atheism. Mr. Burnham has evidently not grasped what "sovereignty of the people" means. In the sense condemned by the Pope it means the people claiming to rule independently of God or Eternal Justice. This principle all Christians must condemn as well as the Pope, because it makes the people Gods. They who maintain the sovereignty of the people in this sense are, therefore, atheists in principle, as for example: Red Republicans and anarchists. Now this is plain and simple reasoning. The democracies of Great Britain, Canada, United States, etc., do not maintain this, and on this question therefore, agree perfectly with the teaching of the Catholic Church. The constitutions of these countries provide certain safeguards, which protect their citizens against mob violence, and are therefore in harmony with the Catholic teachings and principles. In fact the great principles of liberty underlying the British constitution were adopted by the British people many centuries ago and were so firmly fixed that private judgment so far has been unable permanently to dislodge them. The United States Canada, etc, are all modelled after Great Britain. We, therefore, love these countries because they protect the liberties of the people. The Catholic Church is free in them! Mr. Burnham is a lawyer, but seems as ignorant of the constitution of these countries as he is of the teachings of the Catholic Church.

I refuse to argue further with Mr. Burnham, because, in the first place, he does not grasp the nature of the subject he is discussing. He reminds me of the man I met the other day in a certain place, who was convinced his backbone was made of wood. No possible reasoning could change his opinions. Another reason is that I have found from personal experience that he makes statements which he must know are not true. I take for example my speech at the opening of Crew Collegiate Institute. Mr. Burnham was sitting in one of the front seats, and in his newspaper report next day, he made positively false assertions, putting in my mouth words I did not say. Since then I have no confidence whatever in Mr. Burnham's veracity.

TERCENTENARY CELEBRATION

Ask That February 12th, be Set Aside as Bible Sunday.

Every Board of the Upper Canada Bible Society has been requested to try and arrange a suitable celebration and to ask all churches within the bounds of each branch to observe Sunday, February 12th, as Bible Sunday. If that is not possible, then the nearest Sunday to the 12th that would be convenient.

A mass meeting will be held in Toronto at Massey Hall on Tuesday, February 14th.

It is suggested also that a special thank-offering be taken up.

Boy Scouts Attend Church in a Body

The Boy Scour Movement, its place purpose and power in a boy's life, was the subject of an appropriate discourse delivered by the Rev. W. C. Riddiford, chaplain of the Y.M.C.A. Boy Scout Brigade at the Park street Baptist Church at 11 a.m. yesterday. He took his text from 1 Peter 2-7, "Fear God, Honor the King, Honor all Men, Love the Brotherhood."

After welcoming the Boy Scouts on behalf of the deacons and congregation and hoping their visit would soon be repeated, the Rev. Gentleman said: "I have placed the words of my text in the order they are, in order that they might coincide with the three parts of our oath as Scouts A good Scout will always keep his oaht."

The first clause of the Scouts' oath is—On my honor I promise to do my best to do my duty to God and my country. The second clause reads—On my honor I promise to help other people at all times. The third clause reads—On my honor I promise to obey the Scout law.

The Rev. gentleman stated that he was proud to be the chaplain of the Y.M.C.A. Boy Scouts and gave his reasons therefor. He then addressed the parents as to the organization and objects of the Boy Scout Movement and spoke as follows:

"The Boy Scouts were started in England by General Sir Robert Baden Powell. He was impressed with the fact that 46 per cent. of the boys in England were growing up without any knowledge of the useful occupations and wanted to do something that would help the boy to become a useful citizen.

"He emphatically stated that his intention was not the making of soldiers, but good, useful, wideawake citizens. His motto was "Start the boy right, and the man will be right."

After enlarging on his text and explaining the bearings of the Scouts' oath, Mr. Riddifield strongly advocated the joining of some church—"Do you ask me which one?" "Let me tell you a story." During the civil war in the United States, a soldier boy lost his regiment in the confusion. He stood trembling and undecided, and when General Sheridan came along he saluted and asked "Where shall I fall in?" "Fall in" thundered General Sheridan. "Fall in! Why, fall in anywhere, there is fighting all along the line."

We regret that want of space forbids us giving the eloquent and forceful address in full, but we may say in conclusion that it had a deep and we hope a lasting effect not only on the young members of his audience, but on those of more mature years also.

AN OPPORTUNITY LOST.

"It might have been" is a thought that must occur to many who are friendly to the House of Lords, and desirous that there should be some check upon the House of Commons. The idea of taking the sober second thought of the people appeals to many sincere friends of democracy. For democracy in the true sense means government not by the "will" of the people, but by the reason and conscience of the people.

The House of Lords might have made itself the means of appealing to this sober second thought, and of combining all that is good in conservation. It has failed up to this point because it has been too partisan and too mechanical in its conception of its duty. The people would not have objected to delay and consideration, if they had felt confidence in the impartiality of the body which asked for delay. That the House of Lords has failed deplorably in this respect is a point that need not be enlarged. But in the second place it failed deplorably because it depended too much upon a mere mechanical check. If you want to obtain the deliberate judgment of the people, as distinguished from its will and impulse, it is not sufficient to make its will collide violently with the will of a legislative body. The first thing to be done is to take the question out of the region of will unto the region of reason and conscience. The first care of the House of Lords should have been not to maintain its arbitrary powers, but to increase its influence as a means of educating the democracy.

Ex-President Eliot says that educational reform must proceed from the university downwards through the whole educational system. The House of Lords might have made itself the university of democracy. With its opportunities for leisure and deliberation, it might have become not merely a checking and resisting body, but a place in which new political ideas could be threshed out, a hospitable home for such a political philosopher as Morley, and for broad thinkers and scholars, radical as well as conservative. Thoughtful, impartial, learned, unselfish, it would have easily gained the ear of the democracy; for democracy loves to learn. It would have acquired all the powers which its wisdom deserved.

But the House of Lords began at the wrong end. Instead of reforming itself, and waiting for influence to come as a result of reform, it began by a violent exercise of its power in the rejection of a budget, in circumstances which cast grave doubts on its own unselfishness and impartiality. It was defeated; it surrendered; and now it begins to talk of repentance and reform. It has lost a great opportunity, which it may not have presented again.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

colm when he heard the tone of his captors. Truly the flag of Britain was trailing in the mire, or these men would not have dared to address him in that fashion. In that bitter moment he felt for the first time that the mutiny was a real thing. Hitherto, in spite of the murders and incendiarism of Meerut, the risings in other stations, the proclamation of Bahadur Shah as Emperor, and the actual conflicts with the Mogul's armed retainers on the battle-field of Ghazi-un-din Nuggur, Malcolm was inclined to treat the outburst as a mere blaze of local fanaticism,—a blaze that would soon be stamped under heel by the combined efforts of the East India Company's troops and the Queen's Forces. Now, at last, he saw the depth of hate with which British dominion was regarded in India. He heard Mohammedans alluding to a Brahmin as a leader—so might a wolf and a snake make common alliance against a watch-dog. From that hour dated a new and sterner conception of the task that lay before him and every Briton in the country. The Mutiny was no longer a welcome variant to the tedium of hot weather. It was a life and death struggle between West and East, between civilization and barbarism, between the laws of Christianity and the lawlessness of Mahomet, supported by the cruel, inhuman, and nebulous doctrines of Hinduism.

Not that these thoughts took shape and coherence in Malcolm's brain as he was being hurried to the house of Nana Sahib. A man may note the deadly malice of a cobra's eye, but it is not when the poison fangs are ready to strike that he stops to consider the philosophy underlying the creature's malign hatred of mankind.

Events were in a rare fret and fume in the neighborhood of Cawnpore that night. As a matter of historical fact, while Malcolm was hearing from the villager that Roshinara Begum had come to Bithoor, the 1st Native Infantry and 2nd Cavalry had risen at Cawnpore.

Nana Sahib was deep in intrigue with all the sepoy regiments stationed there, and his adherents ultimately managed to persuade these two corps to throw off their allegiance to the British Raj. Following the recognized routine they burnt open the jail, burnt the public offices, robbed the Treasury, and secured possession of the Magazine. Then, while the ever swelling mob of criminals and loafers made pandemonium in the bazaar, the saner spirits among the mutineers hurried to Bithoor to ascertain the will of the will of the man who, by common consent, was regarded as their leader.

He was expecting them, eagerly perhaps, but with a certain quaking that demanded the assistance of the "Raja's peg," a blend of champagne and brandy that is calculated to fire heart and brain to madness more speedily than any other intoxicant. He was conversing with his nephew, Rao Sahib, and his chief lieutenants, Tantia Topi and a Mohammedan named Azim-Ullah, when the native officers of the rebel regiments clattered into his presence.

"Maharajah," said their chief, "a kingdom is yours if you join us, but it is death if you side with the Nazarenes."

He laughed with the fine air of one who sees approaching the fruition of long-cherished plans. He advanced a pace, confidently.

"What have I to do with the British?" he asked. "Are they not my enemies, too? I am altogether with you."

"Will you lead us to Delhi, Maharajah?"

"Why not? That is the natural rallying ground of all who wish the downfall of the present Government."

"Then behold, O honored one, we offer you our fealty."

They pressed near him, tendering the hilts of their swords. He touched each weapon, and placed his hands on the head of its owner, vowing that he would keep his word and be faithful to the trust they reposed in him.

"Our brothers of the 53rd and 56th have not joined us yet," said one.

"Then let us ride forth and win them to our side," said the Nana grandiloquently. He went into the courtyard, mounted a gaily-caparisoned horse, and, surrounded by the rebel cohort, cantered off towards Cawnpore.

Thus it befell that the mob of horsemen pressed past Malcolm and his guards as they entered the palace. The subadar tried in vain to attract the Nana's attention. Fearing lest he might be forgotten if he were not in the forefront of the conspiracy, this man bade his subordinates take their prisoner before the Begum, and ran off to secure his horse and race after the others. He counted on the despatches gaining him a hearing.

"Better serve a king's daughter than these, Shia dogs who are so ready to fawn on a Brahmin," said he to his comrade, another Pathan, and a Sunni like himself, for Islam, united against Christendom, is divided into seventy-two warring sects. Hence the wavering loyalty of two sepoy battalions in Cawnpore carried Malcolm out of the Nana's path, and led him straight to the presence of Princess Roshinara.

The lapse of three weeks had paled that lady's glowing cheeks and deepened the lustre of her eyes. Not only was she worn by anxiety, in addition to the physical fatigue of the long journey from Delhi, but the day's happenings had not helped to lighten the load of care. Yet she was genuinely amazed at seeing Malcolm.

"How come you to be here?" she cried instantly, addressing him before Abdul Huq could open his mouth in explanation.

"As your Highness can see for yourself, I am brought hither forcibly by these slaves," said Frank, thinking that now or never must he display a bold front.

"How did you learn that I had left Delhi?"

"But you came not when I summoned you."

"Your Highness's letter did not reach me until after the affair on the Hindun river."

"What is all this idle talk?" broke in Abdul Huq roughly. "This Feringhi was carrying despatches—"

"Peace, dog!" cried the Begum.

Eastern Townships Bank

Proceedings of the Fifty-first Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders.

Held at its Banking House in Sherbrooke, Wednesday, December 7th, 1910

The 51st annual meeting of the Eastern Townships Bank was held in the Board Room of the Bank, at Sherbrooke, at 2 o'clock on Wednesday, December 7th. There Rere present: Messrs. Thomas Ward, Frank Spaulding, William Farwell, S. H. C. Miner, W. E. Lebaron, L. P. Jenne, Frank Sherman, Charles Crombie, George G. Foster, H. Kathan, James S. Mitchell, Marcus G. Crombie, George G. Foster, K.C.; B. C. Howard, O. A. Robertson, A. C. Flumerfelt Frank N. Bennetts, etc. President William Farwell occupied the chair. General Manager J. Mackinnon acted as secretary, and Col Harry F. Fraser and Mr. M. G. Crombie were appointed scrutineers.

THE ANNUAL REPORT

The annual report was as follows:

The Directors have pleasure in submitting to the shareholders the Balance Sheet and Profit and Loss Statement for the year ending, November 30th last.

The net profits for the year amounted to $110,696.99, which with the balance brought forward from last year gives the sum of $260,-596.33 available.

Out of this the regular quarterly Dividends have been provided for—that payable on the first of January proximo being at the rate of nine per cent. per annum; $150,000 has been added to the Reserve Fund, bringing that account up to $2,250,000; $15,000 set aside for bonus to employes; $2,000 transferred to Officers Guarantee Fund, and a balance of $110,038.33 carried forward.

In view of the Reserve Fund having reached 75 per cent. of the Paid Up Capital, the Directors feel justified in increasing the Dividend to nine per cent., and are confident their action will be approved.

Business throughout the country has been satisfactory and the outlook encouraging, although expectations of six months ago have fallen short of fulfilment as a result of partial failure of the grain crop in important sections of the North-West Provinces. Nevertheless, harvest results throughout the Dominion as a whole, have been sufficient to maintain trade and manufacturing at a high level.

Collections are fair and the number and importance of insolvencies normal. The export trade in lumber and pulpwood is still lagging, though tending towards improvement.

The dairy industry continues to be in a very satisfactory condition, and, while along the souther border an important change has taken place, cream being shipped in large quantities to factories and others in the large cities of the United States, it is to be hoped that impending changes in the U.S. Tariff may lead to a resumption in the localities referred to and of a return to the conditions previously prevailing and the manufacture of butter and cheese within our own territory.

It is very gratifying to notice that the tide of immigration continues to flow into the country from both England and the United States. The country is growing fast, and much money and credit are needed to finance its development. Our moneyed institutions will be expected to provide increasing facilities so long as rapid development continues.

As the larger proportion of immigrants are settling in the North-West, it means a great increase in the territory to come under cultivation, and proportionately the grain supply available for export.

Our manufacturing establishments are prosperous, and are increasing in number because of important industries in the U.S. opening branches here in order to share in Canada's prosperity. Paper and Pulp industries are the most active in consequence of new regulations affecting export of pulpwood. It is to be hoped that the necessity of safeguarding our manufacturing industries will be kept in view in any negotiations looking towards reciprocal trade relations with our neighbors to the South.

In view of the remarkable growth of the country it is evident that increased banking facilities will be required, and, as this can be met more readily and economically by the present organizations increasing their Capital—which several have already done—the Directors have decided to recommend that a Resolution be passed at this meeting for authority to increase the Capital of the Bank in the sum of $2,000,000,—this increase to be issued from time to time in such amounts and at such rate of premium as the Directors may determine.

During the year five new offices of the Bank have been opened as well as several sub-agencies, all of which are showing satisfactory results.

New office buildings have been erected at Knowlton, Megantic and Grand Forks, and three others are now under construction, viz. Winnipeg, Montreal, West End (St. Catherine street), and Sutton.

We have also moved into commodious new premises at Vancouver, in a building specially built for our use, which we occupy under lease for a long term of years.

With deep regret we have to record the death of Mr. Frank Grundy, one of our Board, who passed away on the 14th of November, 1910. Mr. Grundy was a man of wide experience and good business ability, and was an active and very useful member of the Board. His death is a great loss to the Bank and the community generally.

All the offices of the Bank have had the usual thorough inspections.

In conclusion the Directors have much pleasure in testifying to the faithful and painstaking service of the General Manager, Managers and other officers of the Bank.

Respectfully submitted

WM. FARWELL,
President

Sherbrooke, Quebec, 7th December, 1910

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meire, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

FIGHT ON A PEAK

A Clergyman's Experience in the Lake District of England

While holidaying in the Lake District, England, the Rev. H. F. Lloyd had a most exciting experience. Mr. Lloyd went on a climbing excursion alone among the mountains that flank the Troutgeck valley, and when nearing the summit of Ill Bell, which is some 2,746 feet above sea level, he was startled to see a large bird hovering about him in a rather threatening manner. He watched it, trying to evade its movements the while, and, thinking it was a hawk of the larger variety, continued his climb. But as he proceeded this strange visitor became more and more aggressive, and began to swoop down upon him, making a direct attack. It struck at his head and passed just above him. The situation became more alarming when another bird of the same species, apparently the paired mate, joined in the attack, darting from behind the rocky crags in the immediate neighborhood.

Luckily Mr. Lloyd had a stick which he carried to assist him in his climb, and with this he set about to keep the two birds at bay, striking out to protect himself from their combined attack. As the encounter assumed a perilous phase the reverend gentleman beat a speedy retreat leaving the feathered combatants masters of the battleground. Mr. Lloyd afterwards discovered that his assailants were a couple of great bustards that have recently taken up quarters in the neighborhood. The great bustard, it may be mentioned, is the largest game bird in Europe, and is not a denizen of the Lake District. Mr. Lloyd, on relating his exciting adventure, was told that several visitors had recently had similar experiences, one gentleman a few days before coming from the climb almost in a state of panic, and requesting that a party should be formed to try to shoot the birds, which had actually become something of a terror to the district. It is stated that last year two persons were attacked on different occasions on the same mountain, if not by the same bird, by a bird that had strayed from its native haunts.

"ROSEBERY SMITH"

The Close of a Romantic Career on the Turf

By the death of Mr. James Smith at Upper Tooting a romantic career in sports and business is recalled. He was familiarly known as "Rosebery Smith." It was in 1876 that he accomplished the feat that has been associated with his name ever since, for in that year he won the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire with his horse Rosebery—a feat that no horse had previously achieved in connection with this memorable double. Rosebery was a bay horse by Newminster—Beeswing, by Touchstone, and was bred by Mr. Smith himself. He was a great favorite with the public, and his victories were always popularly received. He was a great stayer, and his victory in the Cesarewitch was a particularly fine performance, as he carried 9 st. 4 lb. and won by a length and a half from Lord Rosebery's Ladas, who was giving him 2 lb. Rosebery was also second in the Cambridgeshire, and was third in the Chester Cup. He was a great favorite for the Derby, but was unplaced. He was a great favorite for the Derby, but was unplaced. He was a great favorite for the Derby, but was unplaced.

episode, worthy of a place in the more thoughtful melodrama, may be recounted. During the autumn prior to the horse's great victories, a prominent London sportsman, getting wind of Rosebery's carefully concealed merits, sent his brother down to the stable to spy out the land. The advent in the neighborhood of a mysterious stranger quickly became known, and to rid the stable of this unwelcome visitor the trainer hit on an ingenious plan. It was customary to send a boy on a hack to the village for letters every day, so the trainer, knowing that the "tout" would find it out, mounted the lad on Rosebery. Immediately the "tout" found out the nature of Rosebery's employment he returned to London convinced that his brother had got on the wrong scent.

NO WEDDING BELLS

Bride Alters Her Mind One Hour Before the Ceremony

An hour before John Tobin, a coal porter, Paddington, should have led Alice Anderton to the altar to make her his wife, he received a message from her that she had changed her mind, and did not intend to get married. That night Tobin met Miss Anderton in the street and struck her several times on the head and body. The sequel was Tobin was charged with the assault. Mr. Luke, the magistrate said that the girl had a perfect right to withdraw even at the eleventh hour. She was not compelled to marry the prisoner if she did not wish to do so; but a bridegroom so disappointed was subject to a revulsion of feeling. Allowance would be made for that, and he accordingly bound over the defendant.

REAL ECONOMY

On Lord Dufferin's estate, near Belfast, there once stood a historic ruin, a castle which had been a stronghold of the O'Neills. One day Lord Dufferin visited it with his steward, Dan Mulligan, and drew a line with his stick round it, telling Mulligan that he was to build a protecting wall on that line. And then he went to India, feeling secure as to the preservation of the great historic building.

When he returned to Ireland he hastened to visit the castle. It was gone. He rubbed his eyes and looked again. Yes, gone it certainly was, leaving not a trace behind it. He sent for Dan and inquired

"Where's the castle?"

"The castle, my lord? That old thing? Sure I pulled it down to build the wall wid."

BRIDEGROOM AT 81

The bridegroom at a Leeds wedding, Mr Henry Foster, married and his bride a few years younger.

Mr. Foster had been three times married previously. He wore grey trousers and a sort of slouch hat, and was apparently beaming with happiness. The bride wore a white silk dress and a black hat. There were many showers of confetti.

WAGES IN GLASGOW

Municipal Employes Beg for an Increase in the Minimum

At a mass meeting of Glasgow Corporation employes, Mr. Richard Davies, general secretary, said the wages paid to municipal employes in Glasgow, the conditions under which they worked, and the treatment they received from those in authority could not be compared to what prevailed in a town like Leicester. The London County Council's minimum wage for employes was $6.75 per week, yet in Glasgow, where the cost of living was greater, they were still begging for a rise from a minimum of $5.35 to $6.35. There ought not to be a public servant in Glasgow in receipt of a lower wage than would guarantee him the means of living a reasonable and comfortable life, and he thought $6.25 a week was the lowest possible amount on which a man and his family could live on comfortably in the city of Glasgow. The greatest evil of the Corporation servants in Glasgow to-day was bureaucracy. What they had got to fight for was the right of appeal to the committees before being punished or dismissed, and the more guarantee of that privilege by the Council to its employes would remove three parts of the grievances from which they had suffered.

WHERE WAS LANDSEER?

Among the interested spectators at an art exhibition in New York were two young fellows, evidently of rural origin, whose attention seemed to be especially attracted to a canvas entitled, "Two Dogs; after Landseer."

As the two studied the painting they seemed perplexed as to one particular. Said one young man.

"Bill, I kin see the two dogs, but where is Landseer?"

Whereupon the other continued his close scrutiny of the painting.

"Tom," said he, finally, "I got it. This is one of them puzzle pictures I hears so much about."—Harper's Weekly.

FALSE BEAUTY AIDS

A Warning to Girls Who Seek Helps to Their Complexion

A grave warning to girls who act as their own "beauty" specialists is contained in a case from Birkenhead, in which a young woman died through eating inordinate quantities of raw rice to improve her complexion.

Dr. Stokes, who has practised in Old Kent Road for upwards of 16 years, said the other day that the habit amongst working girls, more particularly factory hands, was more widespread than is generally believed.

"They eat quantities of it to make them 'beautiful,' as they call it. They want nice pale white complexions, and the effects of eating raw rice is undoubtedly to make them pale.

"Raw rice is not the only thing they take. Some of them systematically drink pints of vinegar to obtain the same 'beautiful' result, and others suck lemons, eat pickles, or take raw cabbage with the same object and the same result upon their digestion and complexions.

"They will go into provision shops and buy pennyworths of pickles just as small boys buy pennyworths of sweets."

The practice, Dr. Stokes declared, is by no means of recent origin.

It may be added that starch-eating is another form of this morbid habit, and that girls even eat whiting and hearthstone.

Medical men in similar districts all over London have gathered the same views and experiences.

In the West-End, it is said, these strange "beauty aids" are in common use amongst domestic servants, who are pining for the admiration of the postman, the policeman, the soldier, or baker's or butcher's youth.

"In many of my cases in which the patients are girls, I can generally trace the trouble to the raw rice or vinegar habit," said Dr. Stokes, "and it's no use warning them. They WILL be 'beautiful.'"

STOLE A DUMMY

An Amusing Story Told in a French Court

Francis Brigaux, an electrician, was had up in the police court at Paris for stealing a dummy and the dress shown on it from a linen-draper's shop. He explained to the Magistrate that it was all a mistake. "The fact is, I had had a glass or two, and a glass or two flies at once to my poor head. Moreover, it was past eight in the evening, and, what with the gleaming and the glass or two, my sight was a bit blurred. Strolling along, I saw a smart girl, and when I got nearer I recognized her. 'Hello,' I said to myself, 'here's Fifine, and got up no end.' I had never seen such a swagger frock on her before. Fifine, I should explain, is my best girl. 'Hello, Fifine, said I, 'what awells we are,' and got my arm round her waist. I just lifted her off her feet, and was going to kiss her. No harm in that, was there, as she was my best girl, or, at any rate, I thought she was. As I said before, my sight was a bit hazy. I was just going to kiss her when I found it was not Fifine at all, but a lay figure to show a dress off. The ill-luck was that just at that moment the shopman looked around, thought I was making off with the dummy and the dress, and shouted, 'Stop thief!' and I was run in. I tried to explain to the shopman and the police, but they wouldn't listen." The magistrate listened right enough, but pointed out that the lay figure had no head, whereas Miss Fifine, he hoped, had. Francois Brigaux's mistake was, therefore, for that reason among others, inexcusably discourteous to the lady, and he must go to jail for three months.

G.T.R. Receipts.

The Grand Trunk October statement shows that gross receipts of Grand Trunk proper increased £25,000; working expenses increased £30,000. A Park for Lakefield.

Farmers Too Greedy.

Had the farmers who attended the market in such large numbers on Saturday morning not asked unreasonable prices for their poultry, they would have realized much better prices on the whole than they did obtain, because buyers would not pay the prices asked. The consequence was that many of the farmers either sold to merchants in the afternoon for much less than they could have got from the householders, or had to take their stock home again.

It does not pay to be too avaricious.

Police Court.

The police court docket on Saturday was a blank, and officials took their places merely to vacate them again. This speaks well for Peterborough.

The surplus will be distributed among the shareholders at the conclusion of the liquidation. A first dividend of 10 per cent will probably be paid to creditors some time this week.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

VOL XXXIII NO. 288 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO TUESDAY DECEMBER 20 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

Believes That Woman Killed Clarence Glover

JUDGE BOND THINKS HATTIE LE BLANC KNOWS WHO KILLED LAUNDRYMAN.

Girl Not in the Laundry at Time Fatal Shot Was Fired—The Court Fully Convinced of Hattie's Innocence.

Boston, Dec. 19.—Judge Daniel W. Bond, who presided at the trial of Hattie LeBlanc, has declared that, in his belief, a woman murdered Clarence F. Glover, according to an interview with him published here to-day.

He also declared his belief that Hattie LeBlanc knew who killed Glover, although he was emphatic in his belief in her innocence. He did not think she was in the laundry at the time of the shooting, but he believes she knows who fired the fatal shot.

"There is ground for believing," Judge Bond said, "that when Hattie returned to the Glover house from the laundry Mrs. Glover suggested that it was best for her to hide, until she could be gotten away."

IMMUNE FROM PROSECUTION.

He declared Hattie LeBlanc to be absolutely immune from prosecution as an accessory to the murder of Glover in the event that any person would be named as the one who actually did the shooting.

Continuing his discussion of the famous murder mystery, Judge Bond intimated his belief in Hattie's innocence is so strong that he would have set the verdict aside had the jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

He said that he felt that nothing had been brought out in the trial to justify further action by the state, and that the whole matter might as well be dropped.

HIS HEAD SPLIT AS HE SLEPT

Widow of Detroit Man is Under Arrest—Bloody Axe in the Shed.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 19. Francis Kniffen was found dead in bed early to-day with his head split open. His widow Nettie Kniffen, who was taken into custody b the police, gave the neighbors their first report of the tragedy. She said that she was occupying a bedroom in another part of the house when she was awakened by her husband's groaning, and found him dying. A bloody axe was found in the woodshed.

The police and coroner expressed the opinion that the man had been killed instantly, although Mrs. Kniffen said he survived several hours after she discovered his plight.

The widow denied that she knew anything about the murder further than the story she told the neighbors.

The Rebel Forces Kill and Rob in China

MISSIONS AND HOSPITALS DESTROYED WHILE SOLDIERS ARE PUT TO DEATH.

Start Reign of Terror—Every Available Soldier Will be Sent to Kwang Si and Kwang Tung to Quell the Revolt.

Pekin, Dec. 19.—The Southern part of the Chinese province of Kwang Si and the southwestern part of Kwang Tung are in a state of revolt against the authority of the empire; American schools, missions and hospitals have been distroyed, foreigners driven out and hundreds of peaceful Chinese and soldiers slain.

Following an urgent appeal sent here from Canton, the ministry today ordered every available soldier put in the field against the revolutionists.

BRIGANDS TERRORIZE THE DISTRICT.

Nearly 3,000 Chinese, no better than brigands and pirates, hold the district in a state of terror. Towns and villages have been seized and citizens shot down in cold blood. The outlawry is identical with that of a Boxer's, and in some quarters it is looked upon as a series of outrages directed by the chieftains of the Boxer clan.

CENTRE OF REVOLT.

The centre of revolt is the city of Lien-Chow, which is in possession of the outlaws. The American institutions there have all been destroyed. The soldiers captured alive were subjected to gruesome tortures.

The authorities maintain that the rebel forces were recruited by secret Chinese societies, and that plans for this uprising in the south have been under way for many months. The outlaws are well equipped with arms and ammunition. They have seized boats up in the rivers and manned them with their armed forces. Stores and residences are being looted, and bloodshed is rampant.

GOT JUDGMENT IN FULL.

Against a Local Hotel-Keeper for Wages.

Mary Armow, who had been employed in a local hotel as head waitress brought suit against the proprietor for $36.00, being two months wages which she claimed as due her. When called to the stand, Miss Armow said that she had been employed in Toronto as waitress in a hotel, but never acted in the capacity of head waitress. The proprietor and his wife came to Toronto and interviewed her and hired her. She stated that she told them that she had not acted as head waitress before, but they hired her just the same. She commenced on Thanksgiving Day.

Another waitress at the hotel was then called. She said that Miss Armow had not done her work right, and that she was always quarreling with the girls; in fact she said all the girls were bad friends with her. She stated that the proprietor had given her ten days notice to quit at two different times and she had still continued.

Another waitress was put in the box and gave evidence, which corroborated the former's statement.

The proprietor's wife was called. She said that Miss Armow had not suited them at all, and that they had given her notice to quit, which she did not do.

It appears that when she did quit, they wanted to pay her off with a month and a half's wages, $28.50, the time she worked. She claimed two months wages, $36.00, and this was awarded to her by the court.

UP FOR TRIAL.

Jersey City, N.J., Dec. 19.—James Gallagher, who shot Mayor Gaynor, on August 9th last, will be arranged before Judge Blair in the Special Sessions Court to-day for trial. Gallagher is to be tried first on the indictment charging him with atrocious assault on Street Commissioner Edwards while he was trying to save the Mayor. Alexander Simpson, a New Jersey criminal lawyer, appeared for the defence. The State was represented in court by Prosecutor Garven and Assistant Prosecutor Vickers.

THE WEATHER.

ANYHOUR MAY SEE A REVOLUTION

SPANISH GOVERNMENT UNEASY EVER SINCE MANUEL WAS DEPOSED.

To Unite the Two Nations—In a Federal Republic the Aim of Revolutionaries—Alphonso Will Fight.

Madrid, via Hendaye, Dec. 19.—Ever since the Portuguese revolution the Spanish government has been sitting over a powder magazine with a lighted fuse smoldering away inside it. It was sitting on the magazine even before King Manuel was deposed, but it was Manuel's deposition that set the fuse to burning.

Any hour may bring a revolt in Spain. The slightest event may precipitate it. One governmental precaution too many will start trouble. Or one precaution too few will do the same thing. An indescreet utterance of some monarchist official or the right kind of inflammatory speech by one of the revolutionary leaders will be the signal for a widespread uprising. There was never a dynasty in greater danger than is King Alfonso's at this minute.

The Spanish and Portuguese Republicans have long been working together. It was the intention to start the revolutions in the two countries at the same time. It so happened, however, that the movement developed somewhat more rapidly in Portugal than in Spain. The Portuguese could not wait without endangering their cause. The Spanish felt that they might endanger theirs by acting prematurely. The Spanish republicans feel intensely the humiliation of having the comparatively unimportant Portugal establish a republic ahead of Spain, and they are impatient to act. Moreover, the Portuguese have shown them that attempts at revolution are by no means hopeless.

The Republicans idea—both in Spain and Portugal—is to establish a Federal Republic, in which both countries are included. This is deemed necessary because the population of Spain is split, according to the geographical location, into a number of very distinct races. It is believed they will live together with least friction if they are given Home Rule in purely local affairs, with a single president and congress for the entire group, much after the pattern of United States of America. The plan seems satisfactory to all the Republicans throughout the entire country, and there is no doubt that Portuguese are willing to join such a union.

Alfonso will probably make a harder fight for his throne than did Manuel. He has abler advisers than had his brother-monarch, and greater financial and military resources. It is certain, however, that the army is by no means loyal to him. Except for the high officers, it is probably safe to say that more than half the troops would join the revolutionists if they believed the latter stood a reasonable chance of winning. If the revolutionists succeed in starting an uprising throughout the entire nation at once, the throne is almost certainly doomed.

Rome, Dec. 19.—The Vatican organ says there is a possibility that full diplomatic relations between Spain and the Holy See will be restored within a brief space of time. The late Spanish Ambassador to the Vatican has been set aside, and this, so far as he is concerned, is a relief, for his way of dealing with the Vatican left much to be desired. He ignored the courtesies of diplomatic usages to a marked degree. When he had been recalled he notified the fact to the Vatican by means of one of the Embassy ushers, instead of going there himself, which was contrary to all the traditions of etiquette; and left Rome without visiting either the Pope or Cardinal Merry del Val, as he should have done.

It is considered that a new Ambassador would be placed in happier conditions than the late one, Ojeda, to bring negotiations to a more fortunate conclusion. It is anticipated that Premier Canalejas, whose restless spirit seems to have quieted down somewhat, will re-open relations with the Vatican on the question of establishment of a new religious order in Spain, he having left a chance for discussion and possibly compromise with the Vatican on this ground. Amendments have been madeon it in the Senate, where, however, it was passed with a large majority, and it has yet to be discussed in the Cortes or House of Parliament.

The situation with the Vatican seems to be bettered and, although considering the volatile and unsteady temperament of Canalejas, which may lead him into a more irrational course than he has hitherto followed, there is nothing to prevent a restoration of relations between the two powers. The fact that the exercise of the law against the Religious Orders is not to take effect for two years opens the way to an arrangement in the interin. The report circulated here two days ago that the King of Spain, Alfonso XIII., proposed to visit Victor Emanuel III in Rome has not a particle of truth in it, and is contradicted emphatically.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

RUSSIAN STUDENTS STRIKE IN PROTEST

Against Cruelties Inflicted on Political Prisoners in Various Parts of the Empire.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 18.—The students of nearly all the high schools here are on strike in protest against cruelties which it is alleged are being inflicted upon political prisoners in various parts of the empire. At meetings of students, resolutions denouncing the prison authorities were adopted. At Moscow an indignation meeting organized by the students of Moscow University was broken up by the police.

The Duma yesterday discussed the interpellation of the Opposition members regarding the wholesale flogging of political prisoners in Zarantui and Volgie prisons in Siberia, but a motion that an enquiry be made into the situation was rejected.

While engaged on the elevator at the mill of the Peterborough Cereal Company on Saturday afternoon, Mr T. Fair, was unfortunate enough to have his foot caught in the elevator in such a way that his left leg was broken just above the ankle. He was taken to the Nicholls Hospital where his injuries were attended to.

Commissioner Rees is to Command the Salvation Army

Toronto, Dec. 20.—As is well known, Commissioner Coombs of the Salvation Army has been in very unsatisfactory health for a considerable time, and but for the needs of the work, the Commissioner would long ere this have been on furlough. He will be succeeded by Commissioner Rees, who had been in charge of the work in Sweden.

The General, at Commissioner Coombs request, has granted him relief from the great responsibilities of this important command, so that he may get all the benefit he can from the change and rest.

Seeing that such a large work in the Dominion of Canada could not be without a leader while Commissioner Coombs is on furlough, the General has arranged for the appointment of Commissioner Rees, who will arrive in Toronto about the middle of January, when large reception meetings will take place.

More than 100 were injured, and eight of these will probably die. Thirteen bodies have been recovered but the other bodies are buried beneath the ruins of the buildings, which are still on fire.

Many of the buildings in the vicinity were almost shaken from their foundations and threaten to collapse. Several firemen were injured by falling walls and several buildings will be unsafe for occupancy again.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT
Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretions and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreaming at night, weakened my back, bad dreams, pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicine and tried many first-class physicians, were an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Australia will Bear the Full Burden of Cost

THE OVERSEA COMMONWEALTH SETS OTHER COLONIES A FAIR EXAMPLE.

In Regard to Naval Assistance to the Empire—Subsidy is Declined—Cabinet Comes to a Surprising Decision

London, Dec. 19. The Naval and Military Record, a weekly paper published in Great Britain, makes the statement that Australia has made an interesting step in advance with regard to its naval policy. The article is as follows:

"The Labor Cabinet of the Commonwealth Government have come to a surprising decision. When, as a result of the conference with the Admiralty, it was decided that Australia should equip herself with a fleet unit, it was calculated that owing to the high pay of officers and men under the Colonial flag and to the increased cost of stores and victuals, the annual expenditure would amount to about £750,000. It was agreed that during the first few years the Imperial authorities should subsidize the fleet unit to the extent of £250,000 annually. It was at first thought that the Colonial representatives had perhaps, rather exceeded the limit of expenditure even on this basis which the people of the Commonwealth would feel inclined to pay, and when the Government changed and a Labor Ministry came into office observers watched with some curiosity to see what line would be taken.

"The Minister of Defence has now announced that the Government have determined not to accept the Imperial subsidy. Australia has decided that from the very first she should bear the whole burden of the cost of the fleet-unit thus asserting her pride of nationhood at the outset.

"In the Mother Country this spirit of independence will be regarded with satisfaction. As a result of this decision at a time when the cost of the British fleet will be at its highest, the Board of Admiralty will have at their command and additional sum of a quarter of a million sterling, and in addition they will be entirely freed from the heavy expense—over and above the amount of Australia's contribution—which has hitherto been incurred in maintaining the Australian squadron and the various establishments ashore. Even allowing for the subvention hitherto paid by the Commonwealth, the Mother Country will probably be better off to the extent of half a million annually. In other words, she will have at her disposal the sum equivalent to the cost of the upkeep of two armoured ships of the largest type, while at the same time the exhibition of the Commonwealth flag in the Pacific will be made with more power and dignity than at any time hitherto."

MODERATE MEN OF ALL FACTIONS AWAKENING TO THE IMPORTANCE OF PUTTING EFFECTIVE CURB.

Upon the Extremists—Constitutional Issue Should be Dealt With by Representative Body — Austen Chamberlain Explains Law's Defeat.

—Either Compromise must Come —

London, Dec. 19.—In the politics of the United Kingdom an altogether novel crisis has been reached. Though the opposing armies are resting on their arms after a drawn battle, the chiefs in both camps confess anxiety and perplexity.

The situation contains new features as disconcerting as they are unexpected, and moderate men of all factions are awakening to the importance of putting an effective curb upon the extremists. One of the most temperate and independent writers of real influence insists to-day that the entire constitutional issue should be dealt with immediately by a representative body having the confidence of the nation to an extent not enjoyed by the "council of eight," and declares that "this it the view of all sensible persons not blinded by the prejudice of birth or the passion of Socialism."

He warningly contends that there must be "large concessions, big sacrifices, in both principle and principal." If the kingdom is to avoid "what it would need, but a few more blunders and a little more obstinacy to expand into a blood red catastrophe.

This opinion carries all the more weight because expressed by a sharp critic of Mr. Balfour, who also is supposed to be in favor of a new conference, with a broader base of authority.

King George is giving the situation more attention than ever and has laid aside temporary work on the coronation programme, a matter he intends to keep within personal control. It is asserted that the King will urge Mr. Asquith to make a more comprehensive attempt to reach a compromise.

Good Price for an Old Medal.

As an instance of the benefits to be derived from a "write-up" in the Times, we would remind our readers that a few days ago we gave a description of a "Crysler Farm" medal awarded to an Indian chief, whose name we quoted in our former article, and whose name appeared on the medal. As noted in our article, this medal was in the possession of the Messrs. Frank Clarke & Son, the George street jewellers. Mr. Kelsey Hall of Toronto, an old Peterborough boy, happened to see this write up in the Times and communicated with Mr. Frank Clarke. The result was that yesterday Messrs. Clarke & Son shipped the little piece of old silver to Mr. Hall, receiving therefore, in cash, a price that makes a large deficit in a hundred dollars.

SUITABLE XMAS GIFTS.

Surely Your Wife, Sister, Sweetheart or Friend is Worth While.

Messrs. Frank Clarke & Son, the George street jewellers, located at the corner of Brock street, with their usual enterprise have imported a large consignment of goods specially fit for the Christmas trade.

Mr Frank Clarke, the senior partner of this firm is too well known to our citizens to require any superfluous introduction. Mr. Clarke with his banjo and accompanying voice has delighted thousands of our citizens, doing the good work for "sweet charity's" sake. Whilst Mr Clarke has always been anxious to assist churches and charities by his banjo performances, he has another side: the business side.

For the Christmas trade Messrs. Clarke & Son, oldest jewelry firm in Peterboro, have imported a special line of goods that simply MUST appeal to all those who want to please their friends at this joyous season of the year. Now Messrs Clarke & Son, will have something else to tell you about when the Christmas and New Year's season is over. Still, as expensive goods require a day to think over before buying, we will take up that matter of precious stones. Now some jewellers new to the trade, buy diamonds, emeralds, saphires, rubies, pearls, etc. like they would grind-stones, viz and only by weight. Here is where the jewellers may make or may lose, but the customer must certainly lose in most cases. However, Mr. Frank Clarke, with 30 years experience in precious stones, knows how, when and where to buy. This Christmas he has purchased the finest lot of diamonds, saphires, pearls, neridots, rubies, aqua marines, emeralds, etc., that ever came to Peterborough. These stones are set in Tiffany, or other up-to-date settings, or can be set to suit purchasers. Don't forget this immense stock of precious stones. Also, don't forget that the brass and copper high grade goods recently imported from Russia by the firm is one of the finest ever brought to Canada. The man, woman or child wanting anything in ornamental or useful jewelry goods should hurry to Clarke's before Christmas Day and get a large selection and small prices.

SENSE IN SENATE.

Sir Richard Cartwright has been amusing himself at the expense of those who make charges of disloyalty against the present government. He points out that Sir John Macdonald had colleagues who signed the annexation manifesto, and colleagues who not only threatened rebellion, but actually took up arms against the British Government. Cartier, one of the rebels of 1837-8, is a conspicuous case. Sir Richard adds in his usual frank way: "I do not know that I thought very much of the worst of them for that. However, when a party can swallow, as the Conservatives did successively, three or four cabinet ministers who had signed an annexation manifesto, it hardly becomes them to hurl promiscuous taunts of disloyalty."

Senator Lougheed, who leads the Opposition in the Senate, also disapproves of charges of disloyalty hurled by one party at the other. "What Canada needed was a national spirit, and this must be based on a spirit of unity, which could not be established until these charges of disloyalty were no more heard of." On this subject the Senatorial leaders talk common sense. Imperial questions and questions of defence should be discussed on their merits. Nicknames and imputations of evil motives are out of place in free, intelligent, democratic discussion.

ONE LAW FOR ALL.

In a discussion on the loyalty of public men it is remarked that Sir George Cartier ought not to be too severely condemned because he as a young man fell under the spell of Papineau. Nevertheless the Mail and Empire is always asking its readers to condemn Sir Wilfrid Laurier because forty-four years ago he belonged to a party of young French Canadians who opposed Confederation. It was treason for Laurier to express his opinion against a great constitutional way, but quite excuseable for Cartier to take up arms against British Government.

Cartier lived to take an important and useful part in the government of his country. Laurier has been at the head of the Canadian Confederation during a period of remarkable development. What either of them said or did in his twenties does not lessen the value of his public service. Both were sincere, and were actuated, in youth as well as maturity, by genuine patriotism. The rebels of 1837-8 had a good deal of justice on their side. There were many wise and patriotic men who opposed Confederation, including Joseph Howe in Nova Scotia and John Sandfield Macdonald in Ontario. Sir John Macdonald himself was a very tardy convert. But even if they were wrong, they do not deserve condemnation. It is not expected of a statesman that he shall be infallible at every stage of his career, that he shall never change his mind, or that at twenty-five he shall have the mature wisdom of sixty.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

"Unfasten the Sahib's arms, and be goue. What! Dost thou hesitate!"

"Throw these troopers into the courtyard," she commanded. "If they resist—"

But the Pathans were too wise to refuse obedience. Not yet had the rebels felt their true power. They instantly untied Malcolm's bonds, and disappeared. Using eyes and ears each moment to better advantage Frank was alive to the confusion that reigned in Nana Sahib's abode. Men ran hither and thither in aimless disorder. The Brahmin's retainers were like jackals who knew that the lion had killed and the feast was spread. The only servants who preserved the least semblance of discipline were those of the Princess Roshinara. It was an hour when the cool brain might contrive its own ends.

"I am, indeed, much beholden to you, Princess," said Frank. "I pray you extend your clemency to my men. I have an escort of six sowars, and a servant. Some of them are wounded. My horse, too, which I value highly."

He paused. He saw quite clearly that she paid no heed to a word that he was saying. Her black eyes were fixed intently on his face, but she was thinking, colliding in her mind some suddenly-formed project. He was a pawn in the game on the political chess-board, and some drastic move was imminent.

Some part of his speech had reached her intelligence. She caught him by the wrist and hurried him along a corridor into a garden, muttering as she went:

"Allah hath sent thee, Malcolm sahib. What matters thy men and a horse? Yet will I see to their safety, if that be possible. Yea, yea, I must do that. You will need them. And remember, I am trusting thee. Will thou obey my behests?"

"I would be capable of little gratitude if I refused, Princess," said he, wondering what new outlet the whirlpool of events would provide.

Leading him past an astonished [illegible] who dared not [illegible] when this imperial lady [illegible] to profane the sacred portals by admitting an infidel, she [illegible] Malcolm through a door into [illegible] garden surrounded by a high [illegible] pointed to a pavilion at its [illegible] extremity.

"Wait there," she said. "When those come to you whom you will have with in, do that which he who brings them shall tell you. Fail not. Your own life and the lives of your friends will hang on a thread, yet trust me that it shall not be severed while you obey my commands."

With that cryptic message she ran back to the door, which was immediately slammed behind her. Having just been snatched from the very gate of eternity by the Begum's good offices Malcolm determined to fall in with her whims so long as they did not interfere with his duty. Although Cawnpore was in the hands of the mutineers and he had lost his dispatches, he determined, at all costs, to reach Sir Hugh Wheeler if that fine old commander were still living. Meanwhile, he hastened to the Baradari, an elegant structure which was approached by a flight of steps and stood in the angle of two high battlemented walls.

The place was empty and singularly peaceful after the uproar of the village and of that portion of the palace which faced the Grand Trunk Road.

Overhead the sky was clear and starlit, but beyond the walls stretched a low, half luminous bank of mist, and he was peering that way fully a minute before he ascertained that the garden stood on the right bank of the Ganges. Almost at his feet, the great river was murmuring on its quiet course to the sea, and the mist was due to the evaporation of its waters, which were mainly composed of melted snow from the ice-capped Himalayas.

When his eyes grew accustomed to his surroundings he made out the shape of a native boat moored beneath the wall. It had evidently brought a cargo of forage to Bithoor. So still was the air that the scent of the hay lingered yet in the locality.

Between Bithoor and Cawnpoor the Ganges takes a wide bend. At first Malcolm scarcely knew in which quarter to look for the city, but distant reports and the glare of burning dwellings soon told him more than its mere direction. So Cawnpore, in its turn, had yielded to the canker that was gnawing the vitals of India! He wondered if Allahabad had fallen And Benares? And the populous towns of Bengal—perhaps even the capital city itself? The Punjab was safe. Hodson told him that. But would it remain safe? He had heard queer tales of the men who dwelt in the bazaars of Lahore, Umritsar, Rawalpindi, and the rest. Nicholson and John Lawrence were there; could they hold those warrior-tribes in subjection, or, better still, in leash? He might not hazard an opinion. His sky had fallen. This land of his adoption was his no longer. He was an outlaw, hunted and despised depending for his life on the caprice of a fickle-minded woman. Then he thought of the way his comrades of the 60th, of the Dragoons and the Artillery, had chased the sepoys from the Hindun, and his soul grew strong again. Led by British officers, the native troops were excellent, but, deprived of the only leaders they really respected, they became an armed mob, terrible to women and children, but of slight account against British-born men.

His musings were disturbed by the sound of horses advancing quietly across a paddy field which skirted that side of the wall running at a right angle with the river. It was impossible to see far owing to the mist that clung close to the ground; but he could not be mistaken as to the presence of a small body of mounted men within a few yards. They had halted, too, but his alert ears caught the occasional clink of accoutrements and the pawing of a horse in the soft earth. He racked his brain to try to discover some connection between the cavalry, post and the parting admonition given by the Begum Roshinara and he might have guessed the riddle in part had he not heard hurried footsteps in the garden. They came, not from the door by which he was ad

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2.625 oz. of gold and 3.267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same charcteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $35,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

A DOG'S MISTAKE

A Remarkable Story Related by Mr. Percy Allen

Mr. Percy Allen, in his "Impressions of Provence," says that the following story was related to the author by M. Frederic Mistral, the poet of Maillane.

"One morning, many years ago, I was walking in the country here with my wife, when suddenly a black dog ran up and began to fawn on me, barking in an ecstasy of joy, as though he had just recovered a long-lost master. So far as I am aware, I had never seen the animal before, but since he persisted in following me I took him home, and for ten years from that time he was my constant companion. One evening, soon after his coming, my wife and I went to lay some flowers upon the grave of my parents, and the dog accompanied us. So far as I know, he had never been to the spot before; but he went on ahead of us, as though aware of the way, and when we arrived there we found him sitting beside my father's grave, which by some subtle power he had singled out from some three hundred others. Well, a year or two after I had owned him, I had occasion to go to Paris, when I met the man whose portrait you see there—Buffalo Bill. The extraordinary resemblance between us that at once we noticed brought a thought to my mind, and I related the story of my dog. He made a few inquiries, and then ejaculated, 'I can solve the mystery. A year or two since at the very time when you found my dog, I had been at Marseilles with a show that I was touring through the south of France; there I lost one of my troupe of dogs. That animal, searching in search of me, met you, and made a very curious, though very natural, mistake.'"

PHOTOGRAPHING A RHINOCEROS

A Fight at Close Quarters in The African Wilds

According to his "Camera Adventures in the African Wilds," Mr. A. Radclyffe Dugmore's chief delight is to photograph animal just at the moment when another man would be seeking his revolver. Once or twice only he has been driven to the stern necessity of killing. Directly before us, at twenty yards away, lay a large rhinoceros fast asleep, his big grey back showing above the waving grass. Somehow or other we had not loaded our weapons that morning, and the unpleasantness of rapidity of action was very conspicuous. C., my companion, loaded the shot-gun with a charge of buck-shot and a ball; he also had his revolver. No sooner had I grabbed the camera and moved a little to one side, so as to obtain a better view of the animal in case he charged, than he was up and at us. It seemed incredible that so large an animal could move with such rapidity. I focussed on him as he rushed towards C and the Masai and the two thoroughly scared boys who were behind them. Almost unconsciously I released the shutter, when, at the same moment, a shot rang out. C. was trying to turn the animal with a charge of buck-shot. The attempt, however, was futile, and the creature came on without even hesitating. C., realizing that the shot had failed, fired a twelve-bore ball from the left barrel and then, grabbing his revolver, began firing right into its head as it rushed past him not six feet away. It made straight for the Masai, who stood quietly awaiting the onrush, and who actually jumped aside when within touching distance of the big horn. It next turned toward me just as I was endeavoring to put a second plate in position, so that I might get a picture of the actual encounter. In my hurry I did not put the plate-holder all the way in, as I afterwards found to my disappointment. But for the moment the camera became less important than the angry beast, when, to my relief, the Masai, with wonderful coolness drove his spear into the side of the rhinoceros. That turned him toward C., who quickly put another revolver shot into his head, and that decided the bewildered animal to leave us alone, and off he went.

AS HE SEES GOLF

The Better the Play the Poorer the Entertainment, Says Leach.

It is really one of the dullest things in the world watching a man play perfect golf. The better the golf, the poorer is the entertainment. In the best golf of all, the man just hits the ball straight down the course never being in danger of getting bunkered; is on the putting green in the proper number of strokes, and gets his ball down in the right number, not deriving any gain from luck by holding long putts. In all this there are no excitements, no thrills. There is nothing like the complete failure of the mediocrity for tickling the fancy and making gossip at a championship meeting. You generally get one or two of this kind at every meeting—men who are off their games, of which they never had as much as they should have done, off their luck, and full of nerves at the same time. I remember two years ago, at Prestwick, Arnaud Massy (the great Frenchman being the champion) having to play in partnership with a young gentleman who got sevens and eights—and sometimes more—at the various holes with quite astonishing frequency. And the pity of it was that the great crowd that was out to see Massy watched the youth at it.—Henry Leach, in The Sketch.

TRAININIG OF WIVE

Lady Tullibardine on Results of Ignorance—A Danger to Children

Lady Tullibardine, in a speech to the Women's Congress, England, dwelt on the importance of training girls to qualify them for the roles of wife and mother. It was surprising, she said, that marriage was the sphere of work for the great majority of the women of the country, but it was amazing how few women took any trouble to qualify themselves for entering upon that sphere of work. Women were extremely adaptive and were so quick at picking up things that they were apt to go through life picking up things as they went along without having any definite or comprehensive training for any of the duties they were called upon to fulfil. In the case of the better-to-do women their ignorance of domestic economy was counterbalanced in the great majority of cases by the employment of persons skilled in the performance of domestic duties, so that ignorance of the practical discharge of those duties robbed the supervision of them of much of its interest. Those well-to-do people might fe l that their ignorance did not necessarily entail any very serious danger to the children whose lives were placed in their care, but in the case of women who had to do all their own housework it was a very different matter. Ignorance in their case never deprived them of interest in their somewhat hutudrum round of duties, but it no doubt made serious inroads on domestic happiness and comfort, and it had a very serious influence on the health of the children.

SCULLER AT 86

Death of Dr. Furnivall, a Scholar and Athlete

Dr. Frederick James Furnivall who, we regret to announce, died on Saturday at his residence at Primrose Hill, was celebrated alike as scholar, working philanthropist, and athlete. Eminent as a man of letters and as a sociologist, he was perhaps more popularly known as the Grand Old Man of Thames scullers. From boyhood he loved the river, and right up to his eighty-sixth birthday, which he celebrated by taking part in a sculling match on the Thames, he never missed his one-day-a-week sculling. He was the founder of the Furnivall Sculling Club, of which both young men and girls were members, and it was always an interesting sight to see him taking out a crew of the club girls. He acted as coxswain, and as he invariably went bareheaded, with his white hair flying in the breeze, he might have been Father Time himself coaching the daughters of men in the way of health and vigor.

SOME ADVICE BY ADDISON

If we look down on other people it is a proof that we are not looking up enough.

Don't expect too much of mankind. Better to expect too little than to be disappointed.

If the threads of love and kindness are knitted into daily life, the pattern is worth copying.

That is true religion which enables even the poor to become givers, even the rich to become receivers.

When anyone contradicts you, use the circumstance to learn more about the subject, instead of resenting it.

Bad luck is often but another name for bad management and lack of alertness in making the most of opportunities.

It is not well to change your opinion too often, but he who never changes his opinion is likely to be thought bigoted.

If you desire success, make perseverance your wise counsellor, caution your elder brother, and hope your guardian genius.

JACK AND THE CLOCK

"Why is it that I am like the clock?"
Said laughing Jack to me.
"Because I have two hands and a face,
As anyone can see."

The difference 'twixt the clock and Jack
Is quite too plainly seen;
I wish they were alike in this:
Its face and hands are clean.

THOSE BIG HATS

The "Man in the Seat Behind" is up in arms in the religious papers against the enormous hats worn in church by ladies. "For many Sundays past," he says, "I can truthfully declare that, except at quite early services, I have seen neither priest nor altar, chancel nor choir, pulpit nor preacher. My outlook is entirely bounded by rows of enormous hats."

MONEY IN RAISING HOGS

The amount of money paid out by one Chatham buyer to farmers for live hogs in the past year alone amounts to over $928,000. It is further stated that one buyer alone spent over $90,000 in one month recently buying hogs.

HOT TIME IN TILBURY

An educated monkey has been giving folk a hot time at Tilbury. The animal had been taught to strike matches, and it is alleged to have shown its aptness for learning by causing a fire which destroyed a cinematograph theatre.

A PESSIMIST AND POLITICS

A pessimist thinks there is even more dishonesty in politics now than there used to be. "Nowadays," he says, "I figure that we don't get more than 70 per cent. of the votes we pay for."

ONE ON THE DENTIST

A Canadian dentist who went into the country the other day to extract a woman's teeth had to give it up because her children threw the poker at him and tore off his coat tails in preventing what they thought was a violent assault upon their mother.

Fought to Death to Claim Woman

Heflin, Ala., Dec. 17.—Locked in a small room, three brothers fought to their death last night over a woman at Hopewell, Clydburn county. The Sheriff arrived at Hopewell to-day and broke open the door. Lying in a heap on the floor were the three men, Richard, Alfred and Whack Benefield.

The trouble arose over the wife of Richard Benefield, to whom the other two brothers were paying attention. The brothers finally agreed to fight it out among themselves, the survivor to have the woman for his fight. The men fought with long-bladed knives, and when the door was broken down this morning, the place looked like a butcher's shambles.

The woman over whom the battle took place declared she knew of the bargain and had agreed to stand by it.

WESTERN HOLD-UP IN OLD LONDON

TWO POLICEMEN KILLED AND THREE WOUNDED IN GUN PLAY WITH BURGLARS.

Their Aim Was Deadly—Bullets Rattled Like Hailstones When Criminals Were Discovered Entering a Shop.

London, Dec. 17.—An American-style west hold up in the streets of London early to-day resulted in the death of two policemen, who were riddled with bullets, and the serious wounding of three others, by burglars who were caught trying to break into a gold-smith's shop in the Exchange Building, Houndsditch.

The criminals are believed to be Americans, and unerring gun play was never demonstrated better upon the plains of Texas or New Mexico.

Houndsditch is peopled largely by foreigners and there are a number of American residents in the district. Shortly after midnight the community about the exchange building was aroused by a fusilade of shots and rising cries.

Later pedestrians were astonished to see a battle raging about the Exchange Buildings. Bullets were rattling like hailstones and the darkness of the night was punctured by constant flashes.

DISCOVERED AT THE JOB.

The officers discovered several men in the building shortly after midnight. On account of their numbers the police waited for assistance and finally five of them, led by policeman Choate, one of their number entered. Without waiting a demand to surrender, the burglars started to shoot. Despite the darkness their aim was deadly and everyone of the policemen were wounded.

One of the officers died instantly, but policeman Choat hovered between life and death for half a dozen hours. The burglars fled and apparently all escaped injury. They wore masks and they fought with each one holding two pistols.

FOUR PERISH

New York Lodging Houses Filled With Humanity Seeking Shelter From Frigid Weather.

New York, Dec. 17.—With four dead and many victims in the hospital, New York was still gripped by the freezing cold weather to-day. One man was found to-day wandering in the streets a raving maniac from the cold.

The municipal lodging houses last night cared for 625 men, 30 women and 15 children of tender ages. All the charity organizations and institutions were taxed to the utmost.

The mercury was higher to-day than yesterday, but a cutting wind more than made up the difference.

WOMAN GETS 1 YEAR

Man Acquitted on Bigamy Charge, But Woman Gets a Year.

Belleville, Dec. 17.—Edward Ash, aged 30 years, was this morning acquitted on a charge of bigamy, he having married Mrs. William Rogers aged 50, whose former husband is living. She represented to Ash that she was a widow.

The woman was convicted and sentenced to one year in the Mercer Reformatory. The parties reside in the northern part of Hastings county.

LARGEST BUILT

The Emperor, Launched at Collingwood on Saturday, is 525 Feet Long—Will Carry Grain to Load 350 Railway Cars.

Collingwood, Dec. 17.—The Emperor, the largest steel ship ever built in the British colonies, took the water at Collingwood at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The traditional bottle of wine was broken across the bow by James Playfair, jr., father of the president of the Inland Steamship Lines, Limited, to whose order the vessel was built.

The members of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company unanimously agreed that it was the prettiest launching they have ever been responsible for; practically the entire population of the town, together with hundreds from points as far distant as Toronto, witnessed the spectacle, which marks the climax to date of Canadian shipbuilding.

The slide was about 30 feet, ending in Drydock No. 2. The gate of the dock had been removed for the hull was 13 feet wider than the dock, although the latter is the largest in Canada. A film of ice an inch thick, which covered the bay was cracked into fragments for a radious of 200 yards.

DRY FARM POINTERS

In a recent bulletin on dry farm crops issued by the Experiment Station of Montana Agricultural College, the following pointers for the dry farmer are given:

1. Science and diligence will quadruple the harvest.
2. Water is of first importance. Use all possible means to prevent its waste.
3. From seven to ten inches of water can be saved for the crop by timely cultivation.
4. Disc after the harvester, as early in the spring as possible, and immediately after plowing.
5. Harrow after every rain and whenever a crust begins to form.
6. Do not let weeds grow on summer tilled land—they use up the water.
7. Harrow the grain in the spring until it is six inches high.
8. Pack the subsurface before seeding.
9. Use drills that pack the earth about the seed.
10. Use only the best seed select varieties and well cleaned.
11. Two of three pounds to an acre is enough.
12. Plant ripening crops and early seeding grasses for the dry farm. Late crops must be intertilled.
13. More can be produced in one crop after summer tillage than in two or three consecutive crops.
15. Market concentrated products; meat and butter pay better than forage.
16. Garden crops and shrubbery, as well as trees, may be made to thrive by thorough tillage.

CANADA THE PRODUCER.

J. J. Hill Believes the States will Soon be Importing Our Wheat and Flour

James J. Hill, perhaps the best authority on farming and raiseading on this continent, has stated that within a very few years the United States will be compelled to import wheat and flour. He quotes statistics to show that the ratio of the population is increasing much faster than the production of foodstuffs, and draws the conclusion that in a very few years the United States will be importing. He also states that Canada will be the great producing country of the 20th century, and that much of the grain and flour which the United States will import will be secured in the Canadian West. In this connection it is interesting to notice that from 100,000 to 200,000 American farmers are coming into the Canadian West every year, and bringing, and which will yet grow wheat that is to supply their needs to the south.

$111.00 Turned In.

At a well attended meeting of young people belonging to Knox Church, it was announced that $111 had already been received towards the purchase of a pulpit chair. The boxes are not all in yet and it is expected that when they are, the full amount required will be made up.

TEACHERS WITHOUT POSITIONS

Yet Many Classes in London Schools Are Overcrowded

In many parts of London, England, young women who have been trained as teachers may, it is asserted, be found serving as waitresses in teashops or as cashiers in drapery establishments, whilst men students unable to obtain a position in the sphere for which they are fitted, have been forced to accept situations as motor-omnibus drivers.

The arrangement which permits this misapplication of talent is a growing grievance among London training college students, who complain that the action of the London County Council Education Committee with regard to what is known as the "college" list, materially lessens their prospects of securing satisfactory positions. No student whose name is not on this list can apply for a vacancy in a London provided school. The list this year contains 300 names, but of these only ninety-three are names of L.C.C. students. Side by side with this state of affairs, the last official report shows that there are 2,000 classes in London elementary schools with over sixty children in each.

The attention of the President of the Board of Education is to be called to the fact that in the infants' department of a school in Islington each class contains more than seventy children, and one class contains eighty-four.

LETTER ON A DEAD WOMAN

Mrs. Harry Ford Wrote That She Was Still In Need of Friends

A remarkable letter came to light at an inquest at Westminster concerning the finding of a body of an unknown woman in the Thames. The body had apparently been in the water for at least ten days. The letter, dated from a common lodging-house at Crescent-street, Notting Hill, was addressed to "Mrs. Harry Ford." It was signed "Janet Robertson."

The coroner read this letter, in the course of which the writer said:—

"I am still in need of friends. I have many enemies, and never get my letters. I have tried all sorts of places, but some one always seems to get them first. Although I am an old hag, it will not take me long to pull myself together. I have been so badly used lately that I am disgusted with everything, myself included. I hope you will understand how I am placed, and forgive my faults. I am not really a bad sort."

SUICIDE ON BED OF ROSES

Left Note Saying He was Finishing His Life Poetically

George Spinoza, aged 52, was found dead in his flat in Paris suffocated by gas. He was lying on a bed of roses, and a note on the table announced his intention of finishing thus poetically a life which had become a burden to him.

COLORED POPULATION DECLINES

The Chatham Planet says the colored population of Chatham has been going behind of recent years. The scarcity of jobs is one of the reasons. The young colored men of the city find it difficult to get work, with the result that they are seeking it in other places. Many of them have secured positions in Detroit, where there is a constant demand for colored waiters, hotel porters, etc.

NOW ABOUT CLEAN FOOD

Another Splendid Opportunity to Bring Out Facts

When the "Weekly" which sued us for libel (because we publicly denounced them for an editorial attack on our claims) was searching for some "weak spot," they thought best to send a N.Y. Atty. to Battle Creek, summoned 25 of our workmen and took their sworn statements before a Commissioner.

Did we object? No. On the contrary, we helped all we could, for the opportunity was too good to be lost.

Geo. Haines testified he inspected the wheat and barley, also floors and every part of the factories to know things were kept clean. That every 30 minutes a sample of the products was taken and inspected to keep the food up to standard and keep out any impurities, also it is the duty of every man in the factories to see that anything not right is immediately reported. Has been with the Co. 10 years.

Edward Young testified had been with Co. 15 years. Inspector, he and his men examined every sack and car of wheat and barley to see they were up to standard and rejected many cars.

H. E. Burt, Supt., testified has been with Co. over 13 years. Bought only the best grain obtainable. That the Co. kept a corps of men who do nothing but keep things clean, bright and polished.

Testified that no ingredient went into Grape-Nuts and Postum except those printed in the advertising. No possibility of any foreign things getting into the foods as most of the machinery is kept closed. Asked if the factory is open to the public, said "yes" and "it took from two to three guides constantly to show visitors through the works." Said none of the processes were carried on behind closed doors.

At this point attys. for the "Weekly" tried to show the water used was from some outside source. Testified the water came from the Co.'s own artesian wells and was pure.

He testified the workmen were first class, high-grade and inspected by the Co.'s physician to be sure they were all in proper physical condition; also testified that state reports showed that Co. pays better wages than the average and he thought higher than any in the state.

F. B. Martin, Asst. Supt., testified Grape-Nuts made of Wheat, Barley, Yeast and water. Anything else? "No, sir." Postum made of Wheat, Wheat Bran and New Orleans Molasses. Statements made on his experience of about 10 years with Co.

Testified bakers are required to wear fresh white suites changed every other day. Said had never known of any of the products being sent out that were below the high standard of inspection. Asked if any one connected with the Postum Co. had instructed him how to testify. Said "No, sir."

Horace Brown testified has been with Co. 9 years. Worked in Grape-Nuts bake shop. Testified the whole of the flour is composed of Wheat and Barley. Attys. tried to confuse him, but he insisted that any casual visitor could see that nothing else went into the flour. Said machinery and floors always kept clean.

So these men were examined by the "Weekly" lawyers hoping to find at least one who would say that some under-grade grain was put in or some unclean condition was found somewhere.

But it was no use.

Each and every man testified to the purity and cleanliness.

As a sample, take the testimony of Luther W. Mayo. Testified been with Company about 10 years. Now working in the bakery department making Grape-Nuts. Testified that the ovens and floors are kept clean and the raw products as they go in are kept clean. Also that the wearing apparel of the employes has to be changed three times a week.

Q. Do you use Postum or Grape-Nuts yourself at all?

A. Yes, I use them at home.

Q. If from your knowledge of the factory which you have gained in your ten years at the factory you believe that they were dirty or impure in any way, would you use them?

A. I do not think I would. No.

Asked if any one on behalf of the Company had asked him to testify in any particular manner. Stated "No."

All these sworn depositions were carefully excluded from the testimony at the trial, for they wouldn't sound well for the "Weekly."

Think of the fact that every man swore to the purity and cleanliness so that the Atty. for the "Weekly" was forced to say in open court that the food was pure and good.

What a disappointment for the "Weekly!"

But the testimony showed:

All the grain used in Grape-Nuts, Postum and Post Toasties is the highest standard possible to obtain.

None of the workmen had been told how to testify.

Most of them have been from 10 to 15 years with the Co. and use the products on their tables at home.

Why do their families use the products, Grape-Nuts, Postum and Post Toasties, that they, themselves, make?

QUEEN MARY

She Will Never Wear the Silly Extremes of Fashion.

The new Queen of England is deservedly popular, and from the moment of her debut as the Princess May of Teck she seemed to take hold of the popular imagination and has perhaps the most elegant girl in society, for, though far from blessed with a superfluity of wealth, she was—possibly owing to her Austrian parentage—chic and neat in her dress. She attires herself in a style of her own and never alters the dressing of her hair. She has thus become the archetype of the neat, carefully groomed, tailor-made Englishwoman, while her evening gowns are made in the Court fashion and never incline to the untidy and "artistic." Queen Mary will undoubtedly lead the fashion in English dress, just as King Edward set the modes for men, not only in England, but all over the world. The silly extremes of fashion will never be worn by the new Queen, who shows innate good taste in every respect of her life. Queen Mary, it is known in inner circles, has quiet, intellectual leanings, and is especially fond of pictures, reading, music, the drama, and the intellectual side of travel. Nothing pleased her better than to slip away abroad, incognita, with a single lady in-waiting, and to explore some interesting town. When in Prague a year or two ago, she was running about that most picturesque of European capitals, quite alone, and unrecognized. The Princess of Wales had come to see the city where her ancestress, the daughter of James I., once reigned over Bohemia as Queen of Hearts.

THE FARMERS OF DENMARK.

Over 89 Per Cent. of Them Are Said to Own Their Farms.

The three things, according to Frederick Howe, in The Outlook, which made the country of Denmark unique, are peasant ownership, nearly universal co-operation, and the political supremacy of the peasant class. Denmark has "a farmer Parliament, a farmer Ministry, and a farmer point of view in its legislative enactments." Over 89 per cent. of the Danish farmers are said to own their own farms, the average size of which is thirty-nine acres. A farmer who has paid one-tenth or more of the purchase price of a farm can borrow from the State Treasury on mortgage, at four per cent., to pay the balance. The railways are State-owned, and conducted to pay wages and expenses. City wages are determined by the agricultural index.

Intensive cultivation and co-operative buying and selling have made the Dane the best farmer in the world. The farms, says Mr. Howe, are cultivated like market gardens, the chief products of which are butter, eggs, bacon, poultry and fine stock. There are now 1,087 co-operative dairies, comprising a membership of between 90 and 95 per cent. of the farmers. These export to England nearly a million dollars of butter per week. The egg-export society is another example of co-operation. It was organized in 1895, and has developed an export business of over six million dollars per year. The eggs are stamped, and expertly graded. Emphasis is put on quality, rather than on quantity, and hence the products command the highest market prices.

TEACHING HORSES TO STAND.

They Must Be Taught to Be Absolutely Still.

A team or a single horse that will stand perfectly still until asked to move forward, is about as sure a test of the kind of a horseman the driver is as can be found, says J. W. Sangster in The Canadian Farm. How often do we see some spirited horse stamping around, backing up, and then straining on the rein, while its driver is alternately jerking at the rein, and endeavoring to get the rug around his knees, or assisting some lady perhaps, to get comfortably seated? There is a time when this matter can be remedied. It is when the horse is receiving his first lessons. He should be taught to stand absolutely still at all times, until he receives the word of command to move on. Moderately still will not do. It must be emphasized in the horse's mind that he must not move. If this is once done, and it takes a good many lessons to do it, the matter is practically settled. The horse's one stock in trade is his memory, and he will afterward stand still, so that the driver can make all preparations in comfort.

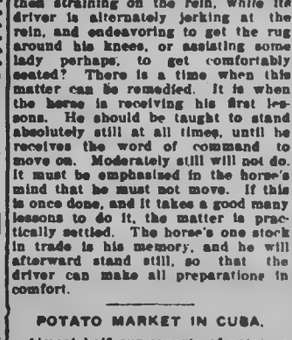
POTATO MARKET IN CUBA.

Almost half our exports of potatoes for the fiscal year ending March 31st went to Cuba, shipments to that island amounting to $405,893 worth, representing an increase over the previous year of $103,884. The increase in volume was much larger, but prices were, on the whole, from a third to a half lower than in former years. American buyers, enjoying, as they do, a preferential tariff in that market, made every effort to capture it, quoting lower and still lower prices, till their potatoes were offered in Havana at $1.50 per barrel, c.i.f., and finally $1.40 per barrel. Still, with the new Cuban crop on the market, Canadian potatoes continued to arrive in undiminished quantities, and on June 24th were still holding the market, to the exclusion of potatoes from all other countries.

PARLIAMENT'S WINE CELLAR.

The balance-sheet of the Kitchen Committee of the British House of Commons for last year shows that the amounts received for the refreshments of members and their guests were: Provisions, $40,000; cigars, $5,500; wines, $36,000. The profit on provisions was about $7,500.

In addition to the usual subsidy of $10,000 from the Treasury, the kitchen received a supplementary grant of $3,500 and a grant for renewals of $2,000. The amount spent on replenishing the wine cellar was $20,000; and $4,005 was spent on cigars. Wages and salaries amounted to $23,000.



PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

To Discuss By-Laws.

There will be an important meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade to-night, when the by-laws to be voted upon by the rate-payers at the municipal elections will be taken up and discussed. The measures to come up are the proposal to aid the Bonner-Worth Worsted Yarn Company to establish a business here, and to give a franchise to the Chas. E. Dittmer Natural Gas Company. Both are important and a free discussion of them from all sides will be discussion of them from all sides will give the voters a chance to see the matter intelligently. All citizens are invited to be present in the Council Chambers to-night at 8 o'clock.

Two trappers from Ball Lake, in the city yesterday, were spoken to by the Times man. These wily catchers of the equally crafty mink and muskrat, state that Indians have been killing all the fur bearing animals in the bush, by trapping out of season, when furs are practically worthless.

Local Municipal Politics.

There is nothing doing in local municipal politics. Last year Local Option was an issue—the issue—and created a live interest. This year there is no question of that nature before the electors, and any contests that may develop will be based on details of administration of the affairs of the town. It is to be hoped that there will be a good attendance at the nominations, and that citizens who are qualified to look after the business of the municipality will be willing to take the responsibility. The nominations are to be held on Monday, the 26th of December, and polling on January 2nd.

City Property Com. in business Session

Delay in Completion of Isolation Hospital Raises Question of Who Shall Defray Cost of Heating the Building Until Contractors are Through Work Thereon.

The City Property Com. met last night.

There were present His Worship, Mayor Morrow, chairman, Aldermen Duncan, Aldermen, Morgan, Graham, Buller and Bradburn.

The committee will advertise for a caretaker of the Isolation Hospital, which will be ready for occupancy the first of the year. Any person applying for this position must be a married man, whose wife is qualified to act as cook for the hospital. Conditions governing this position may be obtained on application to the City Clerk.

Contractor W. J. Johnston appeared before the committee regarding heating the new Isolation Hospital during the construction operations. Mr. Johnston complained that unfortunate delays on the part of the steam fitter have carried the work into this cold season of the year, involving additional expenditure in fuel. On the other hand, the steam fitter and plumber claims that the building was not ready for him at the time specified in the contract.

This whole question involves someone supplying fuel sufficient to heat the building the two weeks required for its completion. Of course, according to the contract, the contractor is responsible for all heating during such time as the building is under construction.

The city will supply the necessary coal in question, cost of which will be charged up against the contractors responsible for the delay, as may be determined.

The chairman was authorized to purchase electric bells for the public library.

BRAVE POLICEMAN STRANGLED WOLF

Which Escaped From its Cage in Theatre and Bit Eight Persons in the Audience.

New York, Dec. 20.—A police hero medal will be asked for Policeman John J. Cosgrove, of Brooklyn, who, at the risk of his own life, battled with a wolf which escaped from its cage on the stage of the Amphion Theatre of Brooklyn, biting eight persons in the audience last night.

While men battled in a mad stampede towards the exits and women fainted, Cosgrove strangled the animal with his bare hands, receiving a score of bites about the arms and legs before assistance arrived and the infuriated beast was caged.

A TRIP ACROSS THE CONTINENT

Interesting Address by Mr. H. B. Collier Last Night.

Mr. H. B. Collier, who accompanied the Manufacturers' excursion across the continent last summer, gave an interesting account of the trip in the lecture hall of the Charlotte street church last evening. The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides operated by Mr. H. O. Fiske, and was much enjoyed by the audience.

Some musical numbers contributed also to the enjoyment of the evening. A vocal solo by Messrs. R. F. Downey and Fleming was well given. Miss E. Pringle was accompanists. Mr. R. J. Kidd acted as chairman.

Young Negro Brutally Killed Whole Family

Durham, N.C., Dec. 20.—Three charred bodies found in the ruins of the burned home of J. L. Saners, near Hester, twelve miles from here, last night, and strands of a girl's hair discovered in a pool of blood in the yard, led to the arrest an hour later of Nathan Moncague, a young negro, on charges of criminal assault and murder, and arson.

The bodies are believed to be those of Mr. Saners, his daughter, Mary Saners, and his little two-year-old grand-daughter.

CHOIR OF ST. MARTIN'S.

Present Rev. Father Fitzpatrick With Large Picture.

Last Sunday afternoon the members of the St. Martin's choir waited upon the Rev. M. D. Fitzpatrick and presented him with an address and a large and magnificent picture of the choir. The address, which was a lengthy one, was signed by Mrs. Samuel Crough, Miss Agnes Scollard organist, and Messrs. J. K. Galvin and Peter Flood.

The Rev. Father was taken completely by surprise but expressed his heart felt gratitude. Credit must principally be given to Mrs. Daniel Crough, as in reality the picture was her own personal gift made on behalf of the whole choir.

Post Office Busy Week.

This is the busy week at the local post office and the staff will be obliged to work overtime in their efforts to distribute the usually heavy Christmas mail as well as try and satisfy the whims of those who expect to receive the same at the exact hour they think it should arrive. The lot of the members of the post office staff is not a pleasant one at this season of the year, as those who are in a position to know can testify. Those who do not receive their Christmas mail promptly are asked to bear with this temporary inconvenience until the clerks have finally waded through the mountains of mail matter that fill the office.

One shaft struck him on the side. His face was rather painfully bruised, and he was otherwise badly shaken up. He was able to walk home, however, and will be out again in a few days.

GERMAN STEAMER LOST IN BIG GALE

150 Persons are Believed to Have Perished—No Word From Two Ships.

Las Palmas, Canary Islands, Dec. 20.—That the German steamers Ingbert and Irma Woermann have been wrecked with a loss of 150 lives in a terrific storm which is raging off the coast was the fear expressed by mariners today.

The Ingbert went ashore in the gale yesterday and the Irma Woermann, which has the German Consul to Las Palmas on board, went to her assistance, but word cannot be had from either ship today. There were about 150 passengers on both vessels.

BRITISH HOUSE NOW COMPLETE

Government Majority is Two More Than Formerly—Liberals Have Fewer Seats.

London, Dec. 20.—The returns from the three constituencies, the polling of which yesterday brought to a close the general elections for the first Parliament of King George were announced today.

James Gilhooly, who, as an O'Brienite, long represented the West division of Cork County, was one of the returned, adding one to the Independent Nationalists total. Gilhooly defeated D. O'Leary, Nationalists.

In the south division of Kilkenny County, M. Keating, Nationalist, was another re-elected.

CHARLTON CASE

Remarkable Case Before the United States Circuit Court.

Trenton, N.J., Dec. 20.—The habeas corpus proceedings in the case of Porter Charlton, who has confessed that he murdered his wife, Mary Scott Castle Charlton, at Lake Como Italy, will come up for hearing today before Judge Rollstab, in the United States Circuit Court. This is the first of a series of legal moves that will be taken by Charlton's counsel to prevent the extradition of the young man to Italy, as ordered by Secretary Knox. Other steps will be taken with the view of ultimately getting the case before the United States Supreme Court, and it is predicted that at least two years will be consumed before Charlton is returned to Italy for trial.

SUITABLE XMAS GIFTS.

Surely Your Wife, Sister, Sweetheart or Friend is Worth While.

Messrs. Frank Clarke & Son, the George street jewellers, located at the corner of Brock street, with their usual enterprise have imported a large consignment of goods specially fit for the Christmas trade.

Mr Frank Clarke, the senior partner of this firm is too well known to our citizens to require any superfluous introduction. Mr. Clarke with his banjo and accompanying voice has delighted thousands of our citizens, doing the good work for "sweet charity's" sake. Whilst Mr. Clarke has always been anxious to assist churches and charities by his banjo performances, he has another side: the business side.

For the Christmas trade Messrs. Clarke & Son, oldest jewelry firm in Peterboro, have imported a special line of goods that simply MUST appeal to all those who want to please their friends at this joyous season of the year. Now Messrs. Clarke & Son, will have something else to tell you about when the Christmas and New Year's season is over. Still, as expensive goods require a day to think over before buying, we will take up that matter of precious stones. Now some jewellers new to the trade, buy diamonds, emeralds, saphires, rubies, pearls, etc., like they would grind-stones, viz.: and only by weight. Here is where the jewellers may make or may lose, but the customer must certainly lose in most cases. However, Mr. Frank Clarke, with 30 years experience in precious stones, knows how, when and where to buy. This Christmas he has purchased the finest lot of diamonds, saphires, pearls, peridots, rubies, aqua-marines, emeralds, etc., that ever came to Peterborough. These stones are set in Tiffany, or other up-to-date settings, or can be set to suit purchasers. Don't forget this immense stock of precious stones. Also, don't forget that the brass and copper high grade goods recently imported from Russia by the firm is one of the finest ever brought to Canada. The man, woman or child wanting anything in ornamental or useful jewelry goods should hurry to Clarke's before Christmas Day and get a large selection and small prices.

SON STUMBLED OVER HIS FATHER'S BODY

He Had Been Murdered—Was Terribly Beaten by Heavy Instrument.

New York, Dec. 20.—Ambrose Wilson, a young Jersey City business man, returned to his boarding house on Johnson avenue early to-day after a belated visit with friends, and tumbled head first over the body of his father, Frank Wilson, in the hallway.

The old man's body was cold and he had been dead apparently for several hours. Examination showed that he had been terribly beaten with some heavy instrument, and finally killed, by a stab in the neck, which severed the jugular vein.

THE DESCENDANTS OF KINGS

Book of Membership Should be Bound Red, White and Blue.

Some years ago a book bound in royal purple and containing the names of happy Americans who "validly" might lay claim to royal descent was published and given to a waiting and eager market. Now a volume in red has come which gives a restricted list of Americans who pridefully may say that they spring from the scepter bearers who ruled well or ruled ill, generally ill, in ancient days.

In the purple book there will be found the names of thousands of Americans, each a king in his own right, as we good democrats say, one of whose ancestors at least wore the royal garments. The book in red contains only 160 names. It is far better to one of 160 than one of thousands.

If we are not wrong on paternal statistics one of the earliest English kings had twelve children, all of whom married and had large if not interesting families. Other kings of the early days had just as numerous offspring. Under the natural law of increase the descendants of the kings of the earth are to be counted by millions.

The truly exclusive society of today would be formed of Americans who are not of royal descent. It would be hard work to find enough qualified members to fill the offices of president, secretary and treasurer. Such an organization however, would be the real thing, and the book of membership should be bound in red, white and blue.

You are not experimenting on your self when you take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a cold as that preparation has won for itself a great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds, and can always be depended on. It is equally valuable for adults and children and may be given to young children with implicit confidence as it contains no harmful drug. Sold by all dealers.

More Smoke Than Blaze.

At 7.30 last evening an alarm was sent in to the fire hall by telephone and box simultaneously from the corner of George and Hunter streets. It proved to be only a chimney on fire at the Belmont Club. No damage was done.

BEATING FATHER GAVE TO HIS SON FREDDY GIVES AS CAUSE OF DEATH.

A Few Minutes Before Beating Accused Man Was Playing With the Children—Little One's Evidence.

That the said John Freddie Vanstone came to his death by beating at the hands of his father George Vanstone, before 10 on the night of December 15, in the town of Goderich.

Goderich, Dec. 20.—The above was the verdict rendered by the jury after fifteen minutes' deliberation yesterday. After hearing evidence that Freddie Vanstone had been beaten to death with a broomstick by his father.

FATHER HAD BEEN PLAYING.

Lloyd, the eldest boy, said he was twelve years old, and that he was in the same room with his father, with Georgie and Annie and the baby. His mother was in an adjoining room. The father was playing with them, and apparently all enjoying the fun. This was about twenty minutes to six, before tea. After tea, Georgie, Annie, Freddie, and the witness started to do their lessons. The boy's father was sitting beside the stove. Annie and the witness commenced hearing each other their spelling. Fred was putting down the figures from 1 to 10, but could get no further. Witness commenced to show him when his father interfered, telling him to "get away out of that and he would show him how to do it."

He then commenced to ill-treat him, kicking him and hitting him with his fist. His mother interferred and then the father said: "I'll go and get the broom." Witness went out to the gate and he heard his father still hitting the boy. He stayed out about half an hour, during which time the father commenced to urge the boy to put him on the chair and then put him on the floor and kick him.

TOLD A PASSERBY.

Witness on the request of his mother, went to ask a neighbor to come over, but he was not at home. He then told a passerby coming along and stating that he would interfere if necessary when he returned from uptown. Shortly afterwards the father sent the other little ones to bed and the witness shortly afterwards went in and also went to bed.

"Did Freddie stop crying out before your father quit beating him?"

"No, he cried up till nearly the last."

Annie Vanstone, the only sister of the murdered boy, said she was nine years of age. She stated that she went out to the back door when her brother went out the front door. When she went out her father was hitting Freddie with both ends of the broom; she thought it would be an hour after tea, when she finished her lesson, that her father commenced beating Freddie. This, she said, continued until after she went to bed about 9 o'clock.

Srrangled the Female Cook at Colborne Hotel

Brighton, Ont., Dec. 20.—A woman by the name of Jiey Brimicomb, who was deaf and dumb, and the cook of the Hotel Bristol, Colborne, was found dead in a room of the hotel yesterday morning under peculiar circumstances. To-day's developments seem to point to the fact that the woman was choked to death, a finger prints have been found on her neck. The woman was apparently in good health.

The coroner has issued warrants for an inquest.

BEARING CHILDREN.

A Chicago physician has promulgated another set of scientific rules for rearing children.

Ordinarily this is the self-imposed task of unmarried ladies of uncertain age and confirmed bachelors, but occasionally when business is dull a medical practitioner will tackle the problem.

The code set forth may be briefly summarized in the single warning: "Don't coddle the child." Good advise, no doubt. But the mistake made by most of the scientific rule-makers is that they do not differentiate between children and vegetables.

The principles involved in the successful cultivation of cabbages or string beans may be codified and followed with more or less success, due allowance being made for differences of soil and climate. But when it comes to following hard-and-fast rules in the rearing of children—that is quite another matter. No two children ever were or ever will be alike in temperament, disposition, moral sense, or physical qualities. What is coddling for one would be almost ll treatment and neglect for another.

What is most needed in scientific rules for the training of parents—rules that will permit them to know and understand their own offspring.

WAINWRIGHT.

Advices received at the Grand Trunk Pacific offices state that there is an excellent opening at Wainwright, Alberta for a flour mill. The local consumption of flour is a carload a week. There is plenty of water and cheap fuel, and the district produces the best hard wheat.

To show the growth of a town in Western Canada it is stated that Wainwright, Alberta, which is not more than two years old, are negotiating for $5,000 steam fire engine. They have also authorized the employment of an engineer to run the level of the entire town preparatory to the installation of a complete drainage system.

Five Men were Burned by Molten Metal

Belleville, Dec. 20.—J. Connell, B. J. Conway, A. Draycott, H. Davidson and R. Moore, employed in the moulding shop of Marsh and Heuthornes foundry, were today all more or less burned by molten metal. The spout of the cupola, where the metal is blew out, scattered the molten metal about the shop and breaking some panes of glass in a skylight. Moore was more seriously injured than his fellow-employees.

A carpenter named Sheely who was employed on the new G.T.R. roundhouse, was this morning seriously injured by a heavy thimble falling on him. His condition is serious.

BOARD OF TRADE DISCUSS BY-LAWS

TO BE VOTED ON BY THE RATE-PAYERS AT THE COMING MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Both By-laws Were Endorsed by the Different Speakers—The Attendance at the Meeting Was Not Large.

At the meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade, held in the Council Chamber last night, there was not a very large attendance.

Ald. Gillespie was voted into the chair and the first by-law taken up was that of the Chas. E. Dittman Natural Gas Company.

Mr. Dumble on rising said, that though he did not believe that any large quantity of gas was likely to be struck he did not see any good reason for not granting the franchise under proper safeguards.

If gas was struck in sufficient quantities it would be a good thing for the people of Peterborough, as it would give them cheap gas for heating and manufacturing purposes.

If gas was not struck in sufficient quantities, all the damage would be a whole in the ground that would not do them much harm. The chairman read the full terms of the franchise.

There was not much discussion and on motion of Mr. Dunible, seconded by Mr. Campbell, the Board of Trade voted in favor of granting the franchise.

The Bonner Worth Co. Limited By-law was then taken up.

Mr. Denham stated the conditions of the proposed franchise and showed that it was most favorable to the people of Peterborough if they wished to encourage manufacturers in the city and that the terms were such that the citizens could not possibly lose much, if anything at all.

The Bonner-Worth Co. were to purchase a site, put up a $12,000 building and put in a plant to total $18,000, and to employ at least 30 hands. The city was to advance $6,000, the first year and $6,000 more the second year if everything was satisfactory, taking a first mortgage on the property for the whole amount.

The loan was to be paid back in annual instalments of $1,000, commencing the third year, so that the liability would be less every year.

It was stated that though they only guaranteed to employ 30 hands they would in reality, employ between 40 and 50 hands.

Some of the speakers stated that many of the ratepayers seemed to think that it was too small concern to bother with, but they had been taught one good lesson already. Some years ago a mill company desired some privileges, but the application was turned down and Port Hope secured the mill which to-day employs 300 hands.

It was stated that the promoters of this company had been seen by some of our most prominent businessmen, who had concluded that they were earnest practical men, who were putting there own money into the concern and had good backing behind them and that the enterprise was a sound one, indeed one of our firms had offered to take over the whole products of the mill.

All of the speakers thought that it was much wiser to help several small sound concerns which would be likely to grow than to go in for some big concern whose ultimate success might be doubtful. Not a single voice was raised in opposition to granting the franchise, on the contrary everyone who expressed his opinion spoke strongly in favor of the carrying the By-law.

It was moved by Ald. Bradburn, seconded by Mr. Ackeman, that the Board of Trade strongly recommend the granting of the Bonner Worth Co. franchise, especially as it had been carefully and fully considered and approved by the City Council.

The motion was carried unanimously and many of those present promised to do all they could to bring out the vote in favor of the By-law.

It was also suggested that Mayor Morrow be requested to call a mass meeting so that the ratepayers could be informed of all the facts and enable them to vote intelligently on this By-law.

The Farmers Bank's Branches All Closed

Lindsay, Dec. 20.—When the Farmers' Bank's local branch closed its doors yesterday afternoon at the usual hour it was not thought by the majority of citizens that the bank had closed its doors for good. A few citizens were aware of the fact late last night, but not until this morning did the news become generally known.

It did not come as a surprise to Lindsay citizens, because of the fact of the startling nature of the evidence brought out at the trial of the Farmers' Bank's action against Messrs. A. B. McGill, J. J. Fleury, and J. L. Coulter, who were honorably acquitted yesterday on the charge of conspiracy. The closing of the doors has not been marked by any run, and it is understood that there are very few large deposits in the branch here.

Lindsay citizens are congratulating the three ex-employees on their warning their numerous friends that the Farmers' Bank was at low ebb, and that it would be best to withdraw their money. Mr. McGill had in the first place induced his friends to put their deposits in the Farmers' Bank, and his friends state that he was acting rightly in giving them a hint that the stock was selling as low as $11 per share.

All branches of the Farmers' Bank in Ontario have closed their doors.

Don't trifle with a cold is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in case of a child. There is nothing better than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs and colds in children. It is safe and sure. For sale by all dealers.

UP FOR TRIAL.

Jersey City, N.J., Dec. 19.—James Gallagher, who shot Mayor Gaynor, on August 9th last, will be arranged before Judge Blair in the Special Sessions Court to-day for trial. Gallagher is to be tried first on the indictment charging him with atrocious assault on Street Commissioner Edwards while he was trying to save the Mayor. Alexander Simpson, a New Jersey criminal lawyer, appeared for the defence. The State was represented in court by Prosecutor Garven and Assistant Prosecutor Vickers.

THE VETO CONFERENCE.

In a recent speech Mr Balfour denounced with unusual vigour the attempt to hold the Unionists responsible for the failure of the Constitutional Conference. He said: "The Conference, as you all know, failed to come to an agreement through no fault, let me say again, of any member of it, and after discussions which have convinced me, at all events, that such conferences may be of great utility in the future history of the country. The conference, however, broke down. What immediately happened? There seemed a concerted out later, with such modified spiracy in the Radical press, supported, I regret to say, by many Radical politicians, to spread abroad the legend that the Conference broke down because of the antiquated Toryism of the House of Lords, or of certain members of the House of Lords who would not abate one jot or tittle of their hereditary principles, or concede that the House of Lords existed not for the benefit of its members, but for the benefit of the community at large. Never was there a calumny more absolutely baseless. Never was there a misrepresentation which the very statements by the Radical members of Conference more amply and fully condemn. It is absolutely without foundation. It has not a shred of truth in it, and when you find men high in the councils of the Radical party talking as if there were ranged on one side a small section of society endowed with hereditary privileges, clinging to them for their own objects and in utter indifference to the public good—I do not believe that even the history of Radical propaganda shows a caricature which has less the merit which even the grossest caricature should possess, and that is the merit of reminding you to a certain extent of the original."

THE RED YEAR

mitted, but from the Palace itself. Whoever the newcomers were they made straight for the pavilion, and, as he was unarmed, he did not hesitate to show himself against the sky line. For ill or well, he wanted to know his fate, and he determined to spring over the battlements in the hope of reaching the river if he received the slightest warning of hostile intent by those who sought him.

"Is that you Malcolm?" said a low voice, and his heart leaped when he recognized Mr. Mayne's accents.

"Yes. Can it be possible that you are here?"

He ran down the stone steps. On the level of the garden he could see three figures, one a white-robed native, one a man in European garments, and the third a woman wrapped in a dark cloak. A suppressed sob uttered by the woman sent a gush of hot blood to his face. He sprang forward. In another instant Winifred was in his arms. And that was their unspoken declaration of love in the garden of Nana Sahib's house at Bithoor—while within half were thousands who would gladly have torn them limb from limb, and the southern horizon was aflame with the light of their brethren's dwelling places.

"Oh, Frank, dear," whispered the poor broken-hearted girl, "all good fortune has led you within these walls." Yet, I thank God for it. Promise you will kill me ere they drag me from your side again."

"Hush, Winifred. For the sake of all of us calm yourself," said her uncle. "This man says he has brought a here to help us to escape. Surely you can find in Malcolm's presence the earnest of his good faith."

The native was intervened. Speaking with a certain dignity and using the language of the court, he said that they had no moment to lose. They must depend on all by means of a ruse, and could not start beyond the old fort. One of the officer sahibs, with his wife and a couple of native servants, was keeping close to the river bank, and meant to go a few miles further down, and, taking care not to be seen, cross that the ferry. Then, making a detour, they must avoid the village, and endeavor to reach the road again about two miles to the north of Bithoor, travelling at top speed to Cawnpore, but letting it be known in the villages on the way that they came from Cawnpore.

This unlooked-for ally impressed the concluding circumstance strongly on Malcolm, but when asked for a reason, he said:

"It is the Prince's order. Come! There is no time for further speech. Here is the rope."

He uncoiled a long cord from beneath his cummerbund, and, running up the steps, adjusted it to a pillar of the baradari with an ease and quickness that showed familiarity with such means of exit from a closely guarded residence.

"Now, you first, sahib," said he to Malcolm. "Then we will lower the miss-sahib, and the burra sahib can follow."

There was nothing to be gained by questioning him, especially as Mayne murmured that he could explain a good deal of the mystery underlying the Begum's wish that they should go north. The exterior field was reached without any difficulty. Within twenty yards they encountered a little group of mounted men, and Malcolm found, to his great delight, that Chumru, his bearer, was holding Nejdi's bridle, while his companions were Akbab Khan and two troopers who had ridden from Agra. To make the miracle more complete, Malcolm's sword was tied to the Arab's saddle and his revolvers were still in the holsters.

Winifred, making the best of a man's saddle until they could improvise a crutch at their first halt, would admit of no difficulty in that respect. The fact that her lover was present had lightened her heart of the terror which had possessed her during many days.

They were on the move, with the two sharp-eyed sowars leading, when the noise made by a number of horsemen, coming toward them on the landward side and in front, brought them to an abrupt halt.

"Spread out to the right until you reach the river," cried a rough voice, which Malcolm was sure he identified as belonging to Abdul Hug. "Then we cannot miss them. And remember, brothers, if we secure the girl unharmed, we shall earn a rich reward from the Maharajah."

Winifred, shivering with fear again, knew not what the man said, but she drew near to Malcolm and whispered:

"Not into their hands, Frank, for God's sake!"

The movement of her horse's feet had not passed unnoticed.

"Be sharp, there!" snarled the Pathan again. "They are not far off, and only six of them. Shout, you on the right when you are on the bank."

"None can pass between me and the stream," replied a more distant voice.

"Forward, then! Keep line! Not too fast, you near the wall."

Frank loosened his sword from its fastenings and took a revolver in his left hand, in which he also held the reigns. He judged Abdul Hug to be some fifty yards distant, and he was well aware that the fog became thinner with each yard as he turned his back on the river.

"Take Winifred back to the angle of the wall," he whispered to Mayne. "You will find a budgerow there. Get your horses on board, if possible, and I shall join you in a minute or less. If I manage to scatter these devils, we shall outwit them yet."

It was hopeless, he knew, to attempt to ride through the enemy's cordon. There would be a running fight against superior numbers, and Winifred's presence made that a last resource. The most fortunate accident of the deserted craft being moored beneath the palace wall offered a far more probable means of escape. What blunder or treachery had led to this attack he could not imagine. Nor was he greatly troubled with speculation on that point. Winifred must be saved, he had a sword in his hand, and he was mounted on the best horse in India. What better hap could a cavalry subaltern desire than such a fight under such conditions?

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2.625 oz. of gold and 3.267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Mairs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $35,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

ARMADA TREASURE

Diver Brings Up Mass of Metal at Tobermory

The search for treasure, which may or may not exist in a sunken Spanish galleon at Tobermory, is being rigorously prosecuted, and interesting relics are being recovered daily. Among the finds are a stiletto, in a good state of preservation, an ointment box of very fine wire, set in a metal casing, and a very curious form of spoke-shave and scabbard, with the sword worn very thin. The diver brought up two masses of metal, the larger of which weighed about 90 lbs., and was rectangular in shape, with a sunk handle. The other was of the same metal, but circular in shape, with a finely bevelled hand grip all around the inside. The anxious question arose naturally: "Are these masses of silver or galena? Are they the first masses of the sunken treasure, or where they part of the ballast of the ship?" Excitement spread among those interested as they hurried off to behold the blocks of metal, so soft that they could be cut with a bronze coin, and blackened the fingers as silver does. Part of the larger block was sent off to a firm of assayers in London, to obtain their verdict.

AERONAUTS' ADVENTURE

Balloon Caught by the Wind Falls into the Thames

Captain Disney and Lieutenant H. M. Maitland, of the Essex Regiment, England, had a narrow escape from drowning at the end of a balloon voyage. They ascended from Warley Barracks at three o'clock, and rose rapidly. At an altitude of 5,000 feet the clouds blotted out all view of the land, and the wind was blowing at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The occupants knew that by the direction in which the balloon was travelling the sea would soon be reached. The valve was opened, and the balloon descended rapidly until the Thames was in sight. It was then found to be too late to stay her progress, and a sea-anchor was thrown out. This caught in the basket, which touched water, and the rope was cut. The incident occurred in mid-Channel, between Southend and the Kentish side, and provided much excitement for those on shore. Captain Disney and Lieutenant Maitland managed to extricate themselves from the basket, and were preparing to swim ashore, when a boat from a barge arrived and picked them up.

ODDFELLOW'S FUNERAL WISHES

Left a Rough Drawing of the King of Coffin He Wished

Mr. Edward Lawrence, who died at Wellington, Shropshire, recently, at the age of 71, left a rough drawing of the kind of coffin in which he was to be buried. He directed that his body should be taken from his house to the cemetery on a bier from the local workhouse, "six staid inmates of the house to act as bearers." The letters "R.I.P." only are to be printed on the coffin plate, funeral attire is not to be worn, there are to be no flowers, and no hearse or mourning coaches, with the exception of a carriage for his widow. Mr. Lawrence was for many years a member of the Manchester Unity of Oddfellows, but in his written instructions for the funeral he expressed a wish that the funeral oration of the Order be not read at the graveside—"only a brief and simple service for the burial of the dead, to conclude with the Lord's Prayer."

MISS MAY YOHE

She Was Stricken with Paralysis in Cafe Chantant

London's footlight favorite of twenty years ago, Miss May Yohe, has been stricken with paralysis. For the last few weeks she had been engaged at one of the city restaurants of San Francisco singing popular songs at lunch and dinner. As is the custom at many of the Bohemian cafes in the United States, the artists sit and dine at the tables like ordinary patrons, and at this particular restaurant the singer has had many popular welcomes. She was singing the pathetic song from "The Arcadians," "Bring me a rose," and had reached the words, "I'm so tired of violets; take them all away," when her utterance failed, and she fell forward from her chair. Physicians hastened to her aid, and it was found that she had been seized with partial paralysis.

THE NEW STAMP ISSUE

The One Ready for Issue When Edward Died Will Be Destroyed

It will interest the postage stamp collectors to learn that the twopenny stamp of the new design which was ready for issue at the time of the death of King Edward VII., but not placed on sale, is not to be circulated for use. The Post Office authorities have decided, a correspondent is informed, to destroy the entire stock of the new stamps, of which large numbers have been printed. Perhaps a few copies may be retained in the Post Office Museum or sent to the British Museum, but in any case the particular stamp is likely to rank among the great philatelic rarities, and will probably be considered as the scarcest of all the British stamps.

POOR ANIMAL

"Little boy," asked the well-meaning reformer, "is that your mamma over yonder with the beautiful set of furs?"

"Yes, sir," answered the bright lad.

"Well, do you know what poor animal it is that has had to suffer that your mamma might be decked with the furs with which she adorns herself so proudly?"

"Yes, sir. Pa."

WRITER OF "KELLY"

The Author, a Glasgow Man, Died In Tragic Circumstances

The author and composer of "Kelly" has just died in tragic circumstances. His name was Will Letters, and he was known throughout the music-hall profession as a man of many admirable traits. He started his career on the stage at the modest end of the business, and attained some eminence as a comedian.

For several years he has appeared with the Pierrots at various summer resorts, and he was thus engaged when attacked with a fatal hemorrhage of the lungs. It occurred last week when he was at work in his white suit and painted face. He lurched forward and was carried out to await the arrival of the doctor. He became delirious at a later stage, and rambled furiously about songs he was to write.

Letters was one of a school of comedians who had their first successes in the singing rooms—"sing songs" they were called—of the North of England. Possessed of a good, strong voice says the Daily Sketch, he first of all made descriptive songs his specialty, but in later years he developed low comedy.

He was engaged successfully in various pantomime productions in England, Ireland, and Scotland, and for a time played the part of Sergeant Lightning in Fred Karno's "Dandy Thieves." He also appeared in succession to Fred Kitchen, as John Willie Jaggs in "Saturday to Monday."

With a certain gift of melody he put together a number of music-hall song successes and provided Wilkie Bard with one of his greatest pantomime hits, "Put me on an island where the girls are few," which was wedded to a garbled version of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

Later he wrote "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" a song which became so popular as to be a nuisance. The song was taken to Canada and the United States and was the rage of the last song season. His latest success was "Flanagan," which Miss Florrie Forde sang at the Isle of Man. He was engaged on other numbers at the time of his sudden and fatal indisposition.

He was a Glasgow man, and something of a favorite in that city. Following upon several years' approved appearances in pantomime, he had been re-engaged as chief comedian at one of the Birmingham theatres next season.

MILLIONAIRES' DISPLAY

Ten Thousand Pounds Spent Over Grouse Shooting

Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, the millionaire, who derives his wealth from banking and railway enterprise, is illustrating the pitch of costliness to which sport in England may attain. Mr. Whitney has laid out about $50,000 upon the grouse shooting over the Holwick Moors.

Mr. Whitney left New York on August 13th by the White Star liner Celtic, and disembarked at Holyhead. With him travelled Mrs. Whitney, their two children, and a number of sportsmen he has brought over for the grouse shooting, a party.

Mr. H. Burden, Mr. Payne Thompson, and several other well-known "New Yorkers" travelled in luxuriant style and occupied the private suites specially fitted, and for which a charge of $700 each is reported to have been made. The sitting rooms in the suites were decorated daily with choice flowers, for which Mrs. Whitney paid $200 before leaving New York.

During the early part of the voyage the millionaires' party kept to their own rooms, but later on dined in the saloon and entered upon an exchange of socialities with other passengers.

Mrs. Whitney, who is a daughter of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and is said to be worth a couple of millions in her own right, appeared in a number of magnificent costumes during the voyage, and on one occasion wore a diamond necklace worth $50,000. Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, like his father, the late Mr. Charles Whitney, one time Secretary to the American Navy, during the Administration of President Cleveland, is a keen sportsman, and keeps the best racing stable in the States.

SHOULD DOCTORS SHAVE?

A Question Which Has been Discussed for 300 Years

The question, which has been discussed for some three hundred years, as to whether the doctor, and more especially the surgeon, should sacrifice that playground of microbes—his beard—is once more to the fore, especially in France, says The Hospital. It is more than probable that everyone interested will act according to his own particular fancy in this matter, and it will probably be a long time before our Gallic confreres will be forced to sacrifice the glories of their facial decorations on the altar of hygiene. Those who have embarked upon the present crusade attack the problem from a somewhat different standpoint, and although the bacteriology of the beard has not as yet been the object of very profound study, their ideas are not unreasonable. Still, without being as radical as they would like, is it not possible that the sanctity of the laws of hygiene can be respected by the use of ordinary measures of cleanliness, or, at most, an antiseptic beard-bath?

PIGEON'S LONG TRAVELS

A homing pigeon liberated from Stafford on July 23, alighted on the liner Laurentic soon after it got out to sea on its last outward passage, and the bird was taken to Montreal, returning with the vessel to Liverpool. It was then thrown into the air with a label attached to its leg by the ship's officers, and it was found by its owner in the loft at Sowerby Bridge.

G.T.R. Receipts.

The Grand Trunk October statement shows that gross receipts of Grand Trunk proper increased £25,000; working expenses increased £30,000. Canada Atlantic net profits decreased £1,550, Grand Trunk Western net profits decreased £6,450, and Detroit, Grand Haven net profits increased £1,500. The total net profits for the whole system showed a decrease of £11,300.

ODORS THAT AID DIGESTION

Eastern Peoples Often Make the Air Fragrant with Fine Mists

Sweet scents to aid digestion are an importation into the Occident. The influence of odors on digestion is well-established. Some people cannot remain where lilacs are in full bloom or hear the odor of jasmine. Some are given a splitting headache by heliotrope or tuberose. Some are given the sensation by certain odors are nauseated even by the aroma of real lime juice. Long lists of distinctive disorders following certain odors may be brought on by odors. The fact can be explained only as a pathological phenomenon exerting its influence on the most vulnerable point in the human economy, the gastro-intestinal tract. An offending scent may set in motion a train of morbid digestive symptoms, so, on the contrary, those that are sweet and agreeable may exercise a highly beneficial effect. The Orientals have developed to a notable degree the faculty of exploiting the refreshment from pleasing fragrant odors. The most beautiful creations ever conceived in the imagination of Mohammedans are the houses reproduced in the Koran as receptacles of houris formed of musk, who exhale from their lovely bodies entrancing perfumes. It is the custom of many Eastern peoples to spend a part of a meal a season of quiet while the air around them is tendered fragrant by a fine mist. Or a bottle of their favourite perfume is constantly inhaled. Even the poor indulge in this habit, for all feel that it benefits nerves and digestion. It is believed that a psychic state favourable to the digestive process may be induced through the olfactories fully as well as through the other senses.

PROSPEROUS DOUKHOBORS

They Have Made a Veritable Garden of the Waterloo District

The Doukhobor settlement at Waterloo is fast forging to the front. The members of the colony are actively engaged in varied pursuits for the gaining of a livelihood. The communistic principle prevailing. Over the settlement is Peter Verigin, head of the Doughobor society, his legal agent being John Sherbinin.

In this settlement there are 1,100 Doukhobors. Waterloo is a veritable garden, and the great ranch is considered by experts to be almost perfect. They are clearing 4,000 acres of land, to be planted at once in an immense orchard of all kinds of fruits, both large and small.

The settlement is fulfilling a contract with the C.P.R. for 100,000 railway ties. They possess three portable sawmills, and are now negotiating for a fourth. They have a ferry across the river at Waterloo, also one this side of Castlegar, and are erecting one still farther up the river. In addition to the above they are building a bridge which connects with a private road leading to Pass creek where they own 2,000 acres of land. Where the road intercepts the bridge they are going to erect a large store for the purpose of supplying their colony, as well as the public.

A FAMOUS CLOWN

The King Remembered the Old Entertainer With a Gift

The King has sent a gift of $15 to Mr. James Doughty, the oldest public entertainer in the kingdom and once a favorite with London children as pantomime clown.

Mr. Doughty wrote to the King stating that he was the oldest member of his craft still before the public. To the old man's intense delight he received a reply from Sir William Carrington, who stated that he had been commanded by the King to send him a post office order for $15. While performing performing dogs Mr. Doughty has been a notable figure at fairs for over thirty years. He is preparing to celebrate his ninety-second birthday on August 27. When he celebrated his birthday Mr. Doughty donned his old clothes and sang some of the pantomime songs fifty years ago.

"THE GIRL AND THE EAGLE"

Lights That Failed to Solve a Dark Mystery

The mystery of "The Girl and the Eagle," a new "turn" in the programme of a London theatre, was helped to success by circumstances which obviously belonged to a scheme of different intention.

Into the darkened theatre there flew, from the stage a grotesque monster of an eagle, fathered in hideous paint, which held in its claws a limp, little lady so dead to that feeling called "the agony of suspense" that she trilled a cheery song as she floated over the upturned faces in the stalls.

She kept her head and her heart calm and her voice in tune even while hovering over a sinister-looking device of millinery with pins sticking from it like quills upon the fretful porcupine. And she was not in the least disquieted when gentlemen in the audience began to strike matches to see how it was done.

The inquisitive little flames flashed up one after another, but "The Girl and the Eagle" remained a dark secret. They disappeared together into an arrangement of black draperies on the stage, and when the lights of the theatre were turned on, as they were immediately, the mechanical bird had delivered its pretty parcel behind the scenes, there were neither wires above nor rods beneath to show how the voyage had been accomplished.

Thus, thanks to the Peeping Tom of the way 'cross wood, the success of the pretty mystery was all the more conspicuous.

BUILDING A MONOPLANE

E. Peterson Will Construct One Like DeLesseps'

E. Peterson, Fort William, decided to build a monoplane. The machine, with the exception of the engine, which has been ordered in Toronto, will be constructed entirely in Fort William. The monoplane will be similar in design to the one in which Count de Lesseps made his flights at Toronto. The frame work of the body and wings will be constructed of spruce and poplar wood and will have only one sustaining surface. A 30-horsepower engine will be installed. The monoplane complete will weigh, in the neighborhood of 600 pounds, and will be capable of ascending to a height of 3,000 feet, and attaining a speed of 40 miles an hour. The body of the machine will be 25 feet in length and the wings will have an expansion of 25 feet. The Fort William aerial navigator expects to be able to sail in the air by the end of September. The monoplane will cost $1,000.

WEDDING ROMANCE

A Windfall For a Veteran of the American Civil War

Mr. Marshall Bailey, a veteran of the American Civil War, was married Dublin to a woman of thirty-five, until recently an inmate of the South Dublin Workhouse. Mr. Bailey was born in the United States about seventy years ago, and after leaving the American Army went abroad. He had bad fortune, and for some years was an inmate of the South Dublin Workhouse, where he met his bride. About three months ago a piece of news reached him in the workhouse which enabled him to regain his independence and marry the woman of his choice. He learned that the American Government had awarded him a substantial pension and that arrears amounting to $1,750 were due to him. A large crowd, interested in the veteran's romance, witnessed the wedding. The best man, who is an inmate of the workhouse, was allowed out specially for the occasion. In reply to the showers of rice rained on the wedding carriage as it left the church the bride-groom threw out of the window a large quantity of silver, which was scrambled for by the crowd.

LIVED BY FRAUD.

An Enterprising Woman Has Easy Way of Living.

An enterprising woman of New York has demonstrated that it does not take very much of a start to make a living, and, judging from her case, a very good living. Self-made millionaires delight to tell of the days when they started out with 30 cents to make a fortune and succeeded.

This woman started with nothing but a banana skin, and, if her own account is to be credited, she made something like $4500 out of the investment. It is true that her business affairs have landed her in the courts, but she lived high while the graft lasted. Her particular trick was to conveniently let a banana skin fall on the car steps and then step on it and wait for the claim agent to come around and settle.

Her Waterloo came when she tried the trick on the New York Central and the road discovered, after it had settled for $500, that the banana skin had come from the lady's pocket book just before she took her tumble. Now they have sued her and started criminal action.

This recalls the story of the London woman who was recently caught after she had tapped about all the tills in the theatres with a scheme which was to buy a ticket, attend the show and then bill the management with her claim of a lost purse.

Which goes to show that the belief that the world owes everyone a living is not dead yet by any means.

For The Civil Service.

In the examinations for inside service Miss Estella Collinson, of the office staff of O'Connell and Gordon has the distinction of taking fifth highest place. In the examination for outside work the following Peterborough candidates were successful: Messrs. Leo Derocher, Harold W. Jobbitt, Thos. P. Martin, J. W. Richards, H. E. White.

TRAVELLING PUBLIC PAY.

Railway Company Purchases Property Worth $500,000.

Large interests, probably either C.P.R. or Canadian Northern, are reported to have recently purchased property just north of the C.P.R. right-of-way in North Toronto worth $500,000. The prices paid are reported as being in many cases more than double the previously estimated value of the property.

This means an extra $250,000 or probably $500,000, when the rest of the property is secured, of extra capital on which the public will have to pay dividends.

We believe that folks who have no desire to move or sell should receive some compensation for their trouble, but isn't 100 per cent. pretty high, especially when the public have to pay it?

The man who lives in a rented house, by the way, receives notice to quit, has all the trouble, and the owner receives the compensation.

Why not have a law fixing the purchase price for expropriation at, say 120 per cent. of assessed value? This would give ample compensation, save the public millions of dollars, and at the same time induce property owners to see that their property was assessed at its fair value, neither too high for fear of taxes, nor too low for fear of expropriation.

Band Serenade.

The band of the Salvation Army will make its usual Christmas and New Year's serenade, and no doubt will be received with the usual liberality and generosity that the people of Peterborough have always shown in the past to this excellent and deserving organization. The campaign will open with a concert on George street on Saturday night, Christmas eve. On the days observed as Christmas and New Year's Day, the band will serenade in different parts of the city in the morning and will also play each evening during the holiday week. A large amount of new music has been secured and a great part of it is particularly appropriate for the festive season, so that the band will be in better shape than ever to please and entertain. The organization is one that the citizens of Peterborough should be proud of. It has grown from a small beginning and has flourished, and a cordial welcome should be given the band on its annual round of the city.

NOW ABOUT CLEAN FOOD

Another Splendid Opportunity to Bring Out Facts

When the "Weekly" which sued us for libel (because we publicly denounced them for an editorial attack on our claims) was searching for some "weak spot," they thought best to send a N.Y. Atty. to Battle Creek, summoned 25 of our workmen and took their sworn statements before a Commissioner.

Did we object? No. On the contrary, we helped all we could, for the opportunity was too good to be lost.

Geo. Haines testified he inspected the wheat and barley, also floors and every part of the factories to know things were kept clean. That every 30 minutes a sample of the products was taken and inspected to keep the food up to standard and keep out any impurities, also it is the duty of every man in the factories to see that anything not right is immediately reported. Has been with the Co. 10 years.

Edward Young testified had been with Co. 15 years. Inspector, he and his men examined every sack and car of wheat and barley to see they were up to standard and rejected many cars.

H. E. Burt, Supt., testified has been with Co. over 13 years. Bought only the best grain obtainable. That the Co. kept a corps of men who do nothing but keep things clean, bright and polished....

Testified that no ingredient went into Grape-Nuts and Postum except those printed in the advertising. No possibility of any foreign things getting into the foods as most of the machinery is kept closed. Asked if the factory is open to the public, said "yes" and "it took from two to three guides constantly to show visitors through the works." Said none of the processes were carried on behind closed doors.

At this point attys. for the "Weekly" tried to show the water used was from some outside source. Testified the water came from the Co.'s own artesian wells and was pure.

He testified the workmen were first class, high-grade and inspected by the Co.'s physician to be sure they were all in proper physical condition; also testified that state reports showed that Co. pays better wages than the average and he thought higher than any in the state.

F. B. Martin, Asst. Supt., testified Grape-Nuts made of Wheat, Barley, Yeast and water. Anything else? "No, sir." Postum made of Wheat, Wheat Bran and New Orleans Molasses. Statements made on his experience of about 10 years with Co.

Testified bakers are required to wear fresh white suites changed every other day. Said had never known of any of the products being sent out that were below the high standard of inspection. Asked if any one connected with the Postum Co. had instructed him how to testify. Said "No, sir."

Horace Brown testified has been with Co. 9 years. Worked in Grape-Nuts bake shop. Testified the whole of the flour is composed of Wheat and Barley. Attys. tried to confuse him, but he insisted that any casual visitor could see that nothing else went into the flour. Said machinery and floors always kept clean.

So these men were examined by the "Weekly" lawyers hoping to find at least one who would say that some under-grade grain was put in or some unclean condition was found somewhere.

But it was no use.

Each and every man testified to the purity and cleanliness.

As a sample, take the testimony of Luther W. Mayo. Testified been with Company about 10 years. Now working in the bakery department making Grape-Nuts. Testified that the ovens and floors are kept clean and the raw products as they go in are kept clean. Also that the wearing apparel of the employes has to be changed three times a week.

Q. Do you use Postum or Grape-Nuts yourself at all?

A. Yes, I use them at home.

Q. If from your knowledge of the factory which you have gained in your ten years at the factory you believe that they were dirty or impure in any way, would you use them?

A. I do not think I would. No.

Asked if any one on behalf of the Company had asked him to testify in any particular manner. Stated "No."

All these sworn depositions were carefully excluded from the testimony at the trial, for they wouldn't sound well for the "Weekly."

Think of the fact that every man swore to the purity and cleanliness so that the Atty. for the "Weekly" was forced to say in open court that the food was pure and good.

What a disappointment for the "Weekly!"

But the testimony showed:

All the grain used in Grape-Nuts, Postum and Post Toasties is the highest standard possible to obtain.

None of the workmen had been told how to testify.

Most of them have been from 10 to 15 years with the Co. and use the products on their tables at home.

Why do their families use the products, Grape-Nuts, Postum and Post Toasties, that they, themselves, make?

"IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN."

Is a Thought That Must Occur to Those Friendly to the House of Lords.

London, Dec. 20.—That democracy in the true sense means government not by the "will" of the people, but by reason and conscience of the people cannot be denied.

"It might have been" is a thought that must occur to many who are friendly to the House of Lords, and convinces that there should be some limit upon the House of Commons. The idea of taking the sober second thought of the people appeals to many sincere friends of democracy. For democracy in the true sense means government not by the "will" of the people, but by the reason and conscience of the people.

The House of Lords might have made itself the means of appealing to this sober second thought, and of combining all that is good in conservation. It has failed up to this point because it has been too partisan and too mechanical in its conception of its duty. The people would not have objected to delay and consideration, if they had felt confidence in the impartiality of the body which asked for delay. That the House of Lords has failed deplorably in this respect is a point that need not be enlarged. But in the second place it failed deplorably because it depended too much upon a mere mechanical check. If you want to obtain the deliberate judgment of the people, as distinguished from its will and impulse, it is not sufficient to make its will collide violently with the will of a legislative body. The first thing to be done is to take the question out of the region of will unto the region of reasonand conscience. The first care of the House of Lords should have been not to maintain its arbitrary powers, but to increase its influence as a means of educating the democracy.

Ex-President Eliot says that educational reform must proceed from the university downwards through the whole educational system. The House of Lords might have made itself the university of democracy. With its opportunities for leisure and deliberation, it might have become not merely a checking and revising body, but a place in which new political ideas could be threshed out, a hospitable home for such a political philosopher as Morley, and for broad thinkers and scholars, radical as well as conservative. Thoughtful, impartial, learned, unselfish, it would have easily gained the ear of the democracy; for democracy loves to learn. It would have acquired all the powers which its wisdom deserved.

But the House of Lords began at the wrong end. Instead of reforming itself, and waiting for influence to come as a result of reform, it began by a violent exercise of its power in the rejection of a budget, in circumstances which cast grave doubts on its own unselfishness and impartiality. It was defeated; it surrendered; and now it begins to talk of repentance and reform. It has lost a great opportunity, which it may not have presented again.

After a two months' trip to the Pacific coast, and various portions of the Northwest, Ald. and Mrs. Turner and Miss Margaret Turner reached home on Monday evening. They were much pleased with their Western tour.

EMPTY CRADLES

Father Vaughan Says Low Birth Rate is "Simply Appalling"

Father Vaughan, speaking in London, referred to the fall in the birth rate, more especially among the well to-do and leisured classes. The decreases from 37 and 38 to 24 and 25 per 1,000 was simply appalling in one generation. In the slums of the City and East-end life was teeming, while in the squares of the West-end it was declining. Its cradles were as empty as its churches. Married life was fast ceasing to be recognized as a divine institution—a contract binding man and wife till the hand of death did them part. They were preparing material in England for a history of "The Decline and Fall of the British Empire," and he much feared it would be a far sadder story than the Roman one told by Gibbon.—The Chronicle.

A VULTURE ESCAPED

While an attendant in the Glasgow Zoo was cleaning out one of the bird cages the other day a large bird of the vulture species escaped, and, falling a victim to the prevailing craze for aviation, winged its way out of the building. It got on to the house-tops of the district and flew in a westerly direction. A large crowd gathered and followed the escaped bird. The attendant offered two sovereigns to anyone who would recapture the fowl and many tried to lay hands on it. After being at liberty for a considerable time, and apparently having had quite enough of the view of Glasgow's roofs, the bird permitted itself to be caught.

TATTOOED BY LIGHTNING

Two men named Caspian and Smith were killed by lightning and another badly injured at Linton, England. The men, who were fishing, took shelter from the storm under a larch bush, where they were struck by a flash of lightning. Two were killed instantly, and the third was much burned, but was breathing, and was revived with the aid of artificial respiration. The men killed were marked on the bodies with the exact representation of the bush, and a boy with them had imprinted on his back a representation of a tree near by. He was uninjured except for shock.

FARMERS FOR ALBERTA

The Duke of Sutherland, who is at present in Canada, is said to have a scheme on hand for taking hundreds of farmers from the Highlands of Scotland to settle in Alberta.

WHO ARE THE RICH?

Rev. Charles Stezle has this capital definition of riches and poverty:

After all, poverty is an individual matter. It does not belong to any particular class. Some people tell us that ou rcountry is divided into two great classes—the wealthy class and the working class. There are really four kinds of people in the world to-day:

The rich poor—those who have no money, but who have many other things.

The poor rich—those who have money, but nothing else.

The rich rich—those who have money as well as the other things.

This last class as a rule, ought to be the happiest people but if I had to choose between being a "rich poor" man or a "poor rich" man, I would rather be a "rich poor" man—and anybody may be a rich poor man.

A CHILD'S ADVENTURE

A little six-year-old girl, residing with her parents in Dumbartonshire, had a strange adventure the other day. She made the acquaintance of an Edinburgh lady visitor, and after the visitor had left the girl determined to pay her a visit in Edinburgh. Without telling her parents she boarded an express train for Glasgow, and at Queen Street Station joined an Edinburgh train. Arrived at Edinburgh she proceeded along Princes Street inquiring her way to her friend's house, and ultimately reached her destination in the west end of the city. The lady, who was greatly astonished to see her, communicated with the police, who wired to her people in Dumbartonshire, with the result that the little wanderer was sent home.

WRITES WITHOUT GLASSES

The Windsor Record received a letter from Joseph N. Jordon, who, a few days ago, celebrated the anniversary of his 90th birthday. The letter was written without the aid of glasses, and with a quill pen. The letter would have done credit to and outclassed many of our business men's hand writing of half the age. Mr. Jordan has been a resident of Windsor for 72 years now and next month will celebrate the anniversary of 60 years of married life.

ONE TOO MANY

Discretion is a good thing, and Reilly, the tailor, had a heap of it.

One morning Mrs. Murphy, a customer, came into the shop and found him busy with pencil and paper. She asked him what he was doing.

"Oi'm makin' a list av the min in this block that Oi kin lick."

"Have yez got Murphy's name down?" asked she.

"Murphy heads me list."

Home flew Mrs. Murphy and broke the news to her man. He was in Reilly's shop in a jiffy.

"Me woman tells me that ye're afther makin' a memorial tablet uv the min that yez can lick, and that ye've got me at the head of it. Is that true?"

"Shure and it's true. What of it?" said Reilly.

"Ye good-for-nothin' little grasshopper, I could commit suicide on yez with me little finger. I could wipe up the flure wid yez wid me hands tied behind me."

"Are ye sure of that?" asked Reilly.

"I'm sure and more about it."

"All right, then," said Reilly, "if ye're sure of it I'll scratch ye off the list."

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

Man's Body Found Jammed in Barrel

GRUESOME MURDER MYSTERY DEVELOPS IN MONTREAL WITH TORONTO FEATURES.

Shipped From Jarvis, Ont.—Man Called at Toronto Sheds and Had It Re-Addressed to Defunct College.

Montreal, Que., Dec. 21.—This morning a barrel which was supposed to contain turkeys in Canada Cold Storage Company's public warehouse was opened. Instead of turkeys the barrel contained the body of a man.

The barrel was received by the Grand Trunk Company from a country point consigned to a local produce house, and it not having been called for, the railway sent it to the cold storage warehouse. This morning the period for which uncla med shipments must be kept expired, and the company sent to the warehouse to deliver the turkeys to a firm who sell the railway's unclaimed goods.

The driver opened the barrel to see in what condition the turkeys was, and was horrified to see the dead body of a human being inside.

The coroner was at once notified, and the body was brought to the morgue. The police have commenced an investigation.

An investigation into the finding of the body of an old man in a barrel here today has been under way since the discovery this morning. The barrel was shipped from Jarvis, Ont. and was first addressed to J. Bousfield, 91½ St. Lawrence Market, Toronto. While it was yet in the Toronto freight sheds a man called and had it re-addressed to the care of the janitor of Bishops College, Ontario street, Montreal. Bishops College has been out of existence for years.

When the barrel arrived here it was sent to the Canada Cold Storage premises as it was marked "turkeys." As no one called for it, it was decided to sell the goods and a merchant was asked to make an offer.

THE STOREMAN FAINTED.

When the storeman, James Singleton, opened the barrel, he fainted when he found what was in it. The grey beard of the old man was the first thing he saw.

When the body was taken out it was found to be trussed Rith stout cord to keep the legs doubled up beside the body.

300 MINERS WERE ENTOMBED IN THE PRETORIA COAL MINE

TERRIBLE DISASTER VISITS BOLTON, ENGLAND, A PLACE NOT FAR FROM MANCHESTER.

Flames Jump Up 20 Feet—20 Bodies Recovered—Eleven Persons Were Saved From Death.

Manchester, Eng., Dec. 21.—Three hundred miners were entombed by an explosion to-day in the Pretoria coal mine near Leigh.

It is feared that an enormous death roll will result. Rescuers went to work immediately following the explosion and saved seven miners near the entrance, when their work was temporarily stopped by the mass of debris that choked the shaft. It is believed that the workings of the mine were completely wrecked.

Hundreds of relatives and friends of the entombed men gathered at the mouth of the mine, and a detail of police was necessary to hold them in check.

The mine pit took fire shortly after the explosion, adding a deadly peril to the work of rescue.

Owing to the impassable condition of the shaft the rescuers entered the workings through an adjoining mine. Mine manager Tonge is leading the rescuing party. The cause of the explosion has not been determined.

FLAMES LEAP 80 FEET HIGH.

The fire gained rapidly until the mine became a roaring furnace. The flames spouted 80 feet above the mouth of the mine. Unless the entombed men were able to escape by another gallery from that in which the explosion occurred, it is doubtful if any have survived.

The ventilation of the mine has been seriously interferred with by the jamming of the cages in the shaft. The total number of men rescued so far is eleven. Twenty dead bodies have been taken out, and there is little hope of effecting any more rescues.

Most of the victims encountered by Manager Tonge's rescue party were dead. Those still alive were for the most part badly injured. None of those taken out could give any clue as to the cause of the explosion.

BODIES WERE DENUDED.

Hundreds of people gathered about the mouth of the mine, and the grief of the families of the entombed men led to many dramatic incidents. The wives and mothers of victims tried to enter the mine and were only restrained by an extra detail of police.

Many of the corpses recovered were unrecognizable from burns and dismemberment. The force of the explosion was sufficient to denude most of the victims.

Among the victims were a number of small boys, who were serving as helpers.

NEGRO TO HANG

Execution of Negro for Murder To-Morrow.

Moundsville, W. Va., Dec. 21.—Tomorrow is the day fixed for the execution in the State prison of Thomas Wayne, the negro murderer whose trial and conviction at Fayetteville last fall attracted considerable attention. Wayne's crime was the murder of Mrs. John Adiff at Quinnimont last August. The assailant after beating her husband into unconsciousness murdered the woman. After the negro was captured he was hurried from town to town to escape lynching. He was finally landed in the Charleston jail after a four days' trip across the mountains. Four companies of militia were called out at the time to preserve order.

A GRIM SEARCH FOR THE DEAD

Many Investigations Going On To Learn Cause of New York's Worst Explosion.

New York, Dec. 20.—While the grim search for dead went on today in the ruins of the New York Central power house, which was wrecked by an explosion yesterday, five separate investigations were under way to fix the blame for the worst explosion disaster that New York has ever suffered in a decade.

As yet there is only one man under arrest. He is a motorman Albert Seagroatt, the brakes of whose train are believed to have caused the spark that set off the leaking gas. He is held in $60,000 bail.

Colborne Greatly Excited Over Murder

Colborne, Dec. 21.—Josephine Bricombe, aged 43 years, was found dead, strangled in bed in room No. 14 in Teasdale's Hotel here on Sunday morning. She was a deaf mute, and cook in the hotel, and was found in a room not her own. High Constable Jarvis, of Bowmanville, is investigating, and Coroner E. D. Latta will conduct an inquest in this place on Thursday night.

When found, the woman's face was much discolored being almost black on one side, and the autopsy yesterday afternoon conducted by Dr. Hutchison, of Grafton, and Dr. Irwin, of Colborne, bore out suspicions that death was due to strangulation.

There is considerable excitement over the matter, and many rumors are in circulation. The woman had been working at the hotel about a year, having formerly been in the service of a Cobourg family.

The hotel proprietor and his wife are understood to have stated to those investigating that they retired early on Saturday night, and did not hear any unusual noises or commotion. On Sunday morning it was found that deceased was not in the room she usually occupied, and on search being instituted, she was found dead in bed in the other room.

Coroner Latta was summoned, and his examination showed that the woman had been dead probably twelve hours.

On Monday, High Constable Jarvis was notified, and, as stated, a thorough investigation is now proceeding.

ARRESTS ARE EXPECTED.

The inquest is expected to bring developments which will warrant the police in making an arrest of persons in no way connected with the hotel.

Shaw Gets Three Years For Shooting Girls

James Shaw, indicted on two charges of wounding with intent, pleaded guilty before Judge Morgan, in the General Sessions to-day and was sentenced to spend three years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

Shaw shot Georgina Cue and Rosie Jones, two waitresses in a King street restaurant, and both have been confined in the hospital since then.

ILLITERATES IN 1910

Over 40,000 Voted at the General Election Throughout the United Kingdom

Much interest attaches to a White Paper just issued, containing a return of the "number of persons who voted as 'illiterates' in each constituency of the United Kingdom at the General Election of 1910, and the total number of votes polled in each constituency."

The return, among other things, may be taken as a rough test of the spread of education in the constituencies.

In regard to Scotland there were 1,563 "illiterates" among the 276,721 voters in the counties, and 481 out of 243,731 voters for the burgh constituencies. Ireland's county total of "illiterates" was 20,918 out of 151,163 voters, and her borough total 1,507 out of 49,426 voters. No county in England and Wales and no county in Ireland is able to present a "clean sheet" in this matter. Three counties in Scotland, however, can claim this distinction. No single one of the 5,111 constituents of Mr. Cathcart Wason, in far Orkney, was unable to attest his vote by his signature, and the 3,676 men of Peebles who went to the polls showed that in their pursuit of pleasure they had not neglected that of education. West Aberdeen, Mr. J. M. Henderson's seat, was the third county. England's nearest approach to this record among the counties was in Mid-Derby, where only three voters out of 11,525 were "illiterates." Turning to the cities and boroughs, Mr. F. E. Smith may be congratulated on the fact that no one on the 12,591 voters of Walton was compelled to resort to a "mark" to indicate the nature of his political convictions, and that Colonel Seely was rejected by one of the most intelligent of constituencies is illustrated by the fact that there was not a single illiterate in all the 5,666 voters of the Abercromby division. Mr. Balfour's and Sir F. Banbury's constituents revealed no traces of illiteracy, and the men of East Marylebone also had a clean sheet. The 3,838 voters of King's Lynn were without illiterate taint. Dulwich, Gloucester, Grantham, Hampstead, Norwood, South Paddington, St. George's, the Strand, Warwick, and Windsor, in England, just missed a "clean sheet" by one. Among the Scottish burghs South Aberdeen was without illiterates, and North Aberdeen, Kirkaldy Burghs, and West Edinburgh had one illiterate apiece. In the counties, in addition to the three clean-sheet divisions already mentioned, East Aberdeen and Banffshire one illiterate voter each, and Forfar two illiterate voters. A table given shows that the 4,533 graduates who took part in the contest for the University of London still retained the ability to append their signatures to a document. At the other end of the scale Hitchin, among the county divisions of England, had 189 illiterates out of a poll of 9,688. In the case of the Welsh counties the highest total was 8%, out of 10,200 voters, in Brecon. Among the English and Welsh cities and boroughs Dudley had 375 illiterates out of a poll of 16,497. In the case of the Scottish counties, Inverness-shire polled 333 illiterates out of 7,373 voters; while 220 of the 14,638 voters of the Kilmarnock Burghs were classed as illiterates. ALASKA TREASURE STOLEN IN CANADA

San Francisco, Dec. 20.—More than $78,000, of this $18,232 in gold bullion and $60,000 in express bullion, has been stolen by Alaska treasure thieves and the Canadian Government and the United States Post Office Department are working today to solve the crime which was committed under mysterious circumstances.

The robbery of the $78,000 worth of bullion took place while the treasure was en route from Fairbanks, Alaska, to this city.

The authorities have been working upon the supposition that $60,000 was stolen from a United States mail bag on board the steamer Humboldt between Skagway and this city.

Four persons giving the names of E. L. Smith, Margaret Henry, T. J. and G. M. Woodson, are under arrest in San Francisco. The quartette had $12,500 worth of gold bullion and currency in their possession when arrested.

KAISER'S FAMILY

First Christmas That Whole Family Will Not be Together.

Berlin, Dec. 21.—For the first time the Emperor and Empress are to celebrate Christmas this year without all of their children taking part in the family gathering. The absence of the Crown Prince and Princess, who are travelling in the far east, will cause some curtailment in the festivities of the imperial family, though for the most part the old customs, including the setting up of the Christmas trees in the Shell Hall of the palace at Potsdami will be observed as usual. This week all of the members of the imperial family have been busy buying gifts for one another and for their many relatives at other European Courts. The Emperor has articles brought to him from which he makes his selections, but the other members of the family prefer to visit the shops the same as other folk.

Steamer Ran on Reef Off Shore of Canary Islands.

Las Palmas, Canary Islands, Dec. 20.—A steamer believed to belong to the Lamport & Holt Company, is a wreck upon a reef off the coast near here, and is being battered to pieces today. Efforts of other ships and tugs to drag her off were unavailing, although all on board were saved.

TREASON IN INDIA

Sentences on Eleven Bengalee Plotters at Calcutta

The special tribunal of the High Court at Calcutta has sentenced eleven Bengalees of the better class who were concerned in the Khulna conspiracy to terms of transportation varying from seven to three years. The charge on which they were tried was one of conspiracy to wage war on the King Emperor. In summing up for the prosecution, the Advocate-General of Bengal contended that the evidence proved the existence of a secret society, or combination of individuals, with the common purpose of overthrowing the British Government in India. Their operations were not confined to the city of Calcutta, but extended to the villages of Palkpara, Dulgram, Shotpur Agra, and other places in the districts of Khulna and Jessore. The transported men are all persons with some education, and superior in position to the masses of the people.

When these Bengalese were arrested a large quantity of seditious literature was found at their houses. Several documents dealt with the preparation of bombs, and contained hints about explosives which it was dangerous to manufacture. All the evidence pointed to their being engaged in an extensive conspiracy to overthrow British rule in India.

WRITES OF HABITANTS

What a Correspondent Says of French Canadians

R. E. Verquede, writing to The Daily Chronicle from Montreal, says in part:

The "Habitants" probably are the most prolific people in the world. Years ago the Government had to drop the free grants to families consisting of twelve or more children, for the simple, but amazing, reason that the grants were taken up by thousands and thousands. The withdrawal of the bounty has not, it seems, affected the increase of population, and the next census is likely to see the ratio maintained. No other people can compete with them if this continues—except by immigration; and a Scotch Canadian assured me recently that the "habitants" hate to see the emigrant ships arrive at Quebec, because it means peopling from outside of land that they of themselves could in due course people from within.

It is suggested also that a special thank-offering be taken up.

LOANS FOR THE POOR.

Mr. Monk's co-operative bill is intended to allow the incorporation of small credit societies for the financing of small undertakings. Mr. Osler protests that the bill will open the way for wild-catting, speculation and swindling. It is quite right to erect safeguards against these dangers, but nothing should be done to prevent poor men from getting together and helping each other with their savings.

Some time ago there was general denunciation of loan sharks. The loan shark exists because he meets a need that is met in no other way. A poor man is thrown out of employment, or he incurs heavy expenses through sickness, or he wants to buy a little business, or build himself a home. Take the last case. He has no security that would pass the inspector of a loan company; he is not a business man, and therefore cannot get accommodation at a bank. Why should he not be allowed to deal with an institution formed by men like himself, so that when he is in need he may borrow at a moderate rate of interest, and when he is a little ahead he may have an investment for his savings?

There is just as much danger of "wild-catting" in a big institution as in a little one. If the law can erect safeguards against this danger in the case of banks and other large institutions, it can safeguard the little fellows by similar means. But our laws ought not to be framed so as to discriminate against the poor.

PROHIBITION IN NEW ZEALAND.

The war against the liquor traffic is taking a new form in the Dominion of New Zealand, and it is expected that the result will be either national or local prohibition, in forms which will lead the way for other sections of the Empire. A licensing bill now before the New Zealand Parliament contains these interesting provisions:

National prohibition is to be submitted as an issue at licensing polls; local no-license and national prohibition are to be carried by 55 per cent. of the votes (this percentage, according to a later message, has been raised to 60 per cent.) national prohibition is to come into force four years after its adoption at a poll, and local prohibition one year after adoption; if national prohibition is carried the subsequent votes (every three years) will be on national restoration, the 55 (60) per cent. majority operating and licenses to be restored in three months; during national prohibition liquor is not to be imported, manufactured, or sold in New Zealand; breweries and "depots" within five miles of a no-license district are to be prohibited; there is no provision to prevent any increase in the existing number of licenses; the employment of barmaids is to be prohibited after June next, with certain exceptions; the age under which it is illegal to serve youths is to be extended to 21.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

In order not only to crown the girl's protest when her uncle turned her horse's head, but also to deceive opponents, Frank thundered forth an order that was familiar to their ears.

"The troop will advance! Draw swords! Walk—trot—charge!"

Chumru, though no fighting-man, realized that he was expected to make a row and uttered a blood-curdling yell. Inspired by their officer's example the two sowars dashed after him with splendid courage. They were on their startled pursuers so soon, the line having narrowed more quickly than they expected, that they hurtled right through the opposing force without a blow being struck or a shot fired. As it chanced, no better manœuvre could have been effected. When they wheeled and Frank managed to shoot two men at close range, it seemed to the amazed rebels that they were being attacked from the very quarter from which they had advanced.

Under such conditions even the steadiest of troops will break, and at least endeavor to reach a place where their adversaries are not shrouded in a dense mist. And that was exactly what occurred in this instance. Nearly all the mutineers swung round and galloped headlong for the landward boundary of the muddy field. Shouting to his two plucky assistants to come back, Frank called out to Chumru and bade him join them. He was hurrying towards the corner of the palace grounds when a shriek from Winifred set his teeth on edge.

"I am coming," he cried. "What happened? Where are you, Mayne?"

"Here, close to the boat. Look out there! Two sowars are carrying off my niece. For Heaven's sake, save her! I am wounded, but never mind me."

Malcolm had the hunter's lore, a species of Red Indian cunning in the stalker's art. Instead of rushing blindly forward, he halted his men promptly and listened. Sure enough, he heard stumbling footsteps by the water's edge. Leaping from Nejdi's back he sprang down the crumbling bank and came almost on top of Abdul Huq and his brother Pathan. Their progress was hindered by Winifred's frantic struggles and their own brutal efforts to stop her from screaming, and they were taken unaware by Frank's unexpected leap.

A thrust that went home caused a vacancy in a border clan, but, before the avenger could withdraw his weapon, Abdul Huq was swinging his tulwar. He was no novice in the art, and Malcolm must have gone down under the blow had not Winifred seen its murderous purpose and seized the man's arm. That gave her lover the second he needed. He recovered his sword, but was too near to stab or cut, so he met the case by dealing the swarthy one a blow with the hilt between the eyes that would have felled an ox. Never before had the Englishman hit any man with such vigorous good will. This rascal was owed a debt for the indignity he had offered the sahib in the village, and now he was paid in full.

He fell insensible, with part of his body resting in the water. It was a queer moment for noting a trivial thing, yet Frank saw that the man's turban did not fall off. He had lost his own turban during the melee on the Grand Trunk Road, and, as it would soon be daylight, he stooped to secure Abdul Huq's headgear. Oddly enough, it was fastened by a piece of cord under the Pathan's chin—an almost unheard of device this, to be adopted by a native. With a sharp pull Frank broke the cord and jammed the turban on his head. He was determined to have it, if only because no greater insult can be inflicted on a Mohammedan than to bare his head.

The incident did not demand more than a few seconds for its transaction, and Winifred hardly noticed it, so unstrung was she. Without more ado Malcolm took her in his arms and carried her up the bank. He told the troopers and his servant to follow with the horses as quietly as possible, and led the way towards the budgerow.

Arrived at the boat, they found Mayne standing in the water and leaning helplessly against the side of the craft. He had been struck down by one of the precious pair who thought to carry off Winifred, but, luckily, it was a glancing blow and not serious in its after effects.

With a rapidity that was almost magical the horses were put on board, the boat shoved off, and the huge mat sail hoisted to get the benefit of any breeze that might be found in mid stream. The current carried them away at a fair rate, and, as they passed the place where Abdul Huq had fallen in the river Malcolm fancied he heard a splash and a gurgle, as though a crocodile had found something of interest.

CHAPTER VI.

The Well

Not until many months later did Malcolm learn the true cause of Roshinara Begum's anxiety that he and his friends should hasten to Meerut, and let it be known on the way that they came from Cawnpore. Yet there were those in Bithoor that night who fully appreciated the tremendous influence on the course of political events that the direction of Winifred's flight might exercise. The girl herself little dreamed she was such an important personage. But that is often the case with those who are destined to make history. In this instance, the balking of a Brahmin prince's passions was destined to change the whole trend of affairs in northern India.

Nana Sahib escorted Mayne from Meerut to Cawnpore because the safeguarding of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh was a strong card to play in that parlous game of empire. As he travelled south reports reached him on every hand that nothing could now stop the spread of the Mutiny, and, with greater certainty in his plans came a project that he would not have dared to harbor even a week earlier.

Winifred, naturally a high-spirited and lively girl, soon recovered from the fright of that fateful Sunday evening. She had seen little of the tragedy enacted in Meerut; she knew less of its real horrors. Notwithstanding the intense heat the open-air life of the march was healthy, and, in many respects, agreeable. The Nana was a courteous and considerate host. He

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields,

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

QUEEN MARY

She Will Never Wear the Silly Extremes of Fashion.

The new Queen of England is deservedly popular, and from the moment of her debut as the Princess May of Teck she seemed to take hold as the popular imagination as being perhaps the most elegant girl in society, for, though far from blessed with a superfluity of wealth, she was—possibly owing to her Austrian parentage—chic and neat in her dress. She attires herself in a style of her own and never alters the dressing of her hair. She has thus become the arch-type of the neat, carefully-groomed, tailor-made Englishwoman, while her evening gowns are made in the Court fashion and never incline to the untidy and "artistic." Queen Mary will undoubtedly lead the fashion in English dress, just as King Edward set the modes for men, not only in England, but all over the world. The silly extremes of fashion will never be worn by the new Queen, who shows innate good taste in every respect of her life. Queen Mary, it is known in inner circles, has quiet, intellectual leanings, and is especially fond of pictures, reading, music, the drama, and the intellectual side of travel. Nothing pleased her better than to slip away abroad, incognita, with a single lady-in-waiting, and to explore some interesting town. When in Prague a year or two ago, she was running about that most picturesque of European capitals, quite alone, and unrecognised. The Princess of Wales had come to see the city where her ancestress, the daughter of James I., once reigned over Bohemia as Queen of Hearts.

THE FARMERS OF DENMARK.

Over 80 Per Cent. of Them Are Said to Own Their Farms.

The three things, according to Frederick Howe, in The Outlook, which made the country of Denmark unique, are peasant ownership, nearly universal co-operation, and the political supremacy of the peasant class. Denmark had "a farmer Parliament, a farmer Ministry, and a farmer point of view in its legislative enactments." Over 80 per cent. of the Danish farmers are said to own their own farms, the average size of which is thirty-nine acres. A farmer who has paid one-tenth or more of the purchase price of a farm can borrow from the State Treasury on mortgage, at four per cent., to pay the balance. The railways are State-owned, and conducted to pay wages and expenses. City wages are determined by the agricultural index.

Intensive cultivation and co-operative buying and selling have made the Dane the best farmer in the world. The farms, says Mr. Howe, are cultivated like market gardens, the chief products of which are butter, eggs, bacon, poultry and fine stock. There are now 1,067 co-operative dairies, comprising a membership of between 90 and 95 per cent. of the farmers. These export to England nearly a million dollars of butter per week. The egg-export society is another example of co-operation. It was organised in 1895, and has developed an export business of over six million dollars per year. The eggs are stamped, and expertly graded. Emphasis is put on quality, rather than on quantity, and hence the products command the highest market prices.

TEACHING HORSES TO STAND.

They Must Be Taught to Be Absolutely Still.

A team or a single horse that will stand perfectly still until asked to move forward, is about as sure a test of the kind of a horseman the driver is as can be found, says J. W. Sangster in The Canadian Farm. How often do we see some spirited horse stamping around, backing up, and then straining on the rein, while its driver is alternately jerking at the rein, and endeavoring to get the rug around his knees, or assisting some lady perhaps, to get comfortably seated? There is a time when this matter can be remedied. It is when the horse is receiving his first lessons. He should be taught to stand absolutely still at all times, until he receives the word of command to move on. Moderately still will not do. It must be emphasised in the horse's mind that he must not move. If this is once done, and it takes a good many lessons to do it, the matter is practically settled. The horse's one stock in trade is his memory, and he will afterward stand still, so that the driver can make all preparations in comfort.

POTATO MARKET IN CUBA.

Almost half our exports of potatoes for the fiscal year ending March 31st went to Cuba; shipments to that island amounting to $605,893 worth, representing an increase over the previous year of $103,834. The increase in volume was much larger, but prices were, on the whole, from a third to a half lower than in former years. American buyers, enjoying, as they do, a preferential tariff in that market, made every effort to capture it, quoting lower and still lower prices, till their potatoes were offered in Havana at $1.50 per barrel, c.i.f., and finally $1.40 per barrel. Still, with the new Cuban crop on the market, Canadian potatoes continued to arrive in undiminished quantities, and on June 24th were still holding the market, to the exclusion of potatoes from all other countries.

PARLIAMENT'S WINE CELLAR.

The balance-sheet of the Kitchen Committee of the British House of Commons for last year shows that the amounts received for the refreshments of members and their guests were: Provisions, $60,000; cigars, $5,500; wines, $36,000. The profit on provisions was about $7,500.

In addition to the usual subsidy of $10,000 from the Treasury, the kitchen received a supplementary grant of $3,500 and a grant for renewals of $3,000. The amount spent on replenishing the wine cellar was $26,000; and $4,005 was spent on cigars. Wages and salaries amounted to $29,000.

ASSAULT CASES AMUSE COURT

The Man Who Went Back After a Black Eye and Various Other Facial Adornments

It was less the fight in a grocer's shop than the quaint way in which the assistant told how his master belabored him which created uproarious merriment at the Guildhall, London.

Thomas Walter Capp, the assistant, was complainant, and his employer, Vm. Mortimer Phelan, defendant. A quarrel took place in the shop over monetary matters, and Capp said he called his employer "a liar." He said it emphatically and with an adjective. Thereupon Phelan told him, "If you say that again I will give you that."

"What was 'that'?" asked the clerk.

"Well, first a black eye," the shop assistant replied, amid laughter. "Then he gave me a blow behind the ear, and knocked me down. He asked me to get up, and knocked me down again. (Laughter.) Then he asked me to get up again, and once more knocked me down. (Laughter.) I went away then. (Laughter.) Some time afterwards I went back——"

"What for?" asked the solicitor.

"Only to show him what he had done," Capp answered, to the great amusement of the court. "Not to get any more," he explained. Thereupon there was a peal of laughter. But Phelan told him if he did not go away he really would give him some more.

Curious, by this time, to know the end of the incident, the magistrate asked, "What did he do?"

Complainant. Well, he gave me some more. (Much laughter.) This time he loosened some of my teeth. I couldn't open my eye for three days, and could eat nothing for four. (Laughter.)

Alderman Sir David Burnett, the magistrate: I must say that if anybody called me the name complainant admits using to defendant, I——"

Mr. Peet, complainant's solicitor: Would strike?

The Magistrate: Yes, I think I should.

Mr Peet: "Then it's no use going any further.

The Magistrate: But I should legally be in the wrong. No words would justify an assault.

Mr. Peet: I will go on with the case, then.

The defendant contended that all he did was to turn Capp out of the shop.

Another witness said that complainant, after the first bout, returned to the scene, remarking, "I've had one eye closed up and I want the other done, too. I don't know whether that'll come off this time." (Laughter.)

Sir David Burnett dismissed the summons.

THE BABY ESKIMO

Always Healthy—His Mother Licks Him in Lieu of Washing

What do we know of the childhood of the Eskimo in his natural state? He is certainly not born with the proverbial silver spoon in his mouth. Silver and gold are practically unknown quantities in Eskimo land. Riches—as civilisation understands riches—have no attraction for the little man. The height of his ambition probably is to have plenty of seal meat to eat and sufficient seal skins to make his clothes. His Eskimo superstition says it makes babies cross to wash them, so the youngster has to get accustomed to dirt and make the best of it. I once came across an Eskimo child several weeks old that had never been washed; the only cleansing it had ever undergone was the occasional lick from its mother's tongue, and I have reason to believe that was by no means an isolated case. In this instance I succeeded by stealth in getting the baby washed. Wishing to employ the mother for a short time, I persuaded her to give her baby into the care of a Christian Eskimo woman, and, having accomplished that, the remainder was an easy matter.

The wife hunted up some baby's clothing, and she and the Christian Eskimo together undertook the task of spring-cleaning the poor little bairn. When the mother returned she was delighted to see her child looking so nice, and, far from being offended, she was profuse with her thanks. I never heard that the baby was cross or that it cried more after that much-needed tubbing.

Some one will possibly exclaim: "But how can a baby possibly thrive in so much dirt and filth?" Yet they do thrive, and it is surprising what chubby, fat-faced babies one sees among the heathen Eskimo, in spite of the dirt. The baby's clothing is often very scanty; in fact, one occasionally sees a baby being carried in its mother's hood with only a cotton shirt on, despite the fact that the thermometer registers 20 degrees below zero. The mother's hood is the baby's cradle. Being made of seal or deer skin, it is warm and wind-proof; the infant also has the benefit of the heat of the mother's body, and is out of harm's way. If it were laid in a basket cradle in the tent it would be very much in the way, and would always be in danger of falling a prey to the wolfish Eskimo dogs that prowl around the door by day and night, ever ready to pick up a dainty morsel.—Wide World Magazine.

Canada Atlantic net profits decreased £1,550, Grand Trunk Western net profits decreased £6,650, and Detroit, Grand Haven net profits increased £1,500. The total net profits for the whole system showed a decrease of £11,300.

MELVILLE

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

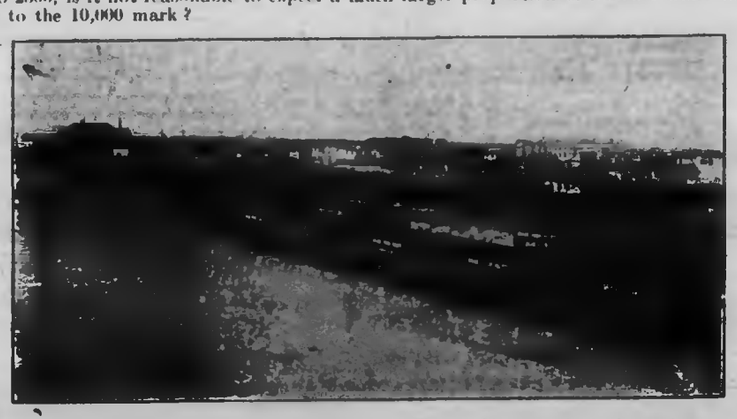
Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville ?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many fold in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark ?



Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of transportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constrdcted from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

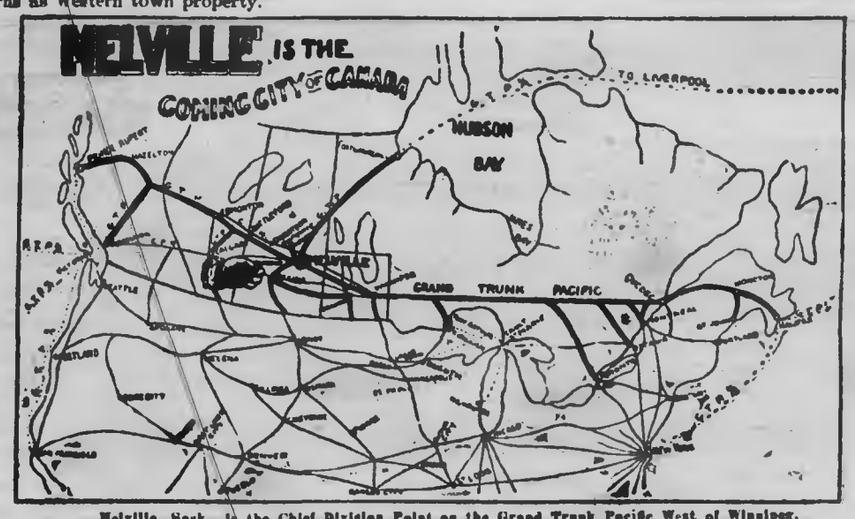
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by wsrehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enjoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West of Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more promising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

HANGED FOR CURIOSITY

His Head Swelled and the Hole Got Smaller

Once, when working on the Midland Railway, I had to go from Birmingham to Wolverhampton, says a correspondent. I was in a compartment alone, when I soon discovered that my mate had failed to put the lamp in at the top. Thinking he had just put it outside the aperture and forgotten it, I placed my box end-up on the seat, and, standing on it, squeezed my head through the hole to seek the lamp. Immediately my eyes were filled with smuts from the engine, and I tried to get my head back. Alas! my head seemed to have swollen, and the hole to have shrunk! In making desperate efforts to liberate myself, I succeeded in kicking my box over, and there I was, hanging from the roof, with my feet a good yard from the floor.

I kicked, yelled, groaned, and screamed for what seemed hours, and at last succeeded in attracting the attention of passengers in the next compartment, when the train was stopped and I was extricated, just as I thought all was up.

Although I nearly met my death from hanging, the company reprimanded me, and suspended me from work for a week.

JUGGLING WITH HER LIFE

A Woman's Desperate Method of Frightening Husband

Desperate measures were taken by Kate Hall, Halifax, England, to frighten her husband. Seeing a candle burning in a cellar window, P. C. Stevenson stopped on his beat shortly after midnight, and peered down into the basement. In the dim light he could see a woman in the cellar with a cord round her neck, suspended from a washing machine. She was shouting, "John," and her husband later appeared at the bottom of the cellar steps, and with a knife cut her down. The constable knocked at the door, and asked what the woman had been trying to do. She told him that her husband had threatened to leave her and that she had pretended to hang herself to frighten him. At the police court, Mrs. Wade was charged with attempting to commit suicide, and she was discharged on promising not to be so foolish again.

STRUCK A LION

Fulton Entered a Cage Where There Were Five Cubs

Some little excitement was created among visitors to Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie, located in Alton Public Park, by a local publican, named William Fulton, entering alone a cage containing five large-sized lion cubs. One of the animals came forward and Fulton smacked it on the nose with his hand, and it retreated. He remained inside about five minutes and was loudly cheered when he stepped from the cage.

WROUGHT BY A HAMMER-HEAD

A few years ago when I was turning in some works in Sheffield, says H. Batchelor, I happened to be centering a bar of steel to put into my lathe, when my hammer head broke across the eye where the shaft fits through. One half remained on the shaft, and the other went flying into the air, suddenly there was an awful trembling and bumping higher up the shop, and a great face plate cracked, and let a large ingot, weighing about thirty tons, fall out. My hammer head had fallen into the gearing, broken all the teeth in the cogs, and split the face plate. I expected I should be discharged, but they said it was marvellous that no one was killed.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

The woman in charge of the Pickleham post-office was strongly suspected of tampering with the packages and parcels entrusted to her care.

One day a rosy-cheeked youngster entered the post-office and carefully laid upon the counter a huge slice of rich iced cake.

"With my sister, the bride's, compliments," he said; "and will yer please to eat as much as yer possibly can?"

The post-mistress smiled delightedly.

"How very kind of the bride to remember me!" she cried. "Did she know I have a special weakness for wedding-cake?"

"She did that!" coldly replied the youngster. "And she thought she'd send yer a bit of it this afternoon, jest to take the edge off yer appetite before she posted any boxes to her friends!"

OFFENSIVE TO THE LANDSCAPE

In a certain Midland town there is a man who is so ugly that it has been said of him that his face is an "offence to the landscape."

One Bank Holiday he was seated on a rustic bridge some distance outside the town, when a tourist came by, and, after gazing at the "offence" a moment, he said:

"Eh, but th'art ugly!"

"Well," replied the other, in an aggrieved tone, "I can't help it, can I?"

The tourist pondered a moment, and then said:

"Tha might stay at whoam!"

MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE

Edward, I'm ashamed of you. Bottom of a class of twenty-three younger boys? Disgraceful!"

"But, mother, it might have been worse."

"Worse! How could it have been worse?"

"There might have been more boys in the class."

RATS STEAL FALSE TEETH

A young woman of Burnley left her false teeth in a glass of water for the night, and the following morning they were missing. A haunt of rats under the kitchen slopstone was searched, and there, sure enough, were the missing molars intact. They were lying among some scraps which had been collected by the rats.

BACON SHORTAGE

The bacon shortage, of which the first signs appeared at the beginning of 1909, has now reached such a pitch that one of the best authorities states that "the home industry is in danger of being destroyed," says the London Daily Mail.

The "pig population" of the world for some reason, has suddenly decreased. The shortage began in the United States, which has contained, it is calculated, about half the hogs in the world. They now number over 54,000,000, as compared with 4,000,000 in the United Kingdom. The chief cause of the shortage is the decrease of the export from the United States where the "pig population" has decreased by more than a million; and the export is further decreasing owing to increased consumption in the States.

The price of bacon, it is argued by some of the best of authorities, may rise as high as $18 a cwt wholesale. A few years ago it was $12. It rose at the end of last year to $16 for the best Danish, which fetched the highest price, higher even than Irish. This expensiveness of bacon has very greatly reduced the consumption, but there is an unlimited market for moderately cheap bacon, and Mr. Loudon Douglas, who is one of the leading authorities on the industry, considers that there never was a better opportunity for the English farmer.

We spend, roughly, $100,000,000 each year for pig products from abroad, and yet in Great Britain the pigs decreased in 1909 by nearly 15 per cent. as compared with 1908, and reached the very small number of 2,...80,000.

There is great activity in several foreign countries to fill the English market. The Chinese, among others, are making arrangements to send here cured hams and bacon. But the home market is being more and more neglected by English farmers and what was the standard food of the poorer class is now at an almost prohibitive price and threatens to rise further.

FIVE GENERATIONS

With a family of five generations alive and well Mrs. Potter, of the village of Thundersley in Essex, England, is a proud old lady. She is in her ninety-eighth year, and still hale and hearty but the most remarkable thing about her is that for thirty years she was totally blind, and at the end of that time her sight was restored. That was about thirteen months ago and now she is able to see as well as ever. Her blindness followed on a severe attack of influenza and bronchitis. When asked how she recovered her sight, or by what treatment she benefited, she will say that no doctor and no treatment cured her, it was done simply by prayer. She remembered the New Testament stories of the power of faith, so she tried the same method, and found it successful.

Next in the family line comes Mrs. Wheel, her daughter, who is seventy four years of age, a sturdy, splendid looking woman, who seems effectually to have defied the ravages of time for she is capable of a hard day's work still, and indeed looks as if she could do as much as a man. She has had fourteen children, of whom six are still living.

Her eldest daughter is Mrs. Finch who is fifty-four years of age, and the youngest mother in the line is Mrs Goaling, aged thirty four, and the youngest representative of the family shown in the photograph, is her son aged eleven years.

The elder members of this remarkable family live in and near the village of Thundersley, in Essex, in the direction of Southend, which must be one of the most remarkably healthy spots in England. Mrs. Wheel's husband is still living there. He has lived in the same house for eighty-seven years!

Passing through the village one can not help being struck with the number of old people, and, further, with their remarkably healthy and hearty appearance. Thundersley is evidently the place where old age pensioners thrive. Mr. and Mrs. Wheel and her sister are all in receipt of old age pensions.

BOUND BABY'S ARMS

Court Orders Imprisonment for an Inhuman Father

One month's hard labor was the sentence passed at Bolton, England, on John Anthony Johnson, a young laborer, of Henson Street, for cruelty towards his child. Mrs. Johnson said that before the child was born her husband ill-treated her.

"On one occasion did the baby in bed put its hand on its father's face?" asked the prosecuting solicitor.

"Yes, sir," replied Mrs. Johnson.

"And what did he do?"

"He got some string and tied its arms down to its body so that it could not move them."

"Liar!" exclaimed Johnson.

"Did you undo the string from the child's arms?"

"Yes."

"And what did he do then?"

"He thrashed me."

It was stated that the child only weighed six pounds, while the average weight of one of its age was eleven pounds, eight ounces. Mrs. Johnson was granted a separation order, carrying six shillings per week.

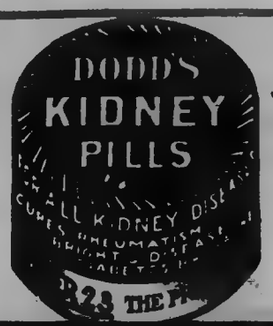
A LUCKY FISHERMAN

Whilst trolling in the bay at St. John's, N.B., C. I. White hooked and landed a maskinonge, which when weighed, tipped the scales at 25½ pounds. It was a fine specimen of this gamey fish.

TWO MEANINGS

"Did your father leave your mother much?" asked the man with intentions of the little boy in black.

"Twice a week," was the unexpected answer.



DEPOPULATING IRELAND

The Number of Those Leaving Erin Still Exceeding the Births

The report of the Registrar-General on the population of Ireland in 1909 shows that during the year a decrease took place in the country of 880 persons. There was a natural increase of population of 27,786, but 28,676 persons emigrated during the period.

Births numbered 102,759, deaths 74,973, and marriages 22,650. Of the last, 16,057 were between Roman Catholics.

The marriages of bachelors with spinsters constituted 89.5 per cent. of the total, those of widowers and spinsters were 6.6 per cent., marriages of bachelors and widows were 2.4 per cent., and those of widowers and widows formed 1.5 per cent of the total marriages. Thus of the men married 8.1 per cent. were widowers, and of the women 3.9 per cent. were widows, so that in twelve instances in over 100 marriages one or both of the contracting parties had been in the married state before. Of the 22,650 men who married, the number under age was 397, or 1.67 per cent., and of the women 1,550 or 6.84 per cent. Of the 102,759 births, 52,726 were boys and 50,033 girls. Fourteen hundred and four of the former were illegitimate, and 1,358 of the latter. There were in 1909 1,201 twin births, and [illegible] triplets.

RITES OF VOODOOISM

Human Sacrifices to a Snake-God Now Common in Haiti

A secret religious sect, worshipping a god known as Vaudoo, the Snake God and whose cult is spreading in Hayti, is again causing grave anxiety in Haiti. The matter has been brought to the notice of the German authorities by the inspector of police, who had made a thorough investigation.

The following summary of the report is published in the Cologne Gazette, and from this it would appear that a woman, who is now in prison in the capital awaiting trial was directly responsible for the killing and eating of five children.

In her house I found a barrel containing pickled human flesh, the remains of a child aged about twelve. It is, unfortunately, well known that the Voodoo cult was still many adherents.

The priests of the cult are all powerful, and the sacrifices are usually animals but occasionally, as in the present instance, young children are immolated. The god himself takes the form of a snake, and his mouthpiece is a priest, who is assisted by a priestess.

Esteis Liberis, the young woman concerned in the present affair, was at the time high priestess of the cult. At the great ceremony in honor of the snake-god the high priest and priestess sit on a double throne, the woman being clothed in nothing but a gorgeous girdle. Worshippers of both sexes attend with red cloths round their loins. On an altar stands a wooden box containing the snake, which is brought from its box and worshipped by all present, gifts being placed on the altar while the populace prays for the fulfilment of some great public desire.

Then begins a wild dance, headed by the chief priestess, who discards her girdle as the dancing grows more frenzious, and a halt is not called until the people begin to fall exhausted to the ground. If any misfortune has befallen the people a sacrifice is offered to the god.

It was on one of these occasions that Esteis Liberis insisted on the sacrifice of a human victim, and, in concert with a man named Conso Pelle, decided to kidnap a girl, a niece of Conso. The child's mother was enticed away, and on her return was informed that the chief priestess had called on her daughter. The mother seemed greatly honored, and a special ceremony was immediately arranged.

When all were assembled, the girl was fetched from her hiding-place, laid in front of the altar, and strangled by her uncle. Her head was cut off, and all those present drank some of the blood, which was collected in a bowl. The flesh was subsequently cooked at Conso's house, and instead of being eaten, as had formerly been customary, was preserved.

Two girls who had overlooked the cooking of the flesh were declared to have offended the god, and these, too, were then similarly sacrificed, their deaths being followed by two more a few days later.

DADDY'S CALLING

Daddy is calling, calling his sonny:
But, though I love him, I'm not, as you see,
Anxious to answer: I know it sounds funny,
'Cause I know Daddy has something for me.

Yes, it is naughty to seem so unwilling;
Boys ought to answer their Daddies with glee,
But I'd much rather that someone was filling
Daddy's kind thoughts at this moment but me.

Why don't I go, when he softly calls "Freddy!"
Waiting to take me, I know, on his knee?
Well, it's just this—with his slipper all ready,
Daddy is anxiously waiting for me!

CLOVER IS KING

Napoleon Carron brought to the Chatham market a load of clover seed which weighed up to 5,230 lbs., making 88 and a fraction bushels. He was paid $7 a bushel for the seed, and the cheque which he received for the whole load was made out for $620.06.

NO REFLECTION

"Every time the baby looks into my face he smiles," said Mr. Meekins.

"Well," answered his wife, "it may not be exactly polite, but it shows he has a sense of humor."

Skating Rink Wrecked While Skaters Had a Close Call.

Owen Sound, Dec. 16.—What might easily have proved a serious catastrophe happened at Park Head, a village ten miles from here, when the entire roof of the rink collapsed. Quite a number of the hockey boys had gone on the ice when the rafters at the west end began to break. Immediately there was a rush for the door which was jammed with people endeavoring to make their escape Strange to say there was only one injured. The building was owned by George Cooke, of the Cottage Hotel, and is a total wreck.

SUITABLE XMAS GIFTS.

Surely Your Wife, Sister, Sweetheart or Friend is Worth While.

Messrs. Frank Clarke & Son, the George street jewellers, located at the corner of Brock street, with their usual enterprise have imported a large consignament of goods specially fit for the Christmas trade.

Mr Frank Clarke, the senior partner of this firm is too well known to our citizens to require any superfluous introduction. Mr. Clarke with his banjo and accompanying voice has delighted thousands of our citizens, doing the good work for "sweet charity's" sake. Whilst Mr. Clarke has always been anxious to assist churches and charities by his banjo performances, he has another side: the business side.

For the Christmas trade Messrs. Clarke & Son, oldest jewelry firm in Peterboro, have imported a special line of goods that simply MUST appeal to all those who want to please their friends at this joyous season of the year. Now Messrs. Clarke & Son, will have something else to tell you about when the Christmas and New Year's season is over. Still, as expensive goods require a day to think over before buying, we will take up that matter of precious stones. Now some jewellers new to the trade, buy diamonds, emeralds, saphires, rubies, pearls, etc., like they would grind-stones, viz.: and only by weight. Here is where the jewellers may make or may lose, but the customer must certainly lose in most cases. However, Mr. Frank Clarke, with 30 years experience in precious stones, knows how, when and where to buy. This Christmas he has purchased the finest lot of diamonds, saphires, pearls, peridots, rubies, aqua-marines, emeralds, etc., that ever came to Peterborough. These stones are set in Tiffany, or other up-to-date settings, or can be set to suit purchasers. Don't forget this immense stock of precious stones. Also, don't forget that the brass and copper high grade goods recently imported from Russia by the firm is one of the finest ever brought to Canada. The man, woman or child wanting anything in ornamental or useful jewelry goods should hurry to Clarke's before Christmas Day and get a large selection and small price.

Wilson—Byers.

At the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Byers, yesterday afternoon, their eldest daughter, Miss Jennie D. Byers was united in marriage to Mr. Melvill L. Wilson, of London, Ont. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. M. J. Keith, M.A., B.A., pastor of Knox Church, in the presence of a large circle of friends and relatives. The bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding March, from Loheng, which was played by Miss Isabel Gilchrist, of Toronto. The bride, who was becomingly attired in a beautiful gown of ivory satin, with Irish lace and pearls, also carrying a boquet of bridal roses, was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Byers, who was attractively attired in pink silk mull and carried a beautiful bouquet of pink roses. The groom was assisted by Mr. W. E. Reid, of Detroit.

The groom's present to the bridesmaid, was a beautiful gold brooch, and to the groomsman, a gold tie pin. The house was very attractively and appropriately decorated for the occasion. After the ceremony, the guests partook of a dainty luncheon and the happy young couple received the congratulations of those assembled. The bride received many costly and beautiful presents of cut glass, silverware and china, as well as other useful articles.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left on the 4.38 C.P.R. train for Toronto and points west. The bride's travelling costume was a suit of navy blue, and a white beaver hat. They carry with them the heartiest congratulations and best withes of a large circle of friends. The young couple will reside in London, Ont.

It is proposed the steamship will leave St. John, N.B., January 14, 1911, for a six weeks cruise, returning on or about February 24, which will permit a visit to Cuba and Havana, the various ports in Jamaica, Trinidad, Georgetown, Demerara, St. Kitts, St. Louis, St. Vincint, Antigua, Grenada, Barbadoes, Martinique, Port Rico, San Domingo, and Bermuda, returning to St. John. This ship will be especially equipped with electric fans, orchestra for dancing, etc., a fine motor launch for special shore trips, a darkroom for the convenience of photographers, deck awnings, hammocks for those who desire to sleep on deck etc. The well-known high-class service of the Canadian Pacific Empress steamships will be provided. It is the desire to give Canadians an opportunity for the expansion of commerce between these various countries, and nothing will be left undone to assure the maximum of comfort for the minimum of expense. The number will be limited to 150 passengers, and the fare for the round trip will be from $200 to $300 according to accommodation. This trip has received the endorsement of the Department of Trade and Commerce of Canada.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

VOL. XXXIII NO. 291 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, FRIDAY DECEMBER 23, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

TWO EDWARDS, A COMPARISON

The Prince of Wales Compared to His Grandfather, the Late King Edward, When the Latter Was a Prince

In appearance the Prince of Wales bears a distinct likeness to the late King when his Majesty was his age, though his Royal Highness is rather taller and of slighter build than was King Edward when a boy and the Prince's features are sharper; but the heir to the Throne has unquestionably inherited his grandfather's expressive eyes. This fact is especially noticeable when the Prince is amused, then his eyes become laughter-lit and the blue deepens and his whole expression very much recalls that of the Prince of Wales of fifty-three years ago, says a writer in M. A. P.

The upbringing and education of the future monarch is being conducted on different lines from those followed in the early training of the late King. King Edward, I believe, was always of the opinion that he himself was brought up over strictly.

Severe Discipline

Between the ages of ten and eighteen his late Majesty was allowed little personal liberty, and had to strictly conform to a severe code of discipline, under which Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort thought it wise to place him, but which the young Prince found irritating, and which certainly seemed to him sometimes unnecessarily severe.

The present heir to the Throne has been, and is being, allowed to exercise his own judgment in many matters which the late King had decided for him by his tutors or parents.

For example, when the late King was a boy, all his intimate friends were chosen for him, and the companionship of one or two were not specially welcome to the young Prince.

But the friends of the present Prince of Wales are entirely of his own choosing. Nothing has been done to force the companionship of anyone on him whom he did not personally desire to have as an intimate friend, yet in Lord Wendover and Mr. Edward Knollys, the Prince has two friends whom their Majesties would certainly have selected themselves to be his associates.

A Studious Prince

The heir to the Throne, however is of a more reserved disposition than was his grandfather as a boy. The late King certainly desired to have a larger circle of friends than does the present Prince of Wales, and, no doubt, this made the choice of associates for the then eldest son of the Sovereign rather a difficult matter.

The present Prince of Wales is, undoubtedly, more studious than was his grandsire when a boy; but, I believe, that is because his Royal Highness has never been forced to study as was the late King, upon whom great pressure was put by his tutors in his early days.

As a matter of fact, though the Prince of Wales could read and write at five years old, no pressure at all was put on him to acquire any knowledge from books until he was six years old, and even then his studies were never made unduly severe.

It may be noticed that the Prince was confirmed a year earlier than was King Edward, but his Royal Highness has not, perhaps, attended so many functions, or been as much before the public as King Edward had when his late Majesty reached his sixteenth birthday.

The love of his home is, indeed, playing a very important part in the formation of the character of the heir to the British Throne and his great affection for his only sister has been a potent influence for good in his young life. Fond as King Edward was of his sisters, he never, as a boy, made a companion of any of the Princesses as the Prince of Wales has of the Princess Mary, who has joined him in countless sporting expeditions with gun and rod; and these home influences in the Prince's life have tended to strengthen, not to weaken, his manliness of character.

NOT A HENRY VIII.

A Good Story in Which Bonar Law Figured

As his name indicates, Mr. Andrew Bonar Law, M.P., who has completed his fifty-second year, is a Scot. However, he can also claim to be a Canadian, for he first saw the light in the Dominion, his father being the Rev. James Law, M.A., of New Brunswick. Mr. Bonar Law first entered Parliament in 1900. At a demonstration in Glasgow he referred to Mr. Balfour's attitude on the fiscal question. He pointed out that "the English people love a compromise," and instanced the course taken by Henry VIII. at the time of the Reformation, whereupon the following question was handed up to be answered: "Is the candidate aware that Mr. Balfour is a bachelor, and that Henry VIII. was much the reverse?" "Yes," replied the candidate, "but possibly Mr. Balfour might not be a bachelor if he could be sure of getting rid of his wives as easily as Henry VIII."

The Season of Giving and Rejoicing

Though Christmas comes each year, it means too much ever to be stale. In religion it celebrates the best part of Christian faith, a new joy that came into the world. As a holiday, it is the season of expansion, generosity, leading others' lives. Cold reason would say that the best time for making gifts was when necessity called, opportunity invited, or impulse urged, but Christmas throws reason to the winds and opens the arms of faith and profusion once each year. The shops are loaded with grotesque and useless toys, useless, save to give little human beings joy. Many a poor soul pinches for the sake of donating some guerdon of its love, and is, perhaps, the better for the sacrifice. "Wear this for me," no words mean more, and of all gifts, as the American genius said, the best is a portion of thyself. "Therefore, the poet brings his poem; the shepherd, his lamb; the farmer, corn; the miner, a gem; the sailor, coral and shells; the painter, his picture, the girl, a handkerchief of her own painting." Alas for us, who can give only what we buy, and yet even that carries our emotion, for it is chosen lovingly. Certainly the principle of the widow's mite holds true in Christmas giving as in charity, for all depends upon what it means to the giver. Who has not been moved by receiving the tribute of a child, a bit of paper, tooth, or curl, comic or pathetic, in a way that he could be touched by no carelessly choosing Croesus? So no wagon load of city roses can carry the perfume of the heart as it is borne by the blossoms which the giver's hand has culled or his slender purse has shrunk to buy. Christmas, the season of giving and rejoicing, helps us all to part of the spirit after which the day is named; the child with his joy, the rest of us with charity and the love of man. How few are a hundred Christmases in one life!

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

Glory to the new born King.
Peace on earth and mercy mild.
God and sinners reconciled.
Joyful, all ye nations rise,
Join the triumph of the skies;
With the Angelic host proclaim,
Christ is born in Bethlehem.
Hark! the herald angels sing,
Glory to the new born King.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL OF CROMWELL'S TIME.

Christmas Eve in Eldore village,
Two long centuries ago,
Found the streets deserted, empty,
Covered with untrodden snow.
Silence with the darkness deepened;
Not a sound, no light aglow;
Shutters barred hid frightened faces
Full of dread and woe.

Christmas Eve, but what a Christmas!
Fear for gladness, care for joy,
For the Puritans were coming
Christmas customs to destroy.
"Christmas is a heathen fast day,
All who keep it are defiled;"
So the Roundheads spoke; all trembled—
All save one, a child.

By some strange mischance a choir boy,
Sweetest singer of them all,
Had not heard the evil tidings,
Listened for the well known call;
Entered in the old cathedral,
Wondering none were with him there;
Thought to practice while he waited,
Christmas carols fair.

Now along the whitened roadway
Came the steady tramp of feet—
Stern, determined, gray garbed soldiers,
Marching to a muffled beat.
Soon the light from the cathedral
Streamed out full across their path,
And the regiment, long silent,
Stirred to sudden wrath.

"Slay these idol loving heathens!"
Called the leader and the rest
Rushed toward the village houses,
Quick to follow his behest.
Hark! Above the growing tumult
Rose a child's voice, high and clear;
At the abbey door the captain
Paused, and stopped to hear.

Turning then, he gave a signal,
Each grim Puritan stood still,
While a boyish voice sang sweetly,
"Hallelujah! Peace! Good will!
To God be glory in the highest
Peace on earth, good will to men;
Unto us is born a Saviour—
Christ, the Lord! Amen."

When at last the anthem ended,
Strange the scene the stars looked o'er.
Lo, each man, with bared head, kneeling
Where in arms he stood before.
Rising then and shouldering matchlocks,
Silent from the town they filed;
No man saw them thence departing,
But the angels smiled.

Tired of waiting now, the choir boy
Passes out the abbey gate—
Wends alone his slow way homeward,
Wondering why "they were so late;"
Wondering if "to-night the Christ child
Really would come down below," Wondering why there were so many Footprints in the snow!

ROYAL LOVERS IN BRITAIN

The Ten Years' Romance of Princess Clementine of Brussels—Defied the King

No Royal love romance has ever aroused such deep admiration and at the same time sympathy as that of Princess Clementine and Prince Victor Napoleon. It is now ten years since the couple met while driving in the Bois de la Cambre, near Brussels. According to all accounts it was a case of love at first sight.

Princess Victor, however, as heir to the Bonaparte dynasty and Pretender to the French throne, was politically undesirable. Certainly he is the last to take the Pretender business very seriously. For years he has been an exile in Brussels living comfortably enough on his moderate income of £2,000 a year. He was, moreover, thirty-eight when he first met the Princess, his junior by ten years. The Princess, unhappy in her home life, and on bad terms with both her parents, desired earnestly to be married to a man who has considerable strength of character and a simple heart.

But the old King Leopold, domineering in all his home life, refused his consent to the betrothal. He favored the Orleans family. He hated the Bonapartes, and it did not suit his policy with the French Republic to have his daughter married to one of the Royalist Pretenders.

The Countess of Flanders interceded for them, but Leopold refused to reconsider his decision. The aged Empress Eugenie, with whom Prince Victor has always been a favorite, traveled to Brussels and pleaded for the lovers, but with no more effect.

In order that there should be no chance of the couple meeting Leopold locked Clementine in her apartments in the Royal palace and informed her that she would have to remain under lock and key until she promised to forget the Prince. It was not until the medical men informed the King that this treatment was seriously affecting the Princess's health that he relented and sent her to the Riviera.

The Princess, living apart from her parents, and Prince Victor, an exile from France, met each other in private houses of friends and in the drawing rooms of the Countess of Flanders and the present King. But they never appeared together publicly, and both were absentees at court.

A celebrated incident which caused some sensation a year or two ago, took place at a paper-chase on horseback, which was won by Prince Victor. Princess Clementine had been appointed to give away the prize, and when the victor came for his reward and she pinned the ribbon upon his breast she burst into tears, so that all present were profoundly touched.

Upon the death of Leopold the two lovers again appeared at Court, and shortly afterwards it was announced that young King Albert had given his cordial consent to their union.

"OWD LUKE" RETIRES

Veteran Newsagent's 30,000 Miles' Journey in Selling a Paper

"Owd Luke," of Barrow Hill, near Chesterfield, one of the oldest Sunday newsagents in the United Kingdom, has retired, at the age of eighty-six, from a business established nearly thirty years ago.

Mr. Luke Bennison, to give the old man his proper name, was born at Leicester, and in his early days followed the occupation of a boatman. The "pay" being hardly sufficient to buy food, or "snap," as he terms it, he "emigrated" to Derbyshire, finally settling down at Barrow Hill, nearly sixty years ago, to become a miner.

Whilst employed at this work, he witnessed many changes in labor conditions underground. From fourteen hours a day, when he first commenced, the working time had fallen to nine hours by the time he was compelled to leave his employment, through having reached the age limit.

"A great contrast, wasn't it?" he said, and drily added, "What would the present generation of miners with their Eight Hours Act, think if they had to go back to the old system of sixty years ago? They wouldna like it, I know.

"And the poor pit lads! How they fared in those days was horrible cruel, words can't express my feelings."

Referring to his career as a news agent, "Owd Luke" estimated that during his weekly distribution of Lloyd's Weekly he has travelled a distance approaching 30,000 miles, in all weathers. He still enjoys good health, sight and hearing.

Tobacco and an occasional glass of beer "Owd Luke" indulges in, and appears none the worse for these luxuries. His descendants living include four sons, and two daughters, thirty-nine grandchildren, and twenty-two great grandchildren. His wife died some time ago.

RARE SNAKE IN ENGLAND

A fine specimen of the North American bull snake has been killed at Preston, near Cirencester. It is surmised that it either belonged to a local fancier or had escaped from a travelling menagerie.

DASH FOR LIBERTY

E. B. James Recalls an Experience in South Africa

During the late South African War after the evacuation of Nicholson's Nek on October 30th, 1899 saw E. B. James Ex-Staff, I was taken prisoner by the Boers, along with 905 others, after seven hours' fighting. We were being sent under escort to a place called Waschbank where we were to entrain for Pretoria.

I had been wounded in the foot and after proceeding about twelve miles my wound became very painful, and I asked the Boer commander to allow me to ride one of the reserve ponies, of which there were several. I was allowed this privilege, and when we reached Ekanstanto I asked the commander if I might bathe my wounded foot in a stream, permission being grudgingly granted me.

I was, roughly, some twenty-five miles from Ladysmith, and every hill was swarming with Boers, but I decided to make a bolt for it. As soon as my guards saw I had finished, they gave the order to mount. Then came my chance. The Boers did exactly as I expected. Instead of waiting to see me mount, they mounted with me. Quick as thought, I pricked up my pony with the pen-knife I had used for cutting the bandage and, turning his head towards Ladysmith, galloped away into the gathering dusk accompanied by the ping-pong of the bullets which followed me.

I was not hit; and the Boers, who in chasing me, were riding farther from their commando, soon gave it up. On the following morning I staggered into Ladysmith, exhausted, but free.

A WORD FROM MR. KELSO

He Urges Guardians to Look Well After the Children

Have you taken a child from one of the Children's Shelters into your home? If so, why have you done so? Has it been with the idea that you will get just as much as possible out of that child, and give just as little as possible? Or have you realized your responsibility and your opportunity for doing a little good and adding a little brightness to a world often too dreary? In short, have you been selfish, sordid and mean in the step that you have taken? Or, have you been benevolent, high-minded, human? Too often, it is to be feared, people look on these forlorn little ones as mere chattels, and forget to ask themselves the question, "If this child were mine, how would I wish him to be treated."

Most commonly, perhaps, the lack of a sense of responsibility shows itself in failure to send the child to school. This fact is by no means unknown to Mr. Kelso, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, and he has asked us to lay the matter before you, beseeching you at least, who read our paper, to see that you are not careless in this respect.

It is with pleasure that we accede to his request, realizing, as must everyone who gives unprejudiced thought to the matter, the truth of his words: "If a child is deprived of educational advantages between the ages of eight and fourteen, the loss can never be made good." We leave, then, the suggestion with you. It is important, not only to the young people themselves, but to the country at large, that they *should have the neces*sary training for their life's work. You cannot evade the responsibility with impunity. Think about it.

DID FOR FATHER!

An old man and his daughter, a girl of eighteen, had a little booth on a country road, where you threw a ring at a clay pipe, and got a cigar for every "bust."

Chancing to pass that way, an expert cricketer thought he'd try his luck. Soon he had won thirty cigars.

"Seems rather mean," he pondered, as he was about to depart.

And then, in a burst of generosity, he handed them, with a courtly bow, to the young girl.

"Thanks!" she said smiling prettily. "They'll do for father."

Two days later the cricketer happened to pass the same spot. But now the girl was running the booth alone.

She saw the question in his eyes, and answered it.

"Yes," she said, "they've done for father!"

WANTED, AN OFFICE-BOY

"I can't keep the visitors from coming up," said an office-boy dejectedly to the editor of a popular newspaper. "When I say you're out they don't believe me. They say they must see you."

"Well," said the editor, "just tell them that is what they all say. I must have quiet."

Shortly afterwards there called a lady who wanted to see the editor. The boy assured her that it was impossible.

"But I must see him! I'm his wife!"

"That's what they all say!" replied the lad.

There is a vacancy for another office boy.

UNDYING CHARM

Norah had lived as parlor maid in an artistic family for six months. It seemed to Miss Aurelia only natural that Norah should have developed some love of art in that time. One day she discovered the little maid, duster-cloth in hand, gazing at Venus of Milo.

"Do you like her best of all, Norah?" asked Miss Aurelia.

"Sure, and I do, miss," said Norah warmly. "She may not look quite so nate wid her arums gone, but she's so aisy to dust, I fair love her!"

A WEALTHY PAUPER

It has been discovered by the Lewisham Board of Guardians that an inmate of the workhouse owns land in South Africa to the value of between $10,000 and $15,000. They have placed the matter in the hands of their solicitor to see if he can recover the amount they have expended on the supposed pauper in the last five years.

OYSTER TRUST

New York, Dec. 20. The oyster market is being cornered, and already 95 per cent. of the blue point beds are held by a so-called "oyster trust" according to a report current here to-day.

A company, which started in a modest way several years ago, has acquired thirty thousand under water acres of oyster breeding territory along the eastern coast, and is gradually extending. The monopoly is setting a uniform price for all grades of bivalves.

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the tree milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2.629 oz. of gold and 0.26 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Mertz, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, also in particular a remarkable variety known as 'spinel twins.' Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they bank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the conglomerating White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the bed rock of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $10,000,000 in placer gold has been recently won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share, fully paid and non assessable.

No further issues of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

GENERAL BOOTH'S REPLY

He Answers Attacks on the Salvation Army

Addressing a large audience at the Grand Theatre, Battersea, General Booth replied to charges made against the administration of the Salvation Army. A good deal of ignorance, he said, still prevailed regarding the work of the Salvation Army, and, as in the early days of the movement, scandalous and false representations were made about them and industriously circulated. Some people used to say that he was a despot, who ruled his people with a rod of iron—(laughter)—crushed and enslaved them.

Poor people were told that "the general" was piling up a colossal fortune for himself and for his family, but those detractors failed to state how it was that "the general," ever since the Salvation Army started, forty-five years ago, had never taken a shilling from its coffers for his own support. (Loud applause.)

The same people whispered that "the general" lived in magnificence, occupied a princely mansion, and seldom ate except out of silver dishes. (Laughter). Nobody had ever seen him living in an extravagant mansion of his own, and the motor-car in which he sometimes rode was hired and used in following the footsteps of his Master in seeking and saving the lost.

It was also alleged that the Salvation Army and its general did not publish audited accounts or a properly endorsed balance-sheet. At the same time, those people failed to tell the public that the accounts of the Salvation Army were periodically in the hands of one of the first accountants of the City of London who had the most perfect control over them. They also failed to state that ever since the Salvation Army came into existence every year a balance-sheet had been regularly delivered at the homes of its chief officers. A balance-sheet was within reach of anyone who liked to take the trouble to look for it.

CARE OF THE HAIR

Have your own brush and comb and keep them clean and free from dust.

Ammonia in warm water is splendid for cleaning brushes.

A good shampoo is made by rubbing in the yolk of an egg, with or without [illegible] rinse in moderately warm soft water.

A hair wash for oily hair is made from one-half ounce powdered camphor, one-half ounce powdered borax to a quart of soft water. Use a teacupful in warm water and some good [illegible]. Rinse well.

For sick people or those who catch cold when taking the ordinary water shampoo, a good cleanser is odorless paraffine. Moisten a piece of cashmere (it has no lint) with the paraffine. Divide the hair in strands and rub the scalp well. Then comb gently with a fine comb.

Sage wash made by putting a tablespoon of powdered sage and a teaspoon of borax in the first water, is strengthening to the hair.

Handle the hair carefully. If full of tangles moisten lightly with odorless paraffine. Always begin to comb at the ends, not at the roots, and comb gently.

DEAR FOOD IN GERMANY

Crowded and Tumultous Protest Meetings

From all parts of Germany come reports of action taken by the people against the extraordinary rise in the price of meat. In the rich city of Frankfort-on-Main the Chamber of Commerce has petitioned the municipality to take steps to induce the Government to reduce the freight charges on meat on the State railways until the prices fall. The Saxon branches of German Trades' Association have protested against the present policy of practically closing the German frontiers to the importation of foreign cattle. The Hansa Alliance has had a joint sitting with representatives of the Berlin Butchers' Union to consider what steps should be taken in the presence of this grave crisis. In Hamburg eighteen public meetings of a crowded and tumultuous character have been held with the same object and to protest against the general fiscal policy of the Government.

ROUGH ON BELINDA

A little singing was being indulged in at a social gathering and, half-way down the programme, the name of Miss Belinda Brown figured.

Alas! when the time came for her to appear a messenger arrived to say that the lady was suffering from a very bad cold, and, therefore, the chairman had to excuse her to the audience.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I have to announce that Miss Brown will be unable to sing as announced, and therefore, Mr. Green will give us A Song of Thanksgiving."

COMPANIONS IN DEATH

Stricken by Illness, Girl Friends Die, as They Wished, Together

Two coffins, covered with rich floral emblems, were lowered into one grave in the presence of a great mourning congregation near Carrick-on-Shannon, Leitrim. The scene closed the pathetic life-story of two inseparable girl companions, Bridget Reman and Mary Doherty. The girls, who were Roman Catholics, had grown up intimate friends and neighbors from childhood, and both were exceedingly popular in their district. But some time ago they both developed consumption. By a remarkable coincidence they were both attacked by the fatal disease about the same time, and it made equal progress with each of them. It took an incurable turn in both a month or so ago.

Recognizing that they must prepare for death, the companions, who had just turned twenty years of age, expressed the wish that it might overtake both on the same day. They communicated with each other daily to the end, and believed that their wish not to be separated in life would be answered.

And the most remarkable fact in the history followed: both the girls passed calmly away at the same hour.

The weight of the bricks is estimated at nearly 120,000 tons, and in the course of his work he has walked nearly 55,000 miles.

SUITABLE XMAS GIFTS.

Messrs. Frank Clarke & Son, the George street jewellers, located at the corner of Brock street, with their usual enterprise have imported a large consignment of goods specially fit for the Christmas trade.

Mr Frank Clarke, the senior partner of this firm is too well known to our citizens to require any superfluous introduction. Mr. Clarke with his banjo and accompanying voice has delighted thousands of our citizens, doing the good work for "sweet charity's" sake. Whilst Mr. Clarke has always been anxious to assist churches and charities by his banjo performances, he has another side: the business side.

For the Christmas trade Messrs. Clarke & Son, oldest jewelry firm in Peterboro, have imported a special line of goods that simply MUST appeal to all those who want to please their friends at this joyous season of the year. Now Messrs. Clarke & Son, will have something else to tell you about when the Christmas and New Year's season is over. Still, as expensive goods require a day to think over before buying, we will take up that matter of precious stones. Now some jewellers new to the trade, buy diamonds, emeralds, saphires, rubies, pearls, etc., like they would grind-stones, viz.: and only by weight. Here is where the jewellers may make or may lose, but the customer must certainly lose in most cases. However, Mr. Frank Clarke, with 30 years experience in precious stones, knows how, when and where to buy. This Christmas he has purchased the finest lot of diamonds, saphires, pearls, peridots, rubies, aqua-marines, emeralds, etc., that ever came to Peterborough. These stones are set in Tiffany, or other up-to-date settings, or can be set to suit purchasers. Don't forget this immense stock of precious stones. Also, don't forget that the brass and copper high grade goods recently imported from Russia by the firm is one of the finest ever brought to Canada. The man, woman or child wanting anything in ornamental or useful jewelry goods should hurry to Clarke's before Christmas Day and get a large selection and small prices.

Milkmen's Licenses.

As the milk vendors' license fee is only $1.00 one would think that it would be paid promptly, but that is not the case in many instances and the authorities have much trouble in collecting that small amount. This week chief Thompson laid information against five of the delinquents. Two of the number responded and were charged eighty-five cents as costs. They were A. Hunter and W. J. Robertson. There are over fifty milkmen in the city.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

ICE ON CHEMONG LAKE GIVES WAY.

Mrs. Northey of Lakehurst, and Mr. Guiry of Emily, Have Narrow Escape.

Mrs. Northey of Lakehurst and Mr. Guiry, of Emily, had a narrow escape. As Mrs. Northey and her son of Lakehurst, were driving to Peterborough in a cutter and were crossing Chemong Lake, the horse went into a fissure in the ice. Before they realized their dangerous predicament however, the animal managed to scramble out again on to firm ice, and pulled the cutter through to safety.

A little while after, Mr. Guiry of Emily, with a number of ladies in a sleigh, came along, and their team went into the same crack in the ice. The front part of the sleigh followed the team and the occupants were thrown out on to the ice. They succeeded in getting the horses out of the water, undamaged, but the sleigh was smashed.

The escape in both cases was very narrow.

CHIEF OF CHICAGO FIRE DEPT. AND 25 OR 30 MEN LOSE LIVES

Fire in Great Morris Packing Plant is Followed by Explosion---Wooden Canopy Fell

CHICAGO TRAGEDY—Probably thirty firemen killed, including Fire Chief Horne, and Fire Marshall Burroughs, and forty injured. Explosion of ammonia stilled some firemen, and a falling wall buried them under a canopy, under which they were working. Property loss from one million dollars upward, the whole Union Stock Yards being in danger at last report.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Fire Marshall James Horan, one of the greatest fire fighters in America, his second assistant, W. J. Burroughs, and between twenty-five and thirty-five firemen were killed and forty others injured today in a fire which at an early hour had caused $1,500,000 damage, and at 10 o'clock this forenoon still threatened the whole of the stock yards district.

WOODEN CANOPY FELL.

An overhanging wooden canopy fell from the beef house of Morris & Co., where the fire started, carrying with it tons of red hot bricks and debris upon two companies of firemen and the Chief, crushing them to death and encasing their bodies in a veritable furnace into which their comrades were unable to dig for several hours.

Nearly all those who were not killed outright when the walls fell were roasted to death before help could reach them.

WENT DOWN TO DEATH.

Assistant Chief, Wm. Burroughs and Lieut. Fitzgerald were with the Marshall under the canopy when it fell, receiving specific orders for directing the fight against the ever-spreading flames in other quarters, and they went down to their death with Marshall Horan.

RUSHED TO THEIR AID.

Other firemen, witnesses of the fate of their Chief, deserted for a brief time other parts of the blazing structure, and sought with their bare hands to drag apart the glowing bricks and debris which covered the bodies of their Chief and his companions.

THREE MEN FOUND ALIVE.

Three men were found alive buried under the debris of the wall of the plant of Nelson Morris & Company, which collapsed following the explosion of ammonia. One was taken out, but the other two were pinned down and could not be removed immediately.

The survivors were sheltered by a freight car and escaped death by fire or by being crushed by a miracle.

The body of Assistant Chief Burroughs was recovered at noon.

Vice-Pres. Travers Released on Bail

Toronto, Dec. 21.—The cashier, manager of the Farmers' Bank, W. R. Travers, was placed under arrest last evening on a charge of making false returns to the Government. Mr. Travers was about to enter the King Edward Hotel by the main entrance when he was intercepted by Detectives Newton and Murray who had the warrant in hand.

Though some such developments had been expected all along by the man in the street, it took Mr. Travers entirely by surprise. For a few moments he held a hurried consultation with the officers, then started along King towards Yonge. The detectives followed leisurely at a reasonable distance, but always with their eye upon the prisoner.

Travers was latter brought into court and released on bail of $20,000.

McSORLEY ADMITS SHIPPING BODY

Confession Made to Inspector Reburn To-day—Five Years the Maximum Penalty.

A confession was made to Inspector Reburn this morning by McSorley, in which he implicated himself with the sending of the body to Montreal.

By long distance telephone the Superintendent of the Provincial Police, Mr. Joseph E. Rogers, received word from Inspector Reburn this morning.

"McSorley admitted to Reburn that he put the corpse in the barrel and sent it to Montreal," said the Superintendent. "He denies robbing the grave and says he received the body from a man whom he never saw before and whom he does not know."

THE PENALTY.

The max mum penalty for robbing a grave is five years in the penitentiary.

In section 235 of the Criminal Code anyone who "improperly or indirectly interferes with or offers any indignity to any dead human body or human remains, whether buried or not" is liable to five years' imprisonment.

A further charge may be laid against McSorley by the Grand Trunk Railway Company for signing J. Bousefield's name.

The late Matthew Johnston was an employee of the Grand Trunk and his son is also in the company's service. He left for Montreal to-day to identify the remains of his father. These have been kept in cold storage since leaving Toronto.

DISCOVERIES ARE RARE.

"Discoveries of grave-robbing are quite rare in this Province," said Mr. Rogers. "A few years ago there was a body found at the station at Belleville on the way to Kingston. It had come from Peterborough, and there was a conviction."

ENTOMBED MINERS GIVEN UP FOR DEAD

CASUALTY LIST IN THE HULTON COLLIERY EXPLOSION WILL REACH 322.

Dead Bodies on All Sides—In Their Frantic Grief Women and Children Run About Hurling Missiles at Authorities.

Bolton, Eng., Dec. 22.—All hope for saving any of the miners entombed by yesterday's explosion in the Hulton colliery was abandoned today and the 322 remaining in the mine have been given up for dead. The task of removing the bodies was begun this morning under the direction of Government Inspector Gerrard, who personally led the first party that entered the mine. The shattered and burned bodies of dead miners were found on every side.

FAMILIES DRIVEN OFF.

As the work of carrying out the dead bodies progressed today the families of the lifeless miners had to be driven off repeatedly by the authorities.

In their frantic grief women and children ran about screaming and hurling missiles at the authorities. The men took a hand and the rioting became so serious that the patrols had to charge the mobs and drive them off the mine property.

BODIES HORRIBLY MANGLED.

A pitiful element of the tragedy was furnished by the bringing out of the dead bodies of boys who were employed in the pit. Some of their bodies had been horribly mangled by the explosion which hurled human beings, mules and coal cars against the sides of the shaft with terrific force.

Identification was difficult in many cases due to the terrible disfigurement of the features of the victims.

PREMIER SEES KING GEORGE.

London, Dec. 21.—Premier Asquith, who came down from Scotland especially at the command of King George, had an audience at Buckingham Palace today. It lasted only three-quarters of an hour.

It is understood that his majesty wished to be fully advised as to the Premier's views, and the Cabinet's plans for the future, now that the elections is over, before leaving London to spend Christmas at Sandringham, whither he goes to-morrow.

It is known that the King is very anxious to tide over the coronation period with the least possible political upheaval, and that all his influence will be exerted with the parties in the direction of a compromise.

Mr. Asquith saw none of his colleagues while he was in London, and he returned to Edinburgh on an afternoon train.

WILL FIGHT THE ACT

Railways to Oppose Printing Tickets Bills of Lading, Etc., in French.

Montreal Dec. 21.—The C.P.R., the G.T.R., the C.N.R., the Intercolonial and the R. & O. Navigation Company are preparing to start a great legal fight to resist the enforcement of the Lavergne Dual Language Act which the legislature passed last session, becoming operative in January next. They point out that enormous expense of printing all tickets, bills of lading and other documents in two tongues, and hold that a Provincial statute cannot be enforced against them as they work under a Dominion charter.

ADVANCE GUARD

Zionists to Meet in Toronto.

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 23.—The advance guard of delegates to the annual convention of the Zionists of Canada put in an appearance here yesterday. The convention will begin its sessions Sunday. All sections of the Dominion will be represented and indications point to one of the most successful as well as the largest conventions ever held by the organization in Canada.

A PRESENTATION.

Rev. Mr. Webb Remembered by His Congregation.

At the close of the mid-week service on Wednesday night last, which was largely attended, a handsome Christmas gift was presented to the Rev. J. R. Webb and Mrs. Webb, on behalf of the congregation.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood occupied the chair and spoke of the pastor as a preacher who brought to the pulpit each week work of brain and heart that means much to the growing congregation, and also of his pastoral services. He then called Mr. R. R. Harding to the platform, who, in well-chosen words, spoke on behalf of the people, and asked the pastor and his wife to accept the gift, which at this point was laid on the table by Mr. Porter White.

The present selected was a large polished oak cabinet, containing a full set of sterling silverware.

GUILD OF GOODFELLOWSHIP.

Will Have Social Hour Sunday Afternoon.

From 3 to 4 p.m. on Sunday, the Guild of Goodfellowship will spend a social hour at the Princess Theatre. There will be no regular address, but in its place will be Christmas carols, hymns and sacred songs, in which the whole audience will have an opportunity of taking part.

Toronto to Winnipeg 52 Miles to be Cut Off

The Canadian Pacific contemplates shortening its Toronto-Winnipeg line by 50 miles by building a new line from Nepigon, 70 miles northeast of Fort William, to Savanne, 71 miles northwest of Fort William.

A party of 30 surveyors are now engaged in preparing a winter's work under F. R. Reed, one of the company's engineers at Winnipeg.

The present main line now diverges to the south from Nepigon until it reaches Fort William, when it turns to the northwest, until it reaches Savanne, running from that point until it strikes Molson, when the line again runs south into Winnipeg.

This will give the Canadian Pacific Railway the shortest route between the east and west as far as Toronto is concerned. The distance from Toronto to Winnipeg by the new line will be 1185 miles. It ought to be in use in 18 months.

Millions Lost in Big Blaze in Cincinnati

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 21.—The most destructive fire ever experienced in Cincinnati swept through the manufacturing section of the city today, costing three lives and causing damage estimated at $2,500,000. Seventeen persons were injured.

The blaze which originated in the building at the corner of Ninth and Sycamore streets, housing the Krippendorf-O'Neil Company, shoe manufacturers, and other concerns, raged for more than seven hours, and it required the combined efforts of the complete fire fighting force of the city and all the suburbs to subdue it. At 9.30 o'clock it was under control with nine large buildings destroyed and gutted.

Two of those killed were firemen, who heroically risked their lives in fighting the flames.

UNION BANK EARNS FOURTEEN PER CENT.

Also Increased Its Dividend and Its Paid Up Capital.

The Union Bank of Canada, head office in Quebec, held its annual meeting on Saturday, December 17th. At this meeting the most favorable report in the bank's history was presented to the shareholders. A review of the year's business shows that the bank increased its paid up capital by $800,000., bringing the present paid up capital up to $4,000,000. The new capital was issued at a premium of 45 per cent, thereby contributing $360,000 towards the Rest account, which was altogether increased by $500,000 during the year.

Another evidence of the bank's prosperity is shown by the fact that the dividend has been increased from 7 to 8 per cent., the last dividend of the year being at the increased rate. An examination of the bank's statement shows that it is very strong in cash reserves in gold and Dominion notes. Another strong feature is that the assets immediately available amount to very nearly $15,000,000, or 37 per cent. of the total liabilities. The fact that this bank has over $30,000,000 on loan and as bills discounted, shows that it is doing its full share in catering to the business needs of the country. The total assets of the bank amount to very nearly $47,500,000, indicating that the Union Bank of Canada is one of the strongest of our financial institutions. Altogether the showing is a most creditable one and the general manager and directors are deserving of congratulations.

OVER TWENTY KILLED IN A BIG FIRE AT PHILADELPHIA

More Than a Dozen Fire-Fighters are Among The Dead—Walls Crashed Down on a Rescue Party of 30

PHILADELPHIA TRAGEDY—Seventeen dead, 6 injured and twenty in hospital; mostly firemen. Fire in D. Freidlander's leather factory. Four walls fell inward on fire fighters, and out on some small houses, on which some were working. Property loss only $30,000. Fire incendiary.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 22.—Twenty-one of the city's firemen and police are known to have been killed in a fire which destroyed the David Friedlanders Leather Company's factory here early to-day.

At 1.30 o'clock this afternoon, six firemen were still missing, with two of these known to be in the ruins. Besides the dead there are more than a score injured in hospitals, some of whom will probably die.

At 10 o'clock today the fire was still burning, and the smoke of the ruins greatly hindered the army of rescuers searching for those believed still in the ruins. It is possible that another day may pass before all the bodies in the ruins are found.

Members of the police and fire departments of this city were working until daybreak on the ice-covered ruins of the factory in the faint hope of rescuing any of their comrades who might still be alive under the mass of bricks and iron girders which crashed down upon them last night while they were fighting the flames. Incomplete lists show 23 dead, 19 of whom have been identified, sixteen are firemen and three are policemen.

Headed by the Director of Public Safety, the members of both departments have been at work since before mid night last night, and it will be late to-day before the exact extent of the loss of life can be determined.

MANY RESCUERS KILLED.

More than half of the identified dead were in the rescue party which shortly before 3 o'clock this morning were buried beneath the debris when the north wall, the last of the building to remain standing, crashed down upon them.

In addition to the injured firemen, a host of spectators were injured by the falling walls last night, and several are in hospitals in critical conditions. Among them are Mrs. Mary A. New Mann, aged 90, whose back was crushed by a falling brick; Robert Walton, aged 21, who is covered with burns, and Walter Manger, aged 16, whose legs and arms are all broken.

The fire, which originated on the first floor of the Friedlander factorys five storey brick structure at 1116 to 1120 Bodine street north, in the northeastern section of the city, had gained considerable headway before it was discovered shortly before ten o'clock last night. The work of the firemen was further impeded by the fact that all the fire plugs in the vicinity were frozen solid. Before they could be thawed out, the entire body of the building was a mass of flames.

The firemen, under the direction of Chief Baxter, began a systematic attack. Truck No. 7, a huge modern water tower, and Engine Company No. 23 were gotten into position on the Bodine street front. Lines of hose were also run from Third street through a number of small hose. Hardly had the work begun when the Bodine street walls collapsed carrying with it most of the company, who were leaning against it on their extension ladders.

THROWN INTO BLAZING RUINS.

A majority of the men working at this point were thrown into the blazing ruins. A moment later the south wall and the east wall near Third street fell. The roof of a small house on Third street, from which Chief Baxter, directing the work of his men, was cut in half and the veteran leader narrowly escaped.

The falling bricks extinguished most of the flames, but those firemen who escaped the fire and shock had their lives further endangered by the freezing water which filled the basement. Some of the bodies were removed frozen solid in cakes of ice.

As the firemen fell back exhausted from the work of rescue the police reserves were called out from all sections of the city.

WALLS FALLS ON RESERVES.

Disregarding the menace of the north wall, which was still threatening above them, they went manfully to the assistance of the firemen in the hope of rescuing those men who were still alive in the ruins. Thirty of them were trying to remove a girder which imprisoned a fireman, when the threatening wall crashed down upon them.

There was a fair breeze blowing the place was hard to approach, and the water pressure was found to be deficient, so that the fire brigade could do little.

Wounded Women Will both Recover

Windsor, Dec. 21.—Mrs. Lepine and Mrs. Stowe, victims of yesterday's shooting in Windsor, whereby Elmer Lepine shot and killed himself after wounding the women in Mrs. Stowe's home, are resting easily this morning, and both will recover.

Mrs. Stowe is at the home of a neighbor, and Mrs. Lepine is in the Hotel Dieu. X-rays will be used this afternoon to locate the bullets, and they will be probed for to-night.

The Lepine couple did not have any children. The dead man and his wounded wife had been residents of Windsor eighteen years, coming from Puce, a small French settlement a short distance from this city. Both are well known, and have many relatives in Puce and Windsor.

Mrs. Lepine blames whiskey as the cause of the tragedy.

INTERNATIONAL PEACE.

Andrew Carnegie has never made quite so profound an impression upon the world as he has in his latest endowment of $10,000,000 for the promotion of international peace. Yet it is but a natural step forward in the career of such a man. It is owing to him that there is at the Hague a House of Peace which he built and gave to the Hague Tribunal, the cost of it being about $1,500,000

The peace which prevails between countries in the Western Hemisphere save only the occasional bickerings of a few rival dictators, tyrants, political nuisances generally, indicates the extent to which a friendly spirit exists throughout this half of the world It was in view of the endless advantages of such a condition that Mr. Darnegie was led to see the value of the Pan-American bureau, formerly the Bureau of American Republics and, in order to make that work permanent as well as to convey his everlasting blessing upon it, he built the superb home of the Bureau in Washington at a cost to himself of about a million.

Thus it may be seen that the latest act of Mr. Carnegie in the pursuit of the world's peace is but a more splendid one than usual; that is all. He has built a home for the International Tribunal and a home for the Pan-American also. Now he establishes the fund that shall be devoted under the best intelligence that is available to the purpose of peace, because peace is the natural condition of mankind and the one thing essential to the prosperity and happiness of nations.

It may be a source of regret to many that it should be necessary still to preach the gospel of peace after 20 centuries since the event of the Prince of Peace, but facts are facts, human nature is a stubborn thing at slow progress towards excellence and it will be a long time before war and its horrors are banished from the earth. Meanwhile, all concerted effort to that end that is conducted intelligently must certainly have the blessing of Heaven

BOOSTING QUEEN'S.

Kingston, Dec. 21. The announcement at the school of Mining dinner at Queen's last night, at which Lieutenant-Governor Gibson was a guest, the graduates of the school purposed contributing $10,000 to Prof. Nicol's gift of $40,000 to permit of the construction of a metallurgy building on Queen's campus, created great enthusiasm. It was another manifestation of what Queens spirit can do.

THE RED YEAR
—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

took good care that his secret intelligence of occurrences at Delhi and other stations should remain hidden from Mayne and, while his ambitions mounted each hour, he cast many a veiled glance at the graceful beauty of the fair English girl who moved like a sylph among the brown-skinned satyrs surrounding her.

Once the party had reached Bithoor the Nana's tone changed. Instead of sending his European guests into Cawnpore, whence safe transit to Calcutta was still practicable, he kept them in his palace, on the pretext that the roads were disturbed. He contrived, at first, to hoodwink Mr. Mayne by giving him genuine news of the wholesale outbreak in the North-West, and by adding wholly false tidings of massacres at Allahabad, Benares, and towns in Upper Bengal. At last, when Mayne insisted on going into Cawnpore, the native threw aside politeness, said he could not "allow" him to depart, and virtually made uncle and niece prisoners.

But he treated them well A clear-headed Brahmin to whom intrigue was the breath of life, was not likely to make the mistake of being too precipitate in his actions The wave of religious fanaticism sweeping over the land might recede as quickly as it had risen Moslem and Hindu, Pathan and Brahmin, recruiting officers who fraternized [illegible] might be at each other's throats to-morrow. So the Nana was a courteous jailer. Beyond the loss of their liberty the captives had nothing to complain of, and he met Mayne's vehement reproaches with unmoved good humor, protesting all the while that he was acting for the best.

Winifred took fright, however. Her woman's intuition looked beneath the mask. For her uncle's sake she kept her suspicions to herself, for she suffered much in secret, and her distress might well have moved a man of finer character to sympathy. Each time she met the Nana he treated her with more apparent friendliness. She recoiled from his advances as she might shrink from a venomous snake.

Fortunately there were others in Bithoor who understood the Brahmin's motives, and saw therein the germ of failure for their own plans. Nana Sahib was an exceedingly important factor in the success of the scheme that meditated the re-establishment of the Mogul dynasty. Recognized by the Mahrattas, the great warlike race of western India, as their leader, looked on as the pivot of Hindu support to the Mohammedan monarchy, it was absolutely essential that he should captain the rebel garrison of Cawnpore in a triumphant march to Delhi. For that reason a marriage distasteful to both had already been arranged between him and the Roshinara Begum. For that reason he had travelled to many centers of disaffection during the months of March and April, winning doubtful Hindu princes to the side of Bahadur Shah by his tact and ready diplomacy. For that reason, too, the native officers of the first regiments in revolt at Cawnpore made him swear, even at the twelfth hour, that he would lead them to Delhi

His unforeseen infatuation for an Englishwoman might upset the carefully-laid plot. Under other conditions a dose of poison would have removed poor Winifred from the scene, but that simple expedient was not to be thought of, as the Nana's vengeful disposition was sufficiently well known to his associates to make them fear the outcome. Therefore they left nothing to chance, and actually brought the Princess Roshinara post haste from the north, believing that her presence would insure the inconstant wooer's return with her at the right moment.

While the majority pulled in one way there was an active minority that wished the Nana to set up an independent kingdom. His nephew and his Mohammedan friend, Azimullah, were convinced that their faction would lose all influence as soon as their chief was swallowed up in the maelstrom of the imperial court. If Winifred supplied the spell that kept the Nana at Bithoor, they were quite content that it should be allowed to exercise its power.

Hence, Malcolm's arrival gave the Begum a chance that her quick wit seized upon. Why not, she argued, connive at the Englishwoman's escape, and let it become known that she had fled back to Meerut? When the Nana returned from Cawnpore, flushed with wine and conquest, this should be the first news that greeted him, and his amorous rage would go hand in hand with the other considerations that urged his immediate departure for the Mogul capital. That was not the device of a woman who loved—it savored rather of the cool state-craft of a Lucrezia Borgia.

No more curious mixture of plot and counterplot than this minor chapter of the Bithoor romance came to light during that disastrous upheaval in India. Never did events of the utmost magnitude hinge on incidents so trivial to the community at large. A truculent thief like Abdul Huq was able to defeat the intent of a king's daughter, and a couple of alert troopers, riding to a bluff overlooking the river, could report that they saw the budgerow on which the sahib-log escaped drifting down stream towards Cawnpore! Thus the intrigue miscarried twice. Winifred was free: the clear inference to be drawn from the boat's course was that her uncle and Malcolm would bring her straight to the protection of their friends in the cantonment.

There was a scene of violence, nearly culminating in murder, when Nana Sahib came to Bithoor at dawn. He met the scorn of Roshinara with a furious insolence that stopped short of bloodshed only on account of the prudence still governing most of his actions. Not yet was he drunk with power. That madness was soon to obsess him. But he lent a willing ear to the counsels of Rao Sahib and Azim-ullah. Soon after daybreak he galloped to Kullanpur, on the road to Delhi, whither some thousands of sepoys had already gone, and harangued them eloquently on the glory, not to speak of the loot, they would acquire by attacking the accursed Englich at Cawnpore.

They were easily swayed. Acclaiming the Nana as a prince worthy of obedience they marched after him, and thus sealed the doom of many

MELVILLE

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

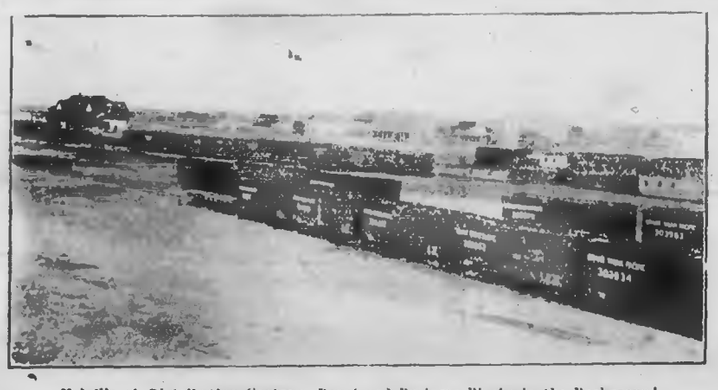
In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many fold in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark?



Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of transportation facilities. It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constructed from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by wsrehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate values and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enjoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West of Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more promising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.

Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

BEAR'S FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

New York Zoo Keepers Triumph Through Chloroform—Polar Trip Sequel

Capt. Bartlett is the Englishman who went nearest to the North Pole with Commander Peary, and since then he has made another trip to the Arctic with Paul R. Rainey and Harry Whitney, the American sportsman. This bear is described as weighing nearly a ton and standing eight feet high on its hind legs. It is undoubtedly the biggest bear in captivity.

With dogs to distract the animal's attention, he was captured on an ice floe in the Arctic. Rainey, operating from the right flank, lassoed the bear, who has been christened Silver King, and Whitney, working from the left flank, swung his rope simultaneously. All hands of the hunting party were requisitioned. It was a sort of tug-of-war between Rainey's and Whitney's teams, both pulling in opposite directions, the main object being to pull the struggling and desperate captive from the ice-floe into the water.

This manœuvre was accomplished and by means of a derrick the animal was finally hoisted on board. He lay in the hold, starving, for a few days and was at length tempted into a strong cage, where provisions had been placed.

At New York, however, Silver King made his last struggle for liberty, and was not subdued until five pounds of chloroform had been placed into his cage. The latter was swung successfully from the ship into the pantechnicon, the bear growling and protesting, flinging himself against the bar, at the sides of the cage all the time.

A large crowd had assembled at the ship's side, says the Telegraph correspondent. Suddenly, when twenty keepers from the Zoo were congratulating themselves, the giant bear succeeded in getting his paw through the back of the cage, and in a few minutes would probably have freed himself.

A race now ensued for two-inch planks and nails. The Zoo keepers fought the battle with hammers and nails against the teeth and claws of Silver King. As the bear gashed and ripped they boarded him in, closing up the holes as fast as he could make them. Suddenly, while the Zoo laborers rested, the bear's massive head, with his red tongue rolling out like a dog's, and his big amber eyes blazing, shot from a hole in the roof.

The Zoo keeper swiftly hammered the bear over the head with an iron bar, and in a second half a dozen men, with boards and hammers, were on the roof, ready to close the hole. The bear, however, was too quick for them, and he rose up, and the men fairly fell off the roof.

Then the Zoo curator, while the keepers plied the creature with iron bars, and policemen stood around with big revolvers, keeping the crowd back, had a sudden inspiration. He dashed away on his motor-car, ransacked several druggists' stores, and returned with five pounds of chloroform. He saturated lint with four pounds of the opiate, and forced it into the cage, every hole of which was now closely covered with canvas, and Silver King succumbed very speedily to the Zoo. Mounted policemen went in front, and more mounted policemen in the rear. The Zoo keepers rode on the top of the pantechnicon, and the Zoo curator courageously stuck to the top of the bear's cage, and at intervals repewed doses of the anæsthetic.

By the time the Zoo several miles distant, was reached, the bear was more dead than alive, so he was easily transferred to a big cage, where he was welcomed by several other natives of the frozen North.

A VARIED CAREER

Sir F. Lugard Hob-nobbed With Rough Italian Sailors

Sir Frederick Lugard, the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Hong Kong, has had a singularly varied and interesting career. The story of his adventures in Africa alone reads like a romance, his method of entering the dark continent for the first time being, to say the least, most unorthodox. With $250 in his belt and practically no outfit except an old rifle, paid for in India by shooting a man-eating tiger with a price on its head, Sir Frederick boarded a tramp steamer at Gibraltar, where he happened to be stationed at the time, and sailed away for Massowah with the intention of joining the Italians who were at that time fighting the Abyssinians. Funds giving out at Suez he was compelled to ship as a deck passenger on a timber boat, and hob-nob with the rough Italian sailors who manned it. Sir Frederick has told a good story of a fiery old colonel's visit to a village barber. The officer pounced into the shop, placed his sword beside a chair and said, "Shave me, sir, and beware; if you cut me I will cut your head off." This threat was too much for the man in charge, and he called an assistant, telling him to shave the gentleman, and informing him of what to expect should the razor not act properly. The boy promptly got to business, and when the operation had been satisfactorily performed the colonel inquired, "Weren't you frightened at all?" The boy replied in the negative, and, asked his reason, he responded, "Well, it's like this, sir. If I had cut you at all, I should have had first chance. I should have finished you off for safety."

DEATH OF BLACK BILL

The Steed Was Well Cared for in His Old Age

Black Bill, the noble equine which did duty for the Kent Mills for 27 years, is dead. He died recently on the farm of William Weaver in Chatham township, where he was out in pasture. The famous horse was 32 years of age, and was a general favorite with the employes of the Kent Mills. The employes are naturally sorry to lose him, although he has not been on duty for two years. When he was incapacitated for work through old age, another horse was put in his place, and his latter years were spent in a comfortable stable during the winter and in a healthy pasture in the summer. Some of the men from the mill went out to the farm to give this old and faithful servant a decent burial.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

I care not for spring: on his fickle wing
Let the blossoms and buds be borne;
He woos them again with his treacherous grin,
And to scatter the gems o'er the morn.
And he constant eft, he knows not himself,
Nor his own changing mind an hour.
He'll smile in your face, and with wry grimace,
He'll wither your youngest flower.

Let the summer sun to his bright home run,
He shall never be sought by me;
When he's dimmest by a cloud I can laugh aloud
And care not how sulky he be!
For his scathing cold is the madness wild
That sports in fierce fever's train,
And when love is too strong, it don't last long,
As many have found to their pain.

A mild harvest night, by the tranquil light
Of the merriest and gentlest moon,
Has a far sweeter charm, for me, I swear,
Than the broad and mobbishing noon,
But every beat awakens my grief,
As it lieth beneath the tree
So let autumn air be never so fair,
It by no means agrees with me.

But my song I troll out, for Christmas stout,
The hearty, the true, and the bold:
A bumper I drain, and with might and main—
Give three cheers for this Christmas old!
We'll usher him in with a merry din
That shall gladden his joyous heart,
And we'll keep him up, while there's bite or sup,
And in fellowship goost, we'll part.

In his fine honest pride, he scorns to hide
One jot of his hard weather scars:
They're no disgrace, for there's much the same trace
On the cheeks of our harpest tars.
Then again I sing till the roof doth ring,
And it echoes from wall to wall
To the stout old wight, fair welcome to night,
As the king of the seasons all!

HIS OLD TIME DANCE.

De New Year come, en de New Year go,
En I swear off high, en I swear off low:
But bless my day, en bless my chance!
I can't swear off fum de ole time dance!

(Swing dem sisters, swing em roun'!
Let dem fiddles take de town!
I dong swear off, but bless my chance
I warn't includin' de ole time dance!)

De New Year say: "Dat's a purty way
You gwine on sence yo' swear off day!
Satan is awaitin' ez sho' ez sin
Wid a big pitchfork fer ter take you-in!"

But I tell him plain: "You kin say yo' say:
It's the Rheumatism I mus' dance away!
I swearsl off true—but I watched my chance,
En I didn't say nuthin' 'bout de ole time dance!"

So, I swings dem sisters left en right,
En de fiddles play till de broad daylight:
Ef Satun git me, I'll take my chance;
So, han's roun' all, in de ole time dance!

—Frank L. Stanton.

CHRISTMAS TIMES DOWN SOUTH.

Christmas times, believers—Christmas times down South!
All de richest juices meltin' in yo' mouth!
All de year's sweet honey gethered in a heap;
Dancin' in de cabin till de chillun des can't sheep!
Christmas times, believers—
Hear de house doors slam!
En best of all, de darkies
Dey drinks de white folks' dram!
Christmas times, believers—fling de white sand down!
Here comes all de fiddlers dat gwine ter wake de town!
All de 'ole time dancers from fur befo' de war—
W'en dey hear a fiddle, know what dey livin' for!
Christmas times, believers—
Dat's de word I say!
Even de grayhead' deacons
Will dance de worl' away!
Listen at dem fiddles! Ain't dey singin' sweet!
En dar's de table, loaded wid fines' 'possum meat!
Balance to yo' partners when de fiddle soun';

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

King and shepherd spake to Him:
"Thine the gifts we bear.—
Purple cloth and cloth of gold,
Wondrous gems and rare,
Royal robes a King may wear.
Spices strange and sweet."
Lo, the Christ child smiled on them.
Kneeling at His feet.

"I've the mother Mary spake:
"Little Son of mine,
Naught I have for Thee but love,
Ever—ever Thine."
Lo, he turned, the Child divine,
Yea, with eyes grown dim
Kissed her thrice, who knew her heart
Thrice must break for Him.

TIRED.

I seek no gift from your fair hands,
This Christmas, sweetheart mine;
I've many a pair of slippers to spare,
And of mouchoir cases nine.

Of picture frames I have a lot,
And cigarette cases, too;
And my pipes galore lie round the floor
And along the chimney flue.

The same cigars you sent last year
And here, almost intact;
The friends who smoked have long since croaked
To pay for their rash act.

And so in solemn earnestness
I ask of you, my dear,
To spare your thrift and send no gift:
I need a rest this year.

—Tom Masson.

NEW COLD TIRE SETTER

The House Cold Tire Setter appeals to every blacksmith who has progressive ideas

No doubt many blacksmiths are content to follow the old methods of their fathers and grandfather may make a good living, but the progress of wide awake blacksmith or carriage builder is not satisfied with mere living, and when he hears of a machine that will do the necessary work better, quicker and cheaper than it can be done by hand he is anxious to investigate. Such a man is not satisfied with making just enough but work to keep his family comfortable and laid at the end of the year that he has very little left over. He wants to make enough not only to pay all current expenses but to have a decent and increasing balance on the bank at the close of each year he is in business so that when old age comes on he will be in a position to enjoy the latter days of his life without worrying about household and other bills. To accomplish this it is necessary that he shop should be furnished with machines that will save time and labor and yet do the work better than it can be done by hand and as a result add materially to his profits.

Some difficulty has been experienced in producing a machine that will upset tires up to three inches wide

The House Cold Tire Setter works on the same way as the hot tire set. It is not strong enough to upset a tire cold when saves taking out the bolts and taking it off the wheel to set it. A further advantage is that you can set a tire as much or as little as desired and can give the shrink exactly what dish you want without any chance of mistake. Tires set by this machine stay tight longer than when set by hand. Hot tires can be upset with the machine a lot but what it would cost for new bolts if set by hand. Now this can be saved. A tire in five minutes that would take half an hour by the old method.

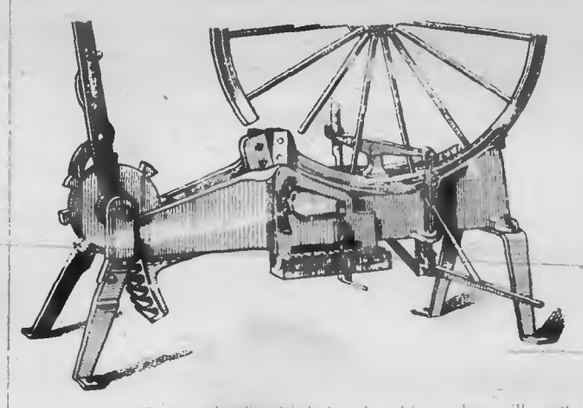
Figure how much this would save you in a year. The experience of every He wants to make enough not only to pay all current expenses but to have a decent and increasing balance on the bank at the close of each year he is in business so that when old age comes on he will be in a position to enjoy the latter days of his life without worrying about household and other bills. To accomplish this it is necessary that he shop should be furnished with machines that will save time and labor and yet do the work better than it can be done by hand and as a result add materially to his profits.

The machine is not only fast but are easy to operate and not a man of the thousands who have bought these machines has ever regretted it. The advertising matter is supplied to purchasers of these machines to introduce them in their neighborhood.

In Canada alone there are over two hundred of these machines in use and giving every satisfaction.

A warrantee is given by the Co. for that, where instructions are complied with, the machine will upset any tire of the sizes it is guaranteed to upset and that can ordinarily be set by hand, and for one sixth the cost by hand and does as good a job. Any parts of the machine breaking within a year will be replaced, without charge, F.O.B. Toronto. The machine will last a life time. It weighs about 650 pounds and takes up very little space in the shop.

The price is $150.00 F.O.B. Toronto. For further particulars address Julius E. Haase, 201 Church Street, Toronto, Ont.



Mr. Julius E. Haase, 201 Church street, Toronto, has now completed his No. 1 machine, which is guaranteed to upset all ordinary tires up to five eighths by three inches. This machine has in connection with it the most powerful and convenient hand power shear ever manufactured. This alone saves the blacksmith a considerable portion of the price asked for this machine. He can easily shear a 3/4 inch flat or 3/4 round or square soft steel or iron and will find the machine a great convenience for all time.

G. A. STIMSON & CO

The establishment of a branch in London, England, of the firm of G. A. Stimson & Company, under Canadian management, this year, is a very strong indication of the increased interest which is being manifested by English investors in the higher grades of Canadian securities.

While, of course, the firm of G. A. Stimson & Company have, in the very order of things, carried on a large English business for many years, the actual opening of an independent branch must of necessity bring them into the closest touch with the leading financial circles, in fact even during the short time since the English office was opened a surprisingly increased business has been consummated in that market.

This firm's offices in London are situated at 51 and 52 Cornhill E.C., hardly a stone's throw from the Bank of England.

While Stimson & Company make a specialty of dealing in high grade Municipal, Government and Corporation Bonds they are recently branching out into the industrial field as well, and have latterly been investigating Canadian proposals of this nature with a view to interesting English capitalists therein.

In connection with the above it is interesting to note that the firm of Stimson & Company was established in the early eighties, in fact with one or two exceptions, they are the oldest firm in Canada actively engaged in the Municipal and Government Debenture business.

Sailor Arrested on Charge of Murder

HENRY MATTHEWS IS ACCUSED OF STRANGLING DEAF MUTE TO DEATH IN COLBORNE HOTEL.

Is a Married Man With a Delicate Son—Evidence Showed that He Was in the Building About Time of Tragedy.

"It is the unanimous decision of the jurors that Josephine Brimacombe came to her death by strangulation at the Bristol Hotel, Sunday the 18th, between the hours of seven Saturday night and eight Sunday morning."

Colborne, Dec. 23.—At one o'clock this morning Henry I. Matthews, Jr., nicknamed "Son," faced a warrant charging him with murder, and the dramatic culmination of the mystery which has keyed this town to a fever of excitement since Sunday morning, was received by a crowded hall in absolute silence. Towards the last it seemed not entirely unexpected. For six solid hours the evidence brought out by County Crown Attorney Kerr at the inquest called in the Bijou Theatre into the unnatural circumstances surrounding the death of 43-year-old Josephine Brimacombe had gradually unravelled a thread of circumstantial evidence. Though the open verdict referred to no person, Matthews was detained. Everything hinged upon the testimony of Drs. Hutchinson and Hewson, who had performed the autopsy, and which evidence was withheld till the end of the session. This indicated conclusively that the woman met death by strangulation, and it was strongly opined that before this she was the victim of a brutal assault, which, as a deaf-mute, she was powerless to successfully resist. Twenty-four witnesses in all were heard, and according to several, some gurgling outcry had been made about eight in the evening, the sounds coming apparently from the room where the dead woman was found.

The Pullman Porters Miss Their Tips and Complain.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 26:—The good old days when Pullman porters could afford to sport diamonds and own automobiles are gone by, and the knight of the broom and brush is lucky nowadays if he has enough change left to enter a crap game after paying his necessary expenses. Such, at any rate, are the general views expressed by members of the Sleeping Car Porters and Car Service Men's Union, who are to hold a convention in Chicago this week to discuss the situation. The porters complain that during the past year or so their earnings have been steadily shrinking until they have almost reached the vanishing point. The newspaper humorists, with their jokes anent the Pullman porters and their wealth, are held partly responsible for the changed conditions. But the decrease in the size and number of the porters' tips are believed to be chiefly due to a change of sentiment on the part of the travelling public, who are inclined to rebel at the system by which the car companies seek to have the travellers pay the wages of their employees. As the porters see no way of increasing the liberality of the travellers they are considering steps to force the company to raise their wages so as to make up the loss in tips.

Husband will See Wife's Slayer Hanged

Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 23.—John Aihl, husband of the woman for whose murder Thomas Wayne, a negro, was found guilty at Quinnemont and sentenced to be hanged, arrived here this morning to witness the execution, which will take place in the Moundsville, W. Va., Penitentiary a few miles from here, late this afternoon.

"I would travel a thousand miles to see that man put to death," declared Aihl.

Letters to the Editor

LAKEFIELD PARK

Would Help to Make the Village Popular.

To the Editor of The Times

Sir:—I notice the ratepayers of Lakefield are to vote on a by-law to provide money for the purchase of a public park for the village. Let me say just here that I believe there never was a question of greater importance to the municipality than this, and it is to be hoped that the matter will be so regarded by the ratepayers. The location is ideal, and will be not only largely used by villagers, but also by excursion parties from outside places, who can come here both by water and rail. But what strikes me as one of the most important reasons why this splendid park should be secured, is that it will do more than anything else to popularize Lakefield as a summer resort. The tourist trade henceforth is sure to be larger, and a park is absolutely essential if we are to secure a share.

I hope, therefore, that the by-law will carry, as I am sure it will.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.

TOURIST.

Toronto, Dec. 22, 1910.

ANOTHER OPINION RE PARK.

To the Editor of the Times

Dear Sir:—I notice by a perusal of the Lakefield News, a copy of which has been lent to me, that the people of that village are being asked to vote on a by-law for the acquisition of Hague's Point, which is contiguous to Lakefield. As one who is far conversant with economic problems that are at present confronting inhabitants, I think that the Council is to be congratulated on the stand they have taken in the matter. There is not the least doubt in the world but, that Lakefield, which is undergoing one of the severest slumps in its history will some day recover its geographical position. Its natural advantages and the wide awake attributes of its leading men all alike, point to this eventuality. It would be a pity indeed if the cheese-paring policy of one or two of its citizens should carry weight enough to defeat the passage of the by-law. The wisdom of purchasing the grounds at the present time will soon be made apparent in more ways than one. Hague's Point is capable of being turned into one of the finest pleasure grounds of the province, to which steamboats from Peterborough as well as the railway can bring their respective loads of pleasure seekers. Once known as a pleasure resort, Hague's Point will become as popular as Idyl Wyld or Jutilee Point, and the crowds thus drawn will undoubtedly ensure to the benefit of Lakefield. It is earnestly to be hoped that the by-law will be passed by the citizens.

Yours

C. G. BRISTOWE.

MILLION FOR EMPLOYEES.

Chicago Business Men Make Costly Gift.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 24.—Following a custom that has become more general with each succeeding year, Chicago business concerns employing large numbers of men and women to-day will distribute considerable more than $1,000,000 in Christmas presents. Cash bonuses for faithful services, salary increases and shares of stock constitute the bulk of the gifts. The cash gifts to be distributed among the thousands of employees of the International Harvester Company amounted to $500,000, while the appropriation of Armour & Company for the same purpose amounted to about $300,000. The large department stores, the banks, and boards of trade firms are also liberal in their gifts to their employees this year.

THE ORANGE CHARGES PROVEN SEVEN SCHOOLS TO LOSE GRANT

ROMAN CATHOLIC PRAYERS AND CATECHISM IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Seven Grants Withheld—Inspectors of Four Counties Present Report to Education Department—Changes in Six Schools.

SCHOOL GRANTS WITHHELD.

No. 12, Finch, Stormont—Roman Catholic prayers and catechism.

No. 9, Caledonia, Prescott—The same.

No. 13 and 14, Caledonia and South Plantagenet—Roman Catholic religious exercises.

No. 1, Cambridge—Too much French teaching; Roman Catholic catechism; closed on holy days.

Nos. 12 and 11, Cambridge and Russell—Roman Catholic catechism; Roman Catholic teachers always employed.

No. 1, Cumberland—Roman Catholic prayers; too much French instruction.

No. 10, Clarence—Catechism taught at recess. Teachers has promised to stop.

The investigation carried on by the Educational Department into the charges made last spring by members of the Orange Order, that Roman Catholic teachings and practices were being carried on in Public Schools in Glengarry, Prescott, Russell and Stormont counties, has been concluded.

SEVEN MAY LOSE GRANTS.

As a result the Government grants have been withheld from seven schools where it was found that the law was being violated, and these will not be paid until proper assurances have been received from the trustees that the teachers are conforming to the regulations.

The charges that were laid before the Cabinet in the spring were supported by thirty affidavits secured by Rev. W. F. Allison, now a professor in the Methodist College Manitoba, who made a personal investigation. A delay was caused by one of the inspectors, Mr. McDiarmid, dying after he had completed his investigation, but before his report had been prepared.

DR. MERCHANT'S REPORT NOT READY.

The enquiry which is being prosecuted by Dr. Merchant, following upon the charges of Bishop Fallon, deals with the bi-lingual teaching, is entirely separate from this inquiry, which was made by the public school inspectors of these counties. Dr. Merchant's report, Sir James said, would not be ready for a month.

CLOSED ON HOLY DAYS.

The inspectors visited all the schools in the four counties. In many cases where the school was attended by both Protestants and Roman Catholics, the law was being violated, but the practices have ceased and the grant is recommended to be continued. Among these are:

No. 16, Roxborough, Stormont—Reading of Scripture was omitted.

No. 10, Lancaster, Glengarry—Catechism has been taught a quarter of an hour each day during school hours.

No. 14, Hawkesbury—Defective teaching of English and use of Roman Catholic prayers in the past years, but now there is a well qualified teacher, and the law is obeyed.

L'Orignal—Complaints of insufficient English taught and religious exercises contrary to law; inspector finds English fairly well taught; Roman Catholic prayers used, and the school closed on holy days three or four times a year. Trustees have undertaken to stop this and to observe the law.

Union 13 and 14, Plantagenet and Cambridge—This school now conducted according to law. Charge that two trustees ignore the third is true.

No. 16, Cambridge—Complaints of catechism in school hours, of children being allowed to go home at 2.30 p.m., and of poor English instruction; present teaching is doing fairly well, though English is still weak; no Protestant pupils attend this school; children of Form I. are allowed to go home at recess.

A PROSPEROUS WESTERN TOWN.

Fine Chance For Safe Investment in Real Estate.

Two years ago the town of Melville was not, yet today it boasts a population o 2500, which is rapidly increasing.

The town of Melville is a junction and divisional station of the Grand Trunk Pacific and is situated about half way between Winnipeg and Edmonton. It will also be the terminal of the Hudson Bay Railway, which is now completed from Melville to Camera, a branch line to Lethbridge, vig Regina, is now being constructed so that in the near future Melville will become an important junction and distributing point.

In fact two large concerns have already established branches at Melville and many more will undoubtedly follow their example. Owing to its extensive transportation facilities and the fact that it is situated in a splendid agricultural section, which will soon be developed, Melville will become a large manufacturing centre.

The rapid progress made by Western towns is well known and Melville is no exception to the rule.

In 1909 Melville's real estate was assessed at $521,360. In 1910 it had risen to $1,792,006, an increase in one year of 350 per cent, and, as the population is increasing by leaps and bounds the outlook is most encouraging.

The property offered by the Melville View Realty Co. of Winnipeg, Manitoba is only half a mile from the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway station and was selected with due reference to the trend of business and residence extensions must necessarily rise rapidly in value.

Real estate in a growing and prosperous locality is considered the best and safest investment that can be made, and it is those who take advantage of early prices that benefit most largely. Melville View is subdivided into lots 30x120 feet and upwards, and the prices at which they can be purchased today range from $50 to $100 each, with $10 extra for corner lots.

The terms are easy, being 20 per cent. cash, the balance $2.50 per lot, per month, with interest at 6 per cent. or 7 per cent. discount for all cash.

Those who wish to secure choice of location, should apply at once and we would direct their attention to the Melville View Realty Co., Winnipeg, Man., which appears on another page.

HAVE WARRANT TO ARREST HIM

Attempt to be Made To-day to Capture Young Man Terrorizing Harrow.

Harrow, Ont., Dec. 23.—The Harrow desperado, Hanlan Wright, who on Monday threatened the life of W. G. Wright, his uncle, if he did not give him five thousand dollars, did not interfere with any one else in the village, but has remained at his home ever since, armed with a rifle and two revolvers, and each morning has walked out across an old orchard back of his uncle's house, and the first two mornings came up and tried the back door, which the inmates kept bolted. Then he returned to his own house for the rest of the day.

New Outbreak of Terrorism in Russia

LOOKED FOR ALL OVER RUSSIA AS RESULT OF MEETING OF REVOLUTIONARIES.

Discontent With Church as Result of That Organization's Attitude Towards Late Count Tolstoi.

St. Petersburg, Via Frontier, Dec. 23.—A tremendous outbreak of terrorism is looked for all over Russia as a result of the meeting of revolutionaries known to have been held recently in Finland to arrange for taking advantage of the widespread discontent manifested in connection with the Church's attitude at the time of Count Tolstoy's death.

Socialistic, revolutionary, and labor organizations throughout the entire country have received notification to be ready for uprisings on short notice, and offers of arms and explosives from the terrorist group have been made. The outbreak is understood to be under the direction of the well known revolutionary, Savenkoff, who is said to have engineered the Grand Duke Sergius assassination and is known to have been a close friend, so long as he considered him loyal to the revolutionary movement, of the spy, Azef.

The police know more or less of the plot, but seem at a loss to put their hands upon the men concerned in it. Many arrests have been made here and in the Provinces, but in the main it is said they have failed to capture the individuals they sought, and the utmost anxiety prevails among the authorities concerning the outbreak.

THE BANK OF OTTAWA.

The 36th Annual Report Shows a Very Successful Year.

During the past year the Bank of Ottawa increased its dividend from 10 to 11 per cent., increased its paid up capital to $3,500,000, its rest account to $3,900,000 and its total assets to $43,654,000. These are the salient features of the 36th annual report of the bank, which was submitted at the annual meeting, held at the head office on December 21st. These evidences of the growth and prosperity are very gratifying to the shareholders and warrant them in extending congratulations to the general manager and the Board of Directors.

The net profits for the year ended 30th November, 1910, after deducting expenses of management, and other charges, amounted to $532,353, showing an increase of over $100,000 above those of the previous year. Strong evidence of the growth is shown by the increase in the total deposits, of some three and a half million. The current loans in Canada show an increase of almost $4,500,00, now having attained the sum of $29,421,000, thus indicating that the bank is doing its full share in meeting the growing commercial needs of the country.

During the year a number of branches were established at various places throughout the country. The Bank suffered a loss in the death of its former president, Mr. George Hay, and his place on the directorate was taken by Mr. H. F. McLachin.

4,880 Persons were Cruelly Tortured

Constantinople, Dec. 23.—The Bulgarian Deputy in the Turkish Parliament stated that no fewer than 4,880 persons were beaten or otherwise tortured during the recent disarmament campaign in Macedonia. Of these sixty-four were maimed for life and eleven died. The Albanian campaign was also marked by brutality, several chiefs being flogged in the presence of their wives. Evidently the Young Turk is not entirely changed as regards humanity from the old Turk. Much bitterness was expressed at the failure of the Government to obtain the loan on favorable terms from France, the extra cost in getting it from Germany being put at £300,000.

LAKEFIELD'S PROPOSED NEW PUBLIC PARK

RATEPAYERS TO VOTE ON BY-LAW ON JAN 2ND.

Three Thousand Dollars Necessary to Purchase Property—Will Help to Make Lakefield a Summer Resort.

The ratepayers of Lakefield are considering the advisability of purchasing the property known as Hague's Point for park purposes. The owners are asking $3000 for the property, and a by-law to provide for this amount will be submitted to the freehold electors, on January 2nd. There are some in every community who do not regard a proposal of this nature favorably, although all admit in this instance that park is needed and would be a valuable asset. The property is delightfully situated, and on account of its natural beauty, would attract many excursion parties as well as greatly assist in popularizing Lakefield as a summer resort. Public Parks have of late become a feature in every well-regulated community, Peterborough having no less than about half a dozen in different parts of the city. These places represent the lungs, as it were, of the community, as they provide suitable breathing places, where the citizens may rest and exercise in the open.

The Times, therefore, hopes that the good people of the pretty village will not fail to record their votes in favor of the purchase of this splendid property. Lakefield is one of the prettiest little towns in Canada, and with its many advantages, it should speedily develop. Her citizens have always been more than usually enterprising and progressive, and in this matter we believe they will not fail to maintain their good record.

Big Crowd to See The King Crowned

MORE BODIES IN THE RUINS

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 23.—With forty-three engine companies and a half a dozen trucks still fighting the fire at the stock yards, estimates of the dead in the Nelson Morris fire still run above thirty. Twenty-six men are positively known to be dead, fifteen members of the fire department are still missing, and it is reported that fully a dozen of the packing town laborers also met death in the flames.

At fire headquarters early to-day, it was stated that a final count would surely show more than thirty members of the department alone as victims of the disaster.

Three more bodies were removed from the ruins after daybreak to-day.

John P. Murphy, who was secretary to Chief Horan, said this morning there would be no opportunity for a complete roll call until late to-day. Twenty-one bodies, including that of Chief Horan, have been recovered, and it is known there are five others still buried in the debris.

Through the night fire was shooting high through the roof of the Morris buildings adjoining the one in ruins. Early to-day, though still burning, the fire was considered under control.

WARSAW.

Preparations Under Way for the Christmas Concerts.

The first good skating started last night, thanks to the rink committee we have excellent ice and good management. The next thing is our hockey team.

The preparations for the Christmas concerts in the Methodist and Presbyterian churches are fairly well under way. Mr. Stubbs of Peterborough will give the greater part of the Methodist concert and Mr. Smith of Toronto, the Presbyterian.

We think that less giving of presents to well off people at Christmas and a little more to the poor, who are always about us would be more sensible and Christmaslike.

On Tuesday evening St. Mark's held a very successful children's evening in the town hall. A short programme was rendered and lunch was served, the rest of the evening being spent by the children in games. Needless to say, they enjoyed themselves greatly. We think this a splendid idea and heartily second the originators in their work.

A special school meeting was held in the school on Tuesday evening. Important business was transacted.

Mr. Choate has put in place several new show cases which make an immense improvement.

Mr. Payne has his new store nicely fitted up.

Mr. Willkam Aikins has arrived from the West to spend the winter here. Mr. Aikins is greatly in love with the new country.

Mr. Waterman spent Sunday last as the guest of his sister at Indian River.

Mr. Norman Payne spent Sunday at Mr. Levi Payne's.

Quite a number of the young men in the vicinity are in the woods. Some of them make their appearance in the village regularly however.

On Thursday evening a most enjoyable dance was held at the home of Mrs. Luke Cooper. All present had a splendid time. Mrs. Cooper knows how to make her guests feel at home.

The village school has closed for the holidays and Mr. Waterman is leaving for his well-earned vacation.

MORE THAN 7,000 AMONG THEM THE COMMONERS, WILL BE ADMITTED TO ABBEY.

A Throne for Alexandra—Will be Similar to Queen Mary's and Will Be Placed at the Left of King's.

London, Dec. 23.—An interesting feature of King George's coronation will be the provision of a third throne for Queen Alexandra. This will be placed on the left of the King's coronation chair, Queen Marys being on the right. The two Queens' chairs will be identical in height, and each will be two steps lower than that of the King.

Westminster Abbey will be closed to the public from the middle of February, when it will be handed over to the Office of Works. When this takes place a complete transformation in the interior of the building will begin.

At the crowning of King Edward, at least 7,000 spectators were present. This number is likely to be considerably exceeded, since King George has ordered that accommodation shall be provided for members of the House of Commons and their ladies. Two tickets will be available for every member, and these will be issued early in the year. Each member of the House of Lords is entitled to a ticket for the ceremony, and another for his lady and these demands must be satisfied before any other claims are considered, even those of the foreign royalties or their representatives.

Extra accommodation will be provided by erecting galleries in the chapel of King Edward the Confessor, which commands an excellent view of the whole ceremonial. Similar galleries were built prior to the coronation of King Edward, but were not used, because it was feared that they might obstruct the view of distinguished visitors.

AN EXCELLENT PLAN.

The Canadian Government Annuities system which was approved by unanimous vote of Parliament in 1908, and is available to everyone, present exceptional advantages to the young or middle-aged, who are able to save over a considerable period to secure for their declining years an income free from all possible danger of loss or diminution, and at the lowest possible cost. If the person has a lump sum saved up which he or she should apply on account of the purchase, the cost for the remaining years would be reduced to a greater or smaller extent. According to the amount which was paid in the lump sum. For example, a man of 35 wishing to purchase an Annuity of $300 at 60 and having $500 in the Savings Bank which he could apply on account of the purchase in a lump sum could then complete his contract for an annual payment of $38.82, while if the $500 had not been paid, he would have had to make an annual payment of $71.04. In the event of his death before 60, his heirs would of course receive back the $500 as well as the annual payments with 3 per cent. compound interest, and if he became an invalid or disabled so that he could not earn a livelihood, and the amount that he had paid in would yield him an income of $50 or more, he could draw his Annuity at his then age, though he were under 55 or 60. This points out the advantage to a man or woman who has been saving up for the years when they are unable longer to work, of immediately transferring any amount, which they can spare to their account for the purchase of an Annuity. The amount, if left in the Savings Bank at 3 per cent would yield an income far short of the amount which might be required for their maintenance.

Information may be had at the Post Office, or of the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa, of the plan you may adopt to make this provision.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

hundreds of unhappy beings who thought until that moment they would be spared the dreadful fate that had befallen other stations.

Oddly enough, the high-born Brahmin who now saw his hopes of regal power in a fair way towards realization placed one act of soldierly courtesy to his credit before he made his name a synonym for all that is base and despicable in the conduct of warfare. He wrote a letter to Sir Hugh Wheeler warning the gallant old general that he might expect to be attacked forthwith. Perhaps it is straining a point to credit him with any sense of fair play. The letter may have been a last flicker of respect for the power of Britain, and inspired by a haunting fear of the consequences if the Mutiny failed. It is probable he wished to provide written proof of a plea that he was an unwilling agent in the clutch of a mutinous army. However that may be, he wrote, and never did letter carry more bitter disappointment to a Christian community.

Sir Hugh Wheeler having decided, most unfortunately as it happened, against occupying the strongly-built magazine on the river bank as a refuge, had constructed a flimsy entrenchment on a level plain close to the native lines. He was sure the sepoys would revolt, but he believed they would hurry off to Delhi, and he refused to give them an excuse for rebellion by seizing the magazine. Towards the end of May he wrote to Henry Lawrence at Lucknow for help, and Lawrence generously sent him fifty men of the 32nd and half a battery of guns, though even this small force could ill be spared from the capital of Oudh. Sir Hugh made one further mistake of crediting Nana Sahib's professions of loyalty. He actually entrusted the Treasury to the protection of the Nana's retainers. In spite of Lawrence's plainly-worded warning that the Brahmin's recent movements placed him under grave suspicion.

Nevertheless, Wheeler acted with method. His judgment was clear, if occasionally mistaken, and he had every reason to believe that the only attacks he would be called on to repel would be made by the bazaar mob.

On the night of June 4th, the thousand men, women and children who had gathered behind the four-foot mud wall that formed the entrenchment were left unmolested by the mutineers. During the day they watched the destruction of their bungalows, and knew that the rebels were plundering the city, robbing rich native merchants quite as readily as they killed any Europeans who were not under Wheeler's charge. Late that day came Nana Sahib's letter. It was a bitter disappointment, but "the valiant never taste death but once," and the Britons in Cawnpore resolved to teach the mutineers that the men who had conquered them many times in the field could repeat the lesson again and again.

About ten o'clock on the morning of the 6th, flames rose; from houses near at hand gave evidence of the approach of the rebels. Irregular spurts of musketry heralded the appearance of confused masses of armed men. A cannon ball crashed through the mud wall and bounded across the enclosure. A bugle sounded shrilly and the defenders ran to their posts. The wailing of women and the cries of frightened children helpless creatures only half protected by two barracks situated in the southern corner of the entrenchment, mingled with the din of the answering guns, and in that fatal hour the siege of Cawnpore began.

In the tear-stained story of humanity there has never been aught to surpass the thrilling record of Cawnpore. It contains every element of heroism and tragedy. Four hundred English soldiers, seventy of whom were invalids, with a few dozens of civilians and faithful sepoys—standing behind a breast-high fortification that would not stop a bullet—exposed to the fierce rays of an Indian sun—ill-fed, almost waterless, and driven to numb despair by the sufferings of their loved ones—these men, enduring all and daring all, held at bay four thousand well-armed, well-housed and well-fed troops for twenty-one days.

Not for a moment was the strain relaxed. Day and night the rebels poured into the entrenchment a ceaseless hail of iron and lead. Cannon-balls, solid and red-hot, shells with carefully arranged time fuses, and bullets from those self-same cartridges that the superfine feelings of Brahmin soldiers forbade them to touch, were hurled at the hapless garrison from all quarters. In the first week every gunner in the place was killed or wounded. Women and children were shot as though they were in the front line of defense. No corner was safe from the enemy's fire. Every human being behind that absurdly inadequate wall was exposed to constant and equal danger.

Here is an extract from Holmes's history:

"A private was walking with his wife when a single bullet killed him, broke both her arms, and wounded an infant she was carrying. An officer was talking with a comrade at the main guard when a musket-ball struck him; and, as he was limping painfully to the barracks to have his wound dressed, Lieutenant Mowbray Thomson of the 84th, who was supporting him, was struck also, and both fell helplessly to the ground. Presently, as Thomson lay woefully sick of his wound, another officer came to condole with him, and he too received a wound from which he died before the end of the siege. Young Godfrey Wheeler, a son of the General, was lying wounded in one of the barracks when a round shot crashed through the walls of the room and carried off his head in the sight of his mother and sisters. Little children, straggling outside the well, were deliberately shot down."

On the night of June the 11th a red-hot cannon-ball set fire to one of the barracks which was used as a hospital. The flames inspired the enemy's gunners to fresh efforts and provided them with an excellent target, yet the garrison dared all perils of gun-fire and falling rafters and masonary, while they rescued the inmates. It is on record that the gallant men of the 32nd, when the flames had subsided, though a heavy fusillade was still kept up by the rebels were seen raking the ashes in order to find their lost medals, the medals they had won in the deadly

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2.625 oz. of gold and 3.267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Mairs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derives from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $56,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

EARL OF LEITRIM

He Offers Every Encouragement to His Tenants

The Earl of Leitrim has always taken a deep personal interest in the management and improvement of his estate in Donegal, which covers 52,000 acres. He offers every encouragement to his tenants to avail themselves of the Land Purchase Acts, and to become owners of the land they till. Lord Leitrim, who is one of the largest landowners in the North of Ireland, is great-nephew to the third Earl, whose murder on his own estate caused so profound a sensation about thirty years ago. He succeeded to the title when a boy of thirteen. The Earl fought in South Africa with the Irish Yeomanry, and celebrated his majority in the Boer prison at Nooitgedacht.

THE CHILDREN AT THE GATE

I say that the world is bitter-sweet,
And its fortunes come too late;
But twilight falls with the pattering feet
Of the children at the gate.
And I know whatever my toil my be,
Their arms in the evening will necklace me!

I say that the world has stormy skies,
And faintly the sad stars shine;
But night brings stars when the children's eyes
Look tenderly into mine.
And I know, whatever my toil may be,
Those eyes are welcoming lights to me!

—Frank L. Stanton.

A VERY GOOD PRINCIPLE, TOO

My cardinal principle has been to avoid trouble.—Mr. Roosevelt.

THE CHOICE OF A WIFE

Jeremy Taylor very aptly summed up his opinion of the unwise choice of a wife in the following words: "A very fool is he that chooses for beauty principally; his eyes are witty, but his soul is sensual. It is an ill band of affection to tie two hearts together by a little thread of red and white."

These are indeed true sentiments and the man is both unwise and unlucky who merely selects his wife because she is a pretty girl. Prettiness alone never yet made for happiness, the girl who can be a true friend, a devoted companion and a loving wife is worth a great deal more to her husband than "the little thread of red and white" which the old-time divine condemns so strongly.

MISS BOTHA AS CARMEN

On the posting of bills advertising the appearance of General Botha's daughter as Carmen in an amateur operatic production at Johannesburg the South African Premier received shoals of letters from Dutch residents objecting to the performance as "ungodly." Miss Botha, therefore, decided not to appear.

COMPANIONS IN DEATH

Stricken by Illness, Girl Friends Die as They Wished, Together

Two coffins, covered with rich floral emblems, were lowered into one grave in the presence of a great mourning congregation near Carrick-on-Shannon, Leitrim. The scene closed the pathetic life-story of two inseparable girl companions, Bridget Reman and Mary Doherty. The girls, who were Roman Catholics, had grown up intimate friends and neighbors from childhood, and both were exceedingly popular in their district. But some time ago they both developed consumption. By a remarkable coincidence they were both attacked by the fatal disease about the same time, and it made equal progress with each of them. It took an incurable turn in both a month or so ago.

Recognising that they must prepare for death, the companions, who had just turned twenty years of age, expressed the wish that it might overtake both on the same day. They communicated with each other daily to the end, and believed that their wish not to be separated in life would be answered.

And the most remarkable fact in the history followed: both the girls passed calmly away at the same hour.

CARRIED 40,000,000 BRICKS

Edward Ashbee, an employe of the High Broom Brick Company, near Tunbridge Wells, holds the record of having carried considerably over 40,000,000 bricks on a wheelbarrow in the past thirty years. The weight of the bricks is estimated at nearly 130,000 tons, and in the course of his work he has walked nearly 55,000 miles.

BACON SHORTAGE

The bacon shortage, of which the first signs appeared at the beginning of 1909, has now reached such a pitch that one of the best authorities states that "the home industry is in danger of being destroyed," says the London Daily Mail.

The "pig population" of the world, for some reason, has suddenly decreased. The shortage began in the United States, which has contained, it is calculated, about half the hogs in the world. They now number over 54,000,000, as compared with 4,900,000 in the United Kingdom. The chief cause of the shortage is the decrease of the export from the United States, where the "pig population" has decreased by more than a million; and the export is further decreasing owing to increased consumption in the States.

The price of bacon, it is argued by some of the best of authorities, may rise as high as $18 a cwt. wholesale. A few years ago it was $12. It rose at the end of last year to $16 for the best Danish, which fetched the highest price, higher even than Irish. This expensiveness of bacon has very greatly reduced the consumption; but there is an unlimited market for moderately cheap bacon, and Mr. Loudon Douglas, who is one of the leading authorities on the industry, considers that there never was a better opportunity for the English farmer.

We spend, roughly, $100,000,000 each year for pig products from abroad, and yet in Great Britain the pigs decreased in 1909 by nearly 15 per cent. as compared with 1908, and reached the very small number of 2,380,000.

There is great activity in several foreign countries to fill the English market. The Chinese, among others, are making arrangements to send here cured hams and bacon. But the home market is being more and more neglected by English farmers and what was the standard food of the poorer class is now at an almost prohibitive price and threatens to rise further.

FIVE GENERATIONS

With a family of five generations alive and well, Mrs. Potter, of the village of Thundersley in Essex, England, is a proud old lady. She is in her ninety-eighth year, and still hale and hearty, but the most remarkable thing about her is that for thirty years she was totally blind, and at the end of that time her sight was restored. That was about thirteen months ago, and now she is able to see as well as ever. Her blindness followed on a severe attack of influenza and bronchitis. When asked how she recovered her sight, or by what treatment she benefited, she will say that no doctor and no treatment cured her, it was done simply by prayer. She remembered the New Testament stories of the power of faith, so she tried the same method, and found it successful.

Next in the family line comes Mrs. Wheel, her daughter, who is seventy-four years of age, a sturdy, splendid-looking woman, who seems effectually to have defied the ravages of time, for she is capable of a hard day's work still, and indeed looks as if she could do as much as a man. She has had fourteen children, of whom six are still living.

Her eldest daughter is Mrs. Finch, who is fifty-four years of age, and the youngest mother in the line is Mrs. Gosling, aged thirty-four, and the youngest representative of the family, shown in the photograph, is her son, aged eleven years.

The elder members of this remarkable family live in and near the village of Thundersley, in Essex, in the direction of Southend, which must be one of the most remarkably healthy spots in England. Mrs. Wheel's husband is still living there. He has lived in the same house for eighty-seven years!

Passing through the village one cannot help being struck with the number of old people, and, further, with their remarkably healthy and hearty appearance. Thundersley is evidently the place where old age pensioners thrive. Mr. and Mrs. Wheel and her sister are all in receipt of old age pensions.

BOUND BABY'S ARMS

Court Orders Imprisonment for an Inhuman Father

One month's hard labor was the sentence passed at Bolton, England, on John Anthony Johnson, a young laborer, of Benson Street, for cruelty towards his child. Mrs. Johnson said that before the child was born her husband ill-treated her.

"On one occasion did the baby in bed put its hand on its father's face?" asked the prosecuting solicitor.

"Yes, sir," replied Mrs. Johnson.

"And what did he do?"

"He got some string and tied its arms down to its body so that it could not move them."

"Liar!" exclaimed Johnson.

"Did you undo the string from the child's arms?"

"Yes."

"And what did he do then?"

"He thrashed me."

It was stated that the child only weighed six pounds, while the average weight of one of its age was eleven pounds, eight ounces. Mrs. Johnson was granted a separation order, carrying six shillings per week.

OYSTER TRUST

New York, Dec. 20. The oyster market is being cornered, and already 45 per cent. of the blue point beds are held by a so-called "oyster trust," according to a report current here to-day.

A company, which started in a modest way several years ago, has acquired thirty thousand under-water acres of oyster breeding territory along the eastern coast, and is gradually extending. The monopoly is setting a uniform price for all grades of bivalves.

MELVILLE

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many fold in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark?

Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of transportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constrdcted from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

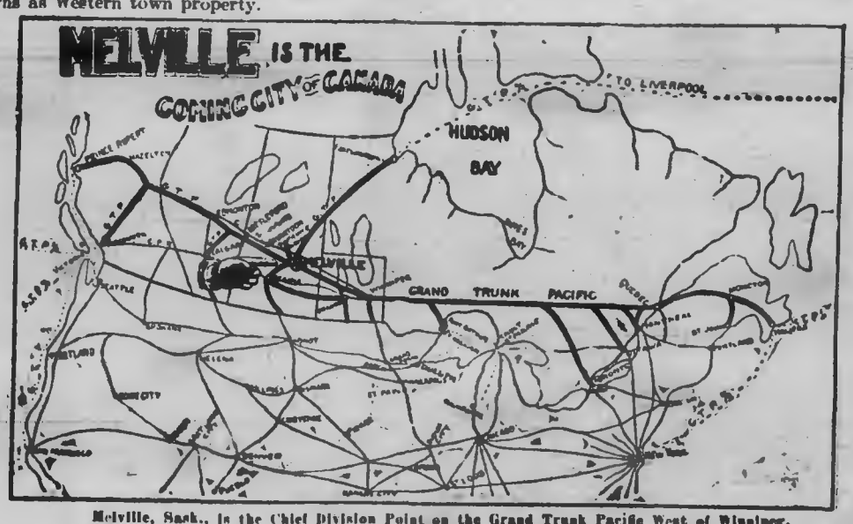
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by wsrehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enfoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West ol Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more promising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

SHOEBLACK TO OPERA SINGER

How a Notable New Tenor Was Discovered in Humble Life—He Delighted Mascagni

A new tenor who, it is quite possible, one day rank with the world's greatest singers, has appeared in London, England. This is Mr. B. Nevada Landino, who, like many an other famous vocalist, began life in a humble way. Mr. Landino, who is twenty-seven years of age, is a Russian Pole of Jewish extraction. His family emigrated years ago to Cleveland, Ohio, and young Barney earned his living by blacking boots and selling newspapers. On the Sabbath he sang in the Synagogue, for among the Jewish colony his naturally fine voice was much appreciated.

Presently young Landino went to work as a cigar-maker, and in that capacity met a girl who was also one day to be raised to a much higher position in the social scale—Rose Pastor, who subsequently married a millionaire, and devoted her time and money to the betterment of the conditions of her less fortunate sisters.

Miss Pastor often told Landino that with his beautiful voice he ought to make a name. He was anxious indeed to improve his condition, but who was to help him. At last, however, the editor of the Cleveland Press drew attention in an article called "A New Tenor" to Landino's abilities. This article attracted the attention of Mr. Alfred Arthur, director of the Cleveland School of Music, who sent for him and gave him lessons gratis.

Later on Landino drifted to New York. One day he was passing the Grand Opera House with a friend and saw that Mascagni was to conduct. "Now's your chance," said the friend; "go in and try your voice." Landino went, but he was terribly nervous. Mascagni, who was producing "Iris," was testing the voices of the singers. Landino, shy and afraid, was the last. When he had finished Mascagni slapped him on the back shouted "Bravo!" and there and then gave him a part.

For two years he worked hard under Emma Nevada in Milan, and that is how he comes by part of his name. She was so proud of her pupil that she wished it. The new tenor's repertoire embraces seventeen operas and one hundred songs, and he sings in four languages. He is a teetotaler and a non-smoker.

ABRUZZI'S STORY

The Young Eskimo Who Loved a Beautiful Maiden

The Duke of the Abruzzi is one of the most successful of living explorers, in which capacity he has had a fair share of adventures and hair-breadth escapes. During his North Pole expedition he had his right hand so severely frozen that two of his fingers had to be partially amputated. Another time during an ascent of the Ruwenzori range, as the Duke was making an observation in advance of his party, he slipped on a bank of loose stones and fell to the edge of an immense precipice, where he remained a prisoner for three hours. The Duke has picked up many interesting stories in the course of his various travels. Here is one of them, which he heard in the Far North. A young Eskimo loved a beautiful maiden whose father's hut was near his own, but, as is so often the case, the girl's parents would not hear of the match. One night a great storm ripped up a crevice in the ice, and between the two huts there yawned an abyss bridged only by a slender strip of ice. Here was the chance which the young lover sought. He crossed the frail bridge in the dead of night, and crept to the home of his sweetheart to steal her from her cruel father. The Eskimos sleep in bags of sealskin, and, with bated breath and loudly beating heart, he hoisted on to his back the one in which he thought his lady-love slumbered. He recrossed the strip of ice, and, safe on the other side, he broke it down with the blow of an axe, so that no one could pursue him save by the aid of a boat. Regaining his own hut he opened the bag to gaze upon the fair one, when, with a cry of horror, he staggered back dumbfounded, for, in his haste to get the affair over, he had stolen his sweetheart's father by mistake.

SCRAP DREADNOUGHTS

Remarkable Development in the Construction of Battleships

When his Majesty's battleship Dreadnought was launched in February, 1906, one had the feeling that finality had surely been reached in the matter of naval construction; but the navies of the world have been making giant strides ever since.

First came greater Dreadnoughts, and then Dreadnought cruisers, Boadicea scouts, and Tribal destroyers, entirely turbine-driven, followed by great steps in the use of oil-fuel.

And in the past few weeks several startling announcements have been put forward. Within a few days we had talk of motor-driven battleships, and a report of a coming small destroyer, of a height only 36 inches above the water, and with only two guns, but of such power and rapidity of fire that the money spent on Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts might as well have been thrown into the sea. These guns are to be of 17 inch bore, and will fire a weight of 6,832 pounds.

Nor must we forget the battleship cruiser Lion. She is more powerful than the most powerful Dreadnought, and faster than the fastest destroyer. The St. Vincent, the largest Dreadnought now in commission, has only 19,250 tons displacement, as against the Lion's 26,350 tons.

All That Is Left of Bradwardine, Man., is a Restaurant and a Drug Store.

Bradwardine, Man., Dec. 22.—Fire started in Ortenburg's store this morning at 2.45 and burned the whole of the business portion of the town. Ortenburg's general store, F. and J. Fields hardware, the Massey-Harris warehouse, Bank of Hamilton, R. Commer's general store, and the Beaver lumber office and lumber yard were destroyed. The only business places left are a restaurant and a drug store.

A DARING EXPLOIT

A Skilful Manoeuvre by Sir Archibald Hunter

The fact that Sir Archibald Hunter is with one exception the youngest officer of his rank in the Army, is sufficient proof of his soldierly qualities and his fighting skill, and he has well deserved the Governorship of Gibraltar which has been conferred upon him. He joined the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment thirty-six years ago, at eighteen. At twenty-nine he was a brevet-major, and at forty a full-fledged major-general. "Hunter's rag" it was that waved in the forefront of every battle during the last arduous campaign on the Nile, while the man whom it represented was known as "the point of the Sirdar's spear." One of Sir Archibald's most daring exploits was performed one dark night while at Ladysmith, when the General, with a little band of volunteers, crept over one of the surrounding hills and blew the head off a mischievous Long Tom. He led all the way on the dangerous task, surprised and overcame the Boers, and crippled the gun. Sir Archibald is one of the few British military officers to enjoy the personal friendship of the German Emperor, whom he once saved from a serious accident. During a visit of the Kaiser to Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny a few years ago, General Hunter was in command of the troops in Scotland, and was present in that capacity on the station platform to welcome the Emperor. Lord Rosebery's carriage was waiting, and, the Emperor had just taken his seat in it when one of the horses commenced to plunge violently, and in another moment the pair would have bolted. Like a flash, however, General Hunter reached the animal and dealt it a smashing blow on the nose that quickly quieted it. Another pair of horses were soon secured, and Sir Archibald received the hearty thanks of the Kaiser for the smart way he grappled with the situation. Since that time he has been very popular with the Emperor, who never forgets a service, and he shares with Lord Roberts the distinction of being the only non-German soldier who has a standing invitation to visit the Royal palace at Potsdam.

ANTI-FASHION LEAGUE

The Objects of a New Organization Formed in New York

An anti-fashion league has just been started in New York with the highly praiseworthy object of combating the spread of the ridiculous fashions and crazes adopted by the very rich among less well-to-do people says M. A. P.

There is certainly plenty of work for such an organization to do here. Women who can with difficulty afford to spend as much as thirty or forty pounds a year on their dress, but yet insist on wearing hobble skirts, yards of hat, gloves up to their shoulders, and similar absurdities—made fashionable for a moment by women who can afford to spend a thousand a year with their modistes and milliners—ought to be objects of special attention from the anti-fashion league.

Then there are various fashionable cults, the spread of which an anti-fashion league would be doing good work by combating. For example, the cult of expensive pets in the way of cats, dogs, mice, and lizards of rare type and breeds is all very well for women who can afford to pay five hundred pounds for such a pet without missing the money, but when Mrs. Brown of Balham starts imitating their example by spending twenty or thirty pounds on some wretched animal probably not worth as many shillings, she badly needs some plain words of advice from an anti-fashion league.

MACHINE THAT "THINKS"

Sticks on Stamps and Politely But Firmly Refuses Foreign Coins

A machine which thinks, or at any rate discriminates, is being installed by the Post Office in London, England, and one has a vision of the crowds who will flock to it when duly attached to the corner lamp-post, for the purchase of forgotten postage-stamps on Sunday evenings.

Affixing postage-stamps by the natural process has never been either a pleasant or a wholesome practice; here is a machine which not only delivers a stamp for a penny, but obligingly sticks the stamp on the envelope for the purchaser.

Fraudulent lead discs it flings contemptuously into its interior; foreign coins it returns with the courteous assumption that the depositor has made a pardonable mistake.

With fair treatment the automaton is ready to do the fair thing by the purchaser, and to do it at the terrific rate of 4,000 stamped envelopes per hour. It will stamp newspaper wrappers, and at the same time register the number of stamps used, and it will stamp your letters up to 50,000 at a time. All you have to do is to put 50,000 pennies in a slot and press a knob 50,000 times.

THE LARGEST CRAB

The largest crab in the world, a specimen of the giant spider crab from Japan, is at the Museum of Natural History, New York. The spread of the two largest legs, or arms, having sawlike teeth, called "pincers," is nearly twelve feet, and the body portion is over one foot in diameter and about the size of a large dinner-plate. The monster crab inhabits the sea and islands of Japan, and is known to occur at depths of over two thousand feet.

WHAT FEW REALIZE

There is a time when one looks towards forty as the fringe of the Arctic zone of life. No one realizes that there is a broad temperate belt of middle age, wherein men can labor hard, long, and fruitfully.—Mr. Lloyd George.

G. A. STIMSON & CO.

The establishment of a branch in London, England, of the firm of G. A. Stimson & Company, under Canadian management, this year, is a very strong indication of the increased interest which is being manifested by English investors in the higher grades of Canadian securities.

While, of course, the firm of G. A. Stimson & Company have, in the very order of things, carried on a large English business for many years, the actual opening of an independent branch must, of necessity, bring them into the closest touch with the leading financial circles, in fact even during the short time since the English office was opened, a surprisingly increased business has been consummated in that market.

This firm's offices in London are situated at 54 and 55 Cornhill, E.C., hardly a stone's throw from the Bank of England.

While Stimson & Company make a specialty of dealing in high-grade Municipal, Government and Corporation Bonds, they are recently branching out into the Industrial field as well, and have latterly been investigating Canadian proposals of this nature with a view to interesting English capitalists therein.

In connection with the above, it is interesting to note that the firm of Stimson & Company was established in the early eighties, in fact with one or two exceptions, they are the oldest firm in Canada actively engaged in the Municipal and Government Debenture business.

EIGHT DOGS POISONED.

Some Miscreant at Work Again in This City.

No less than eight dogs, some of them valuable animals and most of them pets, were poisoned within a week by some mean rascal. Messrs. Mark Shaw and James Downing each had a valuable dog poisoned last Thursday morning.

A pet of the men at the Peterborough Radial Railway car barns was also destroyed.

LAKEFIELD CANOE FACTORY IS BURNED.

Building and Contents Completely Destroyed.

About 10 o'clock yesterday morning flames were discovered issuing from the Lakefield Canoe Factory by Mr. Lawless of the Lakefield House. The fire started in the rear of the building and had made considerable headway before being seen. As the building and contents were of a most inflamable character the fire spread with great rapidity.

The volunteer fire brigade promptly responded to the call but in spite of their energy were unable with their small facilities to do anything to check the conflagration. By their well-directed efforts, however, they were able to save the residence of Mr. Wigg, which is next to the factory and which was threatened with distruction.

There was an insurance of $7,000 on the building and contents, but that will not cover the loss. It is probable that the company will rebuild and continue the business.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

VOL XXXIII NO. 293 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, MONDAY DECEMBER 26, 1910 PRICE TWO CENTS

Great Excitement Attended Passing of "Padlock" Bill

Madrid, Dec. 23.- After a stormy all night session the Chamber of Deputies to-day passed the Government's "Padlock Bill" by a vote of 108 to 20.

This is a notable victory for Premier Canalejas, obtained after a bitter fight involving not only the opposition of Spain, but the Vatican, whose seal of disapproval was set upon the legislation even before it had been submitted to the Cortes.

As originally drawn the bill prohibited the creation of further religious establishments in the country until the revision of the concordat has been completed or definite laws on the subject passed. In the Senate the Government accepted the amendment of Baron Sacre Mario, limiting the period of interdiction against new congregations to two years. The Senate passed the measure on November 4, the vote being 149 to 53. The majority in the Upper Chamber was greater than had been anticipated. Its passage in the lower House had been expected.

The objection to the measure by the Holy See was based on the contention that, whereas negotiations were under way for the revision of the concordat of 1851, Spain could not, in good faith, adopt any legislation adversely affecting the congregations until these negotiations had been concluded. It was claimed that in the meantime the status quo should be maintained.

Canalejas insisted upon a program of religious liberty and maintained that the matter covered by the "Padlock Bill" was not properly a subject of diplomatic exchanges between Madrid and Rome. In this attitude he has appeared to have the support of King Alfonso. Much bitterness was engendered, and Canalejas, himself an avowed Catholic, bore the brunt of the clerical opposition.

PHYSICALLY EXHAUSTED.

The final fight was waged until the deputies were pretty well exhausted physically. Amendment after amendment was voted down. At seven o'clock this morning Canalejas intervened and in a strong speech disclaimed any hostility upon the part of the Government toward the religious orders. He insisted nevertheless upon the necessity of passing the bill in order that the Government might resume complete negotiations with Rome.

Snor Salaberry, the integralist, responding, declared that the Opposition would fight to the bitter end, but Vasquez Mella Y. Candido, leader of the Carlists, finally surrendered saying that he did so out of pity for the stenographers, after, however, registering a final protest on behalf of the Pope, who, he said, would be grieved greatly.

The final vote was taken at 9.30 o'clock, after which the Chamber adjourned.

Eight Persons were Burned to Death

PASSENGER TRAIN FILLED WITH CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY MAKERS WRECKED.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng., Dec. 24.—Eight passengers were burned to death to-day in a fire which followed the head-on collision of a passenger train and two locomotives on the North-Eastern Railroad near Kirby Stephen.

As the engines crashed together, the fire in the locomotives set the wreckage afire and it blazed up, incinerating the bodies of the imprisoned passengers. Among the victims was a child of tender years whose screams were heard for nearly half an hour before life became extinct.

FORTY-SEVEN INJURED.

Forty-seven persons were injured, many of them being severely scalded by escaping steam.

The train was running at a high rate of speed when the disaster took place. The fore cars of the train crumpled up and the wooden cars were smashed to kindling wood.

PETERBOROUGH POST OFFICE.

To be Enlarged and Improved—Contract Awarded.

The contract for building an addition to the local post office and certain improvements has been awarded to Messrs. Rose & Hickey at a trifle over $8,000. Seven tenders were received, the highest figure being near $11,000. Contractors, like doctors, seem to differ.

XMAS DINNER CAME HIGH.

Plenty of Fowl Offered But Prices Away Up.

There was a very large inside market on Saturday, and it was crowded with buyers, or at least those who wanted to buy if they could stand the prices asked. No self-respecting turkey would look at less than $2.50 and many of them held out for $3 or $4. Geese were more moderate in their demands and changed owners for $1.50 to $1.75 each.

Chickens brought 50c to 75c each.

There was a great difference in the price asked for eggs. Forty cents a dozen being asked by some, while others were content with 30c.

Mannerless Children

That Is Earl Grey's Opinion of Some In Ontario.

Toronto, Dec. 26—"You children in manners."

So said Earl Grey, Governor General of Canada, when addressing a gathering of influential citizens in the City Hall here, relative to the Boy Scout movement, of which he is the Chief Scout for Canada. Arrangements were made for central organization for Canada.

This Town Bars Negroes.

Clinton, Okla., Dec. 26.—The citizens of Butler, Okla., have organized to prevent negroes from living there. Members of a citizens' organization have visited all homes where negro servants are employed, and livery stables and other places where negroes have been working, and ordered all negroes to leave town on the first outgoing train.

The organization furnished free transportation for negroes' baggage to the station. One citizen who keeps several negro servants was told when he protested that he could leave town with the negroes, but that they could not remain. When the first outgoing train started to-day the "Jim Crow" coaches looked like an excursion train.

C. P. R'S. WHEAT LINE FROM GEORGIAN BAY TO TIDEWATER

Contract Let for Thirty-Eight Miles From Cold-Water Junction to Bethany--- The Line will be Standard, Especially as to Grade

Toronto Dec. 26.—The Canadian Pacific has, for some years now, been working on a wheat line from Victoria Harbor, Georgian Bay, to tidewater at Montreal. It must be an absolutely standard line, especially as to grades. It completed the first of three sections when it double-tracked the line from Montreal to Smith's Falls. This is now standard. The second section to be taken up was from Victoria Harbor (the Georgian Bay port) to Bethany, a dozen miles this side of Peterborough on the Toronto-Montreal line. This section is about 86 miles. There is any depth of water at Victoria Harbor, and elevator accommodation for ten million bushels of grain already erected. This section runs through Orillia and Lindsay to Bethany. The Toronto Construction Co. had the contract for the first fifty miles and have the work well forward. Two days ago they signed a contract with Mr. T. S. Ins is and Mr. D. A. Decks, for the remaining 38 miles to Bethany.

RECONSTRUCTING 140 MILES.

The remaining section, from Bethany to Smith's Falls, involves the construction of 140 miles of main line (Montreal-Toronto) with double tracks, new grades, diversions, etc. The surveys for all this new work have been completed and some of it is now under way. It is Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's policy to complete it all by next year's crop if at all possible. In the meantime, this grain can come by the Sudbury line to Toronto, and thence to Montreal.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy said not long ago that he hoped to move 50,000 bushels in one train on this wheat line, and his proposition is to carry the grain by rail from the prairies to Port Arthur, to tranship it there to boats direct to Victoria Harbor, and by the new line that he is building to rail it to Montreal by Smith's Falls. This new improvement from Victoria Harbor to Bethany gives the best grade and the highest class of construction that has yet been built on any portion of theCanadian Pacific.

BETTER THAN CANALS.

An illuminating comment was made the other day by an independent engineer of national reputation, when he said that, in his opinion, better than any Ottawa ship canal or a New Welland Canal, as far as the transportation of the grain of the Canadian West was concerned, would be a four track railway with a 4-10 of one per cent. grade from the Georgian Bay to tidewater and Montreal. Such a four track road, he said, could carry the grain for less than any canal, would be available for every day in the year and would handle much more than any waterway that could be constructed.

If this view is correct it shows how near Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's policy is to get right up to the top of the transportation of the grain of the West, for evidently that is the object on which his grain road is based. Those who know Sir Thomas know that he knows what he is about and he knows a good deal about the transportation question as well.

TWO FAST EXPRESS TRAINS COLLIDE

SIX PERSONS KILLED, TWELVE WOUNDED IN A BAD WRECK.

Two Engineers are Dead—Steel Pullmans Smashed While Fire Added to Horror of the Situation—Both Engines Demolished.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio, Dec. 24.—Six were killed and twelve seriously injured in a head-on collision between westbound passenger train No. 25 and eastbound express No. 48, eight miles east of here on the Pennsylvania lines early this morning.

Both engines were completely demolished. The first Pullman of the westbound train was completely telescoped between the engine and the other steel Pullmans behind it. It was filled with passengers.

GERMANY WILL INCREASE ARMY

IN 1915 THE KAISER WILL HAVE A STANDING ARMY OF 515,321 MEN.

Prussia Will Contribute the Greater Part of the 9,482 Additional Men —cost of Increases $26,050,000.

Berlin, Dec. 24.—The Berlin "Lokalanzeiger" has been provided with a summary of the forthcoming bill for increasing the strength of the German army. The present strength of the peace footing of the army was fixed in 1905 at 505,839 men. This number will be gradually increased during the new quinquennate until 1915 it reaches 505,321 men. Of this total increase of 9,482, just over 7,000 men fall to Prussia and the Prussian contingent will thus be increased to a total of 399,026.

GERMANY'S BIRTH-RATE DECLINING

Last Year's Rate Thirty-Three Per Thousand—Sociologists Alarmed.

Berlin, December 24.—As the result of computations recently completed it is found that the birth rate in Germany is showing a marked tendency to decline, and sociologists are anxiously drawing attention to the menace of race suicide.

Last year's birth rate for every 1,000 of population throughout the Empire was only thirty-three, as against thirty-six for the decade ending with 1890, and forty-two per 1,000 in 1875.

The decline is attributed partly to the increasing reluctance of prosperous persons, especially in the cities, to accept the burden of raising large families. The unfavorable showing is causing some concern among the statisticians who point out that a continuance of this rapid decline in the birth rate would bring Germany ere long to the condition of France, where the population has ceased to increase.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR RECIPROCITY

Washington Correspondent of Tribune so Declares—Outlook Extremely Hopeful, His Belief.

New York, December 24.—The Tribune's Washington correspondent says:

In preparation for negotiations on Canadian reciprocity, President Taft held an extended conference yesterday with Secretary Knox and Chandler Anderson, Counsellor of the State Department, who was recently appointed to the place made vacant by the death of Mr. Henry M. Hoyt.

Prospects for a successful issue of the negotiations are brighter at present than they have been at any other time since the subject was brought up in connection with the tariff agreement by which Canada obtained the minimum rates under the Payne Aldrich law. So far, no serious obstacles have arisen. President Taft's efforts to pave the way for negotiations have been unusally successful, and there has been much evidence of responsive feeling in Canada.

The negotiations will be taken up directly with the Canadian representatives early in January in Washington. Mr. Anderson has been giving most of his time to the question, as the carrying on of investigations, was interrupted by the death of Mr. Hoyt. The conference yesterday was for the purpose of gathering up the loose ends and mapping out the loose covered by the agreement.

Rome, December 24.—The members of the College of Cardinals called on the Pope to day and offered the usual Christmas gifts. His Holiness thanked them for their presents. He said chaffingly that he would not talk politics.

The Holy Father expressed satisfaction that the question of the age at which children should receive their first communion had been settled. He also announced that the first volime of the Code of the canon law would be issued in 1911.

KIPLING HANDS OUT SOME ADVICE

NOTED ENGLISH AUTHOR URGES MEDICINE HAT TO CLING TO THE OLD NAME.

Hell for a Basement—The Only City Capable of Giving the Continent Cold Feet, He Says.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Dec. 24.—The chances are that Medicine Hat, the town where the weather comes from, will struggle along through life without changing its name, even if the words "Medicine Hat" are not alluring at the top of a prospectus.

Hearing that the village was considering changing its name, Rudyard Kipling, the great English author, has written a characteristic letter to friends here urging them to stick to the translation of the old Cree Indian name.

Kipling declares the citizens ought to stick proudly to the name of the town that "has all hell for a basement" and "the only city officially recognized as capable of freezing out the United States, and giving the continent cold feet."

"Believe me," said Kipling, "the very name is an asset and as years go on will become more and more of an asset. It has no duplicate in the world, it makes men ask questions, and as I know more than twenty years ago, draws the feet of young men toward it."

USED CHLOROFORM TO RELEIVE PAIN

Syracuse, N.Y., Dec. 23.—With a handkerchief saturated with chloroform over her face and an empty vial by her pillow, Iva May Sheldon, aged 28, was found dead in a rooming house by her sister shortly after midnight last night.

Emma Sheldon, the sister explained that the dead girl had complained of a headache, and had been in the habit of using chloroform to relieve the pain. The vial, which was found empty, had evidently been carelessly laid by the pillow, and the cork being securely fastened had dropped out, causing the contents to saturate the pillow and bringing immediate death to the victim.

Miss Sheldon had lived in Buffalo until a short time ago, when she came here to accept employment in a hat factory.

The Mysterious New York Trunk Murder

Toronto, Dec. 26.—The most mysterious of New York "trunk mysteries" has developed an added interest in Toronto. William Lewis is the man wanted by the New York police for the murder of a man whose mummified body was hermitically sealed in a trunk which had been left by Lewis at the house of Phillip Meagher, at 536 West 47th street, in 1902, and which is believed to be that of a friend of Lewis, a French artist named Collier.

It now develops that this man is a brother of Patrick Lewis, employed at the city registry office here. Mr. Lewis first heard of the mystery through a clipping from a Dublin paper which was sent him by his father at Roscrae, Ireland. In this the father declares his belief that the body found in the trunk was that of his son, and he suspects the good faith of Meagher, who came from the same part of Ireland.

Mr. Lewis told of the matter to Peter Ryan, registrar for the eastern division of the city, and Mr. Ryan wrote to the New York police, giving what information Mr. Lewis had to impart, and asking for particulars of the case. He received no answer, for the New York police immediately communicated with the local authorities, informing them that they held a warrant for the brother's arrest.

Mr. Lewis said that he believed that it was his brother's body which had been found in the trunk, and that he was not the murderer. He says that the last time he heard from his brother was about 12 years ago, when he was working for a granite firm in New York and was going with his employer to the Klondyke. He says that his brother wrote to his father about seven years ago, saying that he was going to Ireland, but he never went, and has not been heard of by any member of the family. He says also that Miss Enright, the trained nurse to whom his brother was to be married in January, 1905, was at their father's home about six or seven years ago.

HIS DISAPPEARANCE.

William Lewis disappeared from New York on January 11, 1906, the day set for his marriage with Miss Enright. She saw him the night before, when he told her that nothing should interfere with their wedding. The next day he got a letter at the place where he had been boarding and seemed much perturbed. He left the house saying that he was going to be married and was not again seen as far as has been learned. He left a note for his best man saying that the wedding had been postponed but sent no word to the waiting sweetheart.

Hamor Greenwood for Asquith Cabinet

London, Dec. 24.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that Hamar Greenwood, M.P. succeeds Partington in the office of junior lord of the treasury. It is anticipated that Greenwood has secured a sufficiently safe seat in Sunderland to hazard his re-election.

Originally the lord high treasurer, the third of the great officers of state had the appointment of all officers employed in collecting the revenues of the crown, the nomination of all escheators in charge of estates reverting to the sovereign and the leasing of all crown lands. This last of his duties is now discharged by the department of woods and forests. Since the days of George I., the duties of the lord high treasurer have been executed by commissioners consisting of the first lord of the treasury, the chancellor of the exchequer and three lords commissioners usually called junior lords. The treasury has control over the management collection and expenditure of the public revenues and exercises a general supervision over all the public departments, and no increases in salaries, or additions to or material changes in the civil establishments can be made without its authority.

There are nine members of the British Parliament in the treasury department, seven of whom are under salary. They are:

The prime minister, salary £5000.
His private secretary, unpaid.
Chancellor of the exchequer, salary £5000.
Private secretary, unpaid.
His private secretary, unpaid.
Three junior lords, of which Mr. Greenwood is one, salary £1000.
Financial secretary, salary £2000
Patronage secretary, salary £2000.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES.

At St. John's Church—Special Music For the Occasion.

At the morning service at St. John's Anglican Church, the sermon was preached by the Rev. Canon Davidson, rector of St. John's.

In the course of the sermon he referred particularly to the immense increase in the number of Christmas gifts made this year, which showed how remarkably prosperous the country had been for a long time past and for which we ought to be particularly thankful.

The anthem, "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," was beautifully rendered by the choir, as well as the one, "When Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," which was sung during the offertory.

A special service for the children was held in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Canon Davidson addressed the little ones, explaining to them the reason presents were given at Christmas. He also took occasion to thank the children for decorating the church, even some of the smaller ones having made the garlands that were entwined round the pillars.

At the evening service two Christmas carols rendered by the choir were much enjoyed by the congregation.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

We wish our readers, one and all a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

A STRONG ADDRESS.

Mr. Donald Macmaster, who practiced law in Montreal for many years, and who was counted amongst our most brilliant lawyers, entered the British House of Commons last January as Unionist members for the Northwestern or Chertsey Division of Surrey. He has been re-elected by acclamation. His address to the electors after the dissolution was a model of terse and effective political pleading. National safety and the Preservation of British Commerce he placed first in importance. He stood for the maintenance of the Constitution. "sane" fiscal regulations and reform of the land laws to enable tenant farmers to acquire small holdings in ownership, state aided if necessary. Mr. Macmaster sees the success of Mr. Wyndham's Land Purchase Act in Ireland, and looks for similar legislation in England. The address dealt at some length with the constitutional question and complained of the dissolution as being utterly unwarranted. The Parliament Bill was not passed even by the Commons and the Lords had no opportunity to discuss it. The charge that the Lords were blocking progress vs legislation was said to be unfounded and unjust. Mr. Macmaster contrasted the veto proposals with the Rosebery plan for House of Lords reform, a policy endorsed by the Unionists. A few bitter flings at the Government for truckling to Mr. Redmond and his party of disunion concluded a document which for its clearness and definiteness is one of the most effective statements issued during the election.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

fighting that preceded the fall of Sevastopol.

On the next day the sepoy army, though so boastful and vainglorious, dared to make their first attempt to carry the entrenchment by assault. By one bold charge they must have crushed the defenders, if by sheer weight of numbers alone. They advanced, with fiendish yells and much seeming confidence. But they could not face those stern warriors who lined the shattered wall. After a short but fierce struggle they fled, leaving the plain littered with corpses.

So the safer bombardment was renewed, its fury envenomed by the conscious disparity of the besiegers when they tried to press home the attack. Each day the garrison dwindled; each day the rebels received fresh accessions of strength. Of the few guns mounted in the British position, one had lost its muzzle, another was thrown from its carriage and two were so battered by the enemy's artillery that they could not be used. The hospital fire had destroyed all the surgical instruments and medical stores, so the wounded had to lie waiting for death, while those who still bore arms eked out existence on a daily dole of a handful of flour and a few ounces of split peas.

Yet the men of Cawnpore fought on, while their wives and sisters and daughters helped uncomplainingly, making up packets of ammunition, loading rifles for the men to fire, and even giving their stockings to the gunners to provide cases for grape-shot.

There was only one well inside the entrenchment. Knowing its paramount importance, the rebels mounted guns in such wise that a constant fire could be kept up throughout the night on that special point. Yet there never was lacking a volunteer, either man or woman, to go to that well and obtain the precious water. It remains to this day a mournful relic of the siege, with its broken gear and shattered circular wall, while the indentations made by such of the cannon balls as failed to dislodge the masonry are plain to be seen.

The sepoys spared none. Tiny children, tottering to the well in broad daylight, were pelted with musketry. Conceivably that might be war. When beleaguered people will not yield humanity must stand aside and weep. There was a deed to come that was not war, but the black horror of abomination, worthy of the excesses of a maneating tiger, though shorn of the tiger's excuse that he kills in order that he may live. The well in the entrenchment was the Well of Life. There was another well in Cawnpore destined to be the Well of Death.

If proof were needed of the extraordinary condition of India during the early period of the Mutiny, it was given by an incident that occurred soon after the first assault was beaten off. In broad daylight, while the garrison were maintaining the unceasing duel of cannon and small arms, they were astounded by the spectacle of a British officer galloping across the plain. He was fired at by the sepoys, of course, but horse and man escaped untouched and the low barrier was leaped without effort. The newcomer was Lieutenant Bolton of the 7th Cavalry. Sent out from Lucknow on district duty he was suddenly deserted by his men, and he rode alone towards Cawnpore, the nearest British station. Unhappily the story of that adventurous ride is lost for ever. Poor Bolton supplied Cawnpore's last reinforcement.

Sir Hugh Wheeler, ably seconded in the defense by Captain Moore of the 32nd, sent out emissaries, Eurasians and natives, to seek aid from Lucknow and Allahabad, the one about thirty five, the other a hundred miles distant. Lawrence wrote "with a breaking heart" that he could spare no troops from Lucknow. The messengers never even reached Allahabad.

On June 23 the Nana's hosts again nerved themselves for a desperate attack, and again were they flung off from that tumble-down wall. Then, all their valor fled, they fell back on a foul device. A white woman, Mrs. Henry Jacobi, who had been taken prisoner early in the month, crossed the plain holding a white flag. Wheeler and Moore and other senior officers went to meet her. She carried a letter from Nana Sahib, offering safe conduct to Allahabad for all the garrison "except those who were connected with the acts of Lord Dalhousie."

Now Dalhousie resigned the viceroyalty in February, 1856. It was he who had refused to continue to Nana Sahib the Peishwa's pension; assuredly there was none in Cawnpore responsible for the acts of a former viceroy. At any rate, whatsoever the curious reservation meant, the majority of the staff were opposed to surrender. Unfortunately Captain Moore, whose bravery was in the mouths of all, who, though wounded and ill, had been "the life and soul of the defense," persuaded Sir Hugh Wheeler and the others that an honorable capitulation was their sole resource. Succor could not arrive, he argued, and they were in duty bound to save the surviving civilians and the women and children.

So an armistice was agreed on to June 26, and representatives of both sides met to discuss terms. It was arranged that the garrison should evacuate their position, surrender their guns and treasure, retain their rifles and a quantity of ammunition, and be provided with river transport to Allahabad.

The Nana asked that the defenders should march out that night. Wheeler refused.

"I shall renew the bombardment, and put every one of you to death in a few days," threatened the Brahmin.

"Try it," said the Englishman. "I still have enough powder left to blow both armies into the air."

But the Nana meant to have no more fighting on equal terms. He signed the treaty, the guns were given up, and, on the night of June 26th peace reigned within the ruined entrenchment.

Next morning that glorious garrison quitted the shot-torn plain they had hallowed by their deeds. And even the rebels pitied them. "As the wan and ragged column filed along the road the women and children in bullock-carriages or on elephants, the wounded in palanquins, the fighting men on foot, sepoys came clustering

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.C. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields,

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,200 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Maire, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks. The one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

AN OLD PROSPECTOR

Around the British Empire in the Hunt For Gold

Brown visaged, with keen, observant eyes and an active form, Mr. Robert P. Banner, one of the men who have prospected for and mined gold in most parts of the Empire, is now in London.

"I had a good deal to do with the natives," Mr. Banner says, "especially those from Lake Mitsani and Nyassaland. They told me of a people who were there in the days of their forefathers, with whom, as their legends declare, they fought a great war. They say they were not white people, and from their general description I should think they were Arabs.

"We found many curious things, indicating beyond dispute an ancient civilization. For instance, at one place where I was prospecting we broke into gold workings that must have been thousands of years old. There were great masses of slag, also, such as one finds in the neighborhood of iron foundries, and huge crucibles which had been used for separating gold from dross. Apparently they had worked in a similar manner to ourselves, for there were lumps of slag, the shape of the crucibles, from which the metal had been abstracted by precipitation. Our crucibles are no improvement on those I found there, which were practically indestructible."

Mr. Banner had some exciting experiences in the wilder parts of the American continent, and on Christmas Eve in 1883 witnessed a murder and lynching at Durango, which was then a township of La Plata, Colorado, chiefly inhabited by men of the toughest kind.

"On Christmas Eve, 1883, at Durango," he said, "everything was going on very pleasantly, when suddenly a shot was heard, and a man from Lake City fell dead. The murderer walked coolly out of the door unmolested, but the Marshal shouted, 'A hundred dollars reward for the man who arrests the murderer. Big Charlie is the man.' It was not long before Big Charlie was overpowered into the calaboose, or jail, with a couple of men, armed with Winchesters, to keep him safe.

"Then the dead man was rolled into a corner of the saloon, covered with a cloth from the billiard table, and five minutes afterwards the floor manager yelled, 'Gentlemen, please select your partners for a quadrille.' And the ball went on as merrily as if the man had not been killed.

"Next evening forty or fifty of the Vigilance Committee, headed by Judge Lynch, took Big Charlie from the jail, led him to a pine tree, and made him mount three boxes that had been piled under the boughs.

"'You're going to die,' said the captain of the Vigilance Committee, 'for killing a man without giving him a show to defend himself. Have you anything to say?'

"'Yes,' replied the doomed man. 'I will give you the address of my mother and sister in Ohio. Tell them what happened, and say whisky was the cause of the whole thing.'

"'Time's up,' said the captain. 'Do you prefer to jump from the boxes like a man, or shall we shoot you off?' A rope noose had been placed around his neck, and as there was but little slack either alternative meant strangulation. Big Charlie was game enough, and leaped into eternity."

From the United States Mr. Banner went prospecting in British Columbia, and learned more of its possibilities as a mineral yielding area than most of us know even now.

Next he went to Australia, prospecting and mining in every part of Australasia. There he has gone to the edge of the great deserts, has suffered semi-starvation and the torture of thirst, as well as lesser evils. "The natives," he explains, "would not tell the whites where the water was to be found. So they used to tie them up until they got so thirsty that immediately upon being released they would rush to the water."

Mr. Banner, in spite of his hard experiences is anxious to get off again, and is at present inclined towards British Columbia, or the unexplored parts of Canada.

AS AN ERRAND BOY

Sir Baden-Powell Tells an Interesting Story of Sir Thomas Lipton

Major-General Sir Robert Baden Powell, addressing the boys of the Mercers' School, Holborn, London, at the annual prize giving the other day, told an interesting story of the early life of Sir Thomas Lipton, with whom he had been staying.

Sir Thomas, he said, started work as an errand boy. He afterwards went to America as a cabin-boy, and on arrival a hotel agent touted among the passengers. Seeing the boy forlorn, and hearing he hadn't a penny, the agent offered him ten days' free board and lodging if he could bring twelve emigrants to his hotel. Lipton brightened up at once, because he had become very friendly with the emigrants through writing their letters, he being the only one in the steerage who could read or write. The emigrants were quite willing to go to the hotel, and the boy got his free board and time to look around for a berth.

G.T.P. WILL CARRY GRAIN

The Grand Trunk Pacific line between Fort William and Winnipeg is completed and it is expected that it will be handed over to the G.T.P. by the contractors in October. The road will be hauling grain the latter part of October, and expects to handle as much as over the western lines last fall, which was 7,000,000 bushels.

WIFE KEPT IN CHAINS

M. Parat, the chemist of the Rue Vaugirard, Paris, who some months ago was arrested for brutally ill-treating his wife, and was sent to an asylum for the insane, has been discharged as cured. Parat kept his wife in a dark room chained by the hands and ankles. Parat had gone to Belgium, and is bringing a suit against his wife to obtain the custody of his children.

WILL GO 100 YEARS

Burton Jeweler Makes Clock Which Only Needs Winding Once in a Century

A clock which is said to go far towards solving the problem of "perpetual motion," was exhibited at the Burton-on-Trent Flower Show. The maker, a local watch and clock maker named Bentley, claimed originally that the mechanism would go, without winding or other intereference, for fifty years, but now he says that it can be trusted to run uninterruptedly for a century. An important feature is an electric current obtained by means of two wires inserted in the earth and connected with the clock. Mr. Bentley is no novice in this direction. He already holds a gold medal, and has in his possession a clock which was started ten years ago, and has never since been wound. A feature of the flower show was the bridging of the Trent at its widest part, nearly sixty yards across, by the Burton Territorials, who employed eight piers of eight barrels, pontoon fashion, for the crowds to pass over.

OUTWITTED BY A BEAR

Dr. White Sends an Interesting Story From Wabigoon

Dr. White, of Wabigoon, Ont., writing to his home, expresses the wish that his father had been with him during the present spring, "to help him carry rotten eggs, vegetables, muskrats and pork to a bear." It appears, says Rod and Gun, as though he has on hand a job for all summer in keeping the animal fed.

Noting the bear's tracks, the Doctor took two barrels, made rope snares, which he placed over their mouths, and fixed a big lifting pole to the barrels. The bear put them off just as fast as he could set them up. The doctor and his wife came to the conclusion that the bear must take the bait out with his paw and never put his head in the barrel.

When visiting the trap on one occasion the Doctor and his wife saw a moose standing by the river. The moose allowed them to approach within thirty yards when he walked slowly into the water, crossed to the other side and went into the bush, still with the same deliberate action.

On reaching the trap the snares were found as usual. They were replaced and rebaited and on the following day as the bow of the canoe poked up the shore Mrs. White exclaimed: "Got him?" The bear merely remarked "Woof, woof!" which must have meant in this particular instance "Not yet!" for he jumped into the thicket before the Doctor could work his big revolver. On examining the place they found that the bear had been merely having a meal.

Refixing the snares and making a drop with about five hundred pounds on top they started home, one hundred yards down stream. This time they approached within twenty yards of the moose and then stopped, waiting for about ten minutes while the animal took a drink and began to feed, when he wandered back out of sight. On the next day the rifle was taken along, not for the moose of course, but for the bear. Once more the snare was off, and refixed with the noose made very small so that it would certainly catch him. On starting to float down home there was a crackle, and a careful scrutiny discovered Teddy in the brush, not twenty yards off. The doctor snatched up the rifle and fired quickly, fearing that the bear would jump away at once "but, say, he is tough—I can't kill him!"

The deadfall was down again next day, but there were a few hairs on it, looking as though the bear had allowed it to rest on his back till he had finished eating and then carelessly walked away. Once again it was refixed, with a load two hundred pounds heavier this time and a row of sharp stake placed in front. Next day there was quite a pinch of hair but that was all. A further two hundred pounds were added, more stakes were fixed, and all preparations for trapping him made once more. The Doctor made so sure of his bear this time that he was up at four o'clock in the morning and with gun, camera and skinning knife, went for his skin. When the Doctor and his wife arrived at the deadfall they stood looking at the debris without saying anything! The bait was eaten, the barrel broken up, and the heavy weights thrown about! Before they had recovered from their surprise a crunching noise was heard in the thicket—not forty yards away.

The Doctor crept carefully in, but the brush was too thick for him to see clearly. Within twenty yards of the animal the bear slipped by him and he went on to see what he was eating, finding a big log just torn open for ants.

The deadfall was rebuilt and a weight of one thousand pounds placed upon it.

The Doctor adds: If that weight doesn't kill him I think I shall feed him for the rest of the summer and not punish him so much. The last trap must have hurt him a little, for there was a lot of hair and some blood on the logs. Evidently he was caught too far back, and having good use of his front feet, was able to extricate himself.

The trout fishing is good, but I have been too busy feeding Teddy in my spare time to go out and get any.

STRONG APPROVAL.

The City Council Strongly Approve Bonner-Worth By-Law.

To the Editor of The Times,—

Dear Sir,—As a member of the City Council, we wish you to know that we heartily approve of the Bonner-Worth by-law, and ask you to support same with your vote and influence.

This company will spend between $20,000 and $25,000 a year in wages.

They will build a factory at an approximate cost of $12,000. The machinery and equipment therefore will cost over $18,000. The company has capital paid up to the value of $40,000. Business precaution prompted them to guarantee but 30 hands. As a matter of fact they will start with between 40 and 50. The goods they will produce are manufactured in only one other town in Canada. If they wish to do so they can to-day contract for the whole of their output. The management is in the hands of skilful men, experienced and trained in this particular line of business. The two active men are themselves investing one-third of the total capital.

After the company has acquired its land, and erected its buildings it asks the city to loan them 50 p.c. of their expenditure up to $12,000 and after they have been in operation for a full year, the city is to loan them the other 50 p.c. The loan is to be secured by a mortgage on the land, buildings and fixed machinery, the latter to be worth not less than $2,000. One year from the second payment the Company will repay to the city one-fifth of the sum loaned until the loan is repaid. The Company will pay school taxes to the extent of about $100 a year. The loan will cost the city $292.00 per year.

The company has attractive offers from other towns, but prefers Peterborough. The prospects are that within two years, the capacity of the plant will be doubled. The plans are drawn providing for this. When the success of the enterprise is assured, those already connected with it are prepared to invest much more heavily. There is no stock for sale. This is a good proposition for the city and we are heartily and unanimously in favor of it and want you to register your vote and use your influence with your friends in order that we may obtain the necessary three-fifths of the total tax-payers.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

He went on to say there was a lot of important business to come before the council during the coming year. Illustrating the prosperous condition of business, he stated that five factories, which a year ago employed 1046 hands now had 1490 on their pay roll.

He referred to the Dittman Natural Gas franchise and said that if gas was struck in sufficient quantities, it would be supplied to the citizens at 50c per 1000 feet and to manufacturers at 25c per 1000 feet.

The granting of the franchise to the Bonner-Worth Co. he strongly approved of. He had not only interviewed the two gentlemen at the head of the enterprise, but had also made enquiries and was convinced that it was well worth encouraging.

He referred to the appointment of an Industrial Commissioner and said that through the systematic way the commissioner had gone about his work the results were most encouraging. Besides the Bonner-Worth Co., a furniture factory that would spend $25,000 in grounds and building was likely soon to commence operations. He stated that the council had appropriated $2,000 towards the expenses of the Industrial Commissioner on condition that the Board of Trade would raise another $2,000. The latter organization had exceeded their guarantee by $500.

Several of those nominated were not present at this stage of the proceedings.

Mr. M. Morrison, a candidate for re-election on the Board of Education said that the public schools of Peterborough were the best equipped schools in the province, and that a superior class of teachers was employed was proved by the fact that two of them had been secured by the school of Pedagogy in Toronto.

Mr. Wm. S. Robinson, who said he had not fully made up his mind whether or not he would accept the nomination, inveighed strongly against a portion of the curriculum of the public schools. He said that far too much time was wasted on subjects of little or no use to the majority of scholars and too little attention given to the most important elements of public school education, namely, reading, writing, arithmetic and a thorough knowledge of English composition. The pupils turned out by the schools were sadly lacking in these important branches. He stated that some of those in his employ, actually could not make out their own time sheets. "You point," he said, "to your fine school buildings, but fine school buildings is not all that is needed." A very sensible suggestion he made was that as all the shop and factory hands quit work at 12 o'clock, the addition of the school population at that hour caused too much of a rush and crowd on the streets, and advocated dismissing the schools at 11.45 and resuming at 1.15, which would enable the children to get home before the noon hour crush.

TOOK FATAL DOSE.

As Result of Despondency After Losing His Position Through Drink.

Parry Sound, Dec. 26.—Mr. Robert Farrat, late manager of the Canadian News Company's Hotel at Depot Harbor, who has been reduced to the position of bookkeeper on account of irregular habits, committed suicide by taking laudanum in a glass of beer while with some of his friends yesterday. He was an Englishman of good family, and leaves a widow, but no children.

LIVELY SHOOTING ESCAPADE.

Patrolman Wounded and Daring Burglar is Likely to Die.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 26.—Patrolman Wm. McAlonan, was shot and dangerously wounded and a burglar giving the name of George White, of Cleveland, was shot by Detective James Dowd so seriously that he will probably die, in a fight which followed the tracing of the burglar to the cellar of E. H. Morton.

BUBONIC PLAGUE IN MONGOLIA

Japanese Doctors Attend Where Russian Refuse to Expose Themselves.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 22.—The ravages of the Bubonic plague in Mongolia are unchecked. Corpses frequently mark the sites of abandoned camps of Nomads. The situation in Manchuria is grave. The German Consul at Harbin has addressed a pressing note to the Chinese Taotai, demanding that radical measures be taken to stay the epidemic, and stating that otherwise Germany will interfere. The municipality of Harbin has invited Japanese physicians to attend the diseased in the barracks as the Russians refuse to expose themselves.

ADMITS HE NEVER WENT TO N. POLE

New York, December 24. There was nothing the matter with Dr. Cook's nerves when he got back yesterday. From his manner he might have been coming back as the discoverer of the other Pole, so assertive was the grinning confidence of his demeanor.

He had made up his mind to come completely out of hiding, and as he stood in the main saloon of the steamer George Washington, his smile was ever uppermost, his eyes were blinking defiantly, his hands thrust in his pockets were jingling coin, and his aspect was wholly that of a smart adventurer, asking "what are you going to do about it?"

He admitted that he had never discovered the Pole and that the action of the University of Copenhagen savants, who threw out his claim to the discovery of the Pole in disdain, was to be accepted.

"I had been troubled with constipation for two years and tried all of the best physicians in Bristol, Tenn., and they could do nothing for me," writes Thomas E. Williams, Middleboro, Ky. "Two packages of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cured me." For sale by all dealers.

Chinese Provinces Swept by Plague

FAMINE STALKS HAND IN HAND WITH DEADLY BUBONIC PLAGUE.

Foreign Missionaries Either Dead or Dying From the Scourge—The Zone of Human Destruction Widening Continuously in Spite of All Efforts.

Shanghai, China, Dec. 27.—Famine stalks hand in hand with the bubonic plague through China. The province of Kiang-Su is being depopulated by starvation and a dreadful wave of plague and death is sweeping into the province of Pechili, in which Pekin is located. According to reports being received here today, a number of foreign missionaries are either dead or dying from the epidemic. Hundreds of natives are dying daily.

MOST HARROWING SUFFERING.

While refugees from the death belt are barred from the cities, reports of the most harrowing suffering have been received from as far west as Nan-Kin and as far north as Yellow River.

Along the Grand Canal entire villages have been wiped out and bands of men and women, insane from hunger, roam the country. No food can be taken into the heart of the plague devastation region.

The entire grain and rice supply has been exhausted in the middle of the province and rioting is frequent in remote districts where store-up food has been found. Men and women have been known to fight to death for a handful of rice. The gaunt, naked children have been seen gnawing thongs of leather to gather a little nourishment.

The medical missionaries are striving valiantly to give aid, and how many perished is not known. Braving the panic of famine and disease, they have penetrated the remote districts where word cannot be had of them.

In the old Yellow River district thousands of dead bodies lie exposed to the weather. In many localities the need of graves is gone because everyone is dead.

Chinese soldiers who have been ordered into the heart of the affected territory have rebelled and refused to brave the dangers of the scourge.

Everything will be Free in Charity Store

A department store will be opened just outside the city limits of Los Angeles within a few weeks, which will bear the distinction of being the only one of its kind in existence. It will be a department store where goods of every description will be given away instead of sold.

This remarkable store, the building for which has been constructed at Benner street and Avenue Fifty-eight near the Arroyo Seco, is the result of a movement started thirteen years ago by Dr. F. E. Yoakum and his wife, which has grown until now it is possible not only to plan such a store, but to carry the plan into effect.

No charges of any kind will be made in the store. There are no requirements whatever except that those receiving goods must financially be unable to purchase necessities of life, or at least too poor to buy enough of them. No sects or religious beliefs are barriers to patronizing the store, it being for the benefit of all the worthy poor, regardless of their religion.

The store will be known as the "Pisgah" store, the name which represents the movement of which Dr. Yoakum is the head.

The movement itself and the store, which is an offspring of the movement, have no financial backing other than voluntary contributions. The peculiar feature about these contributions, which have supplied the money for purchasing the site and constructing the store building, is that they come from every section of the globe, from people speaking all languages, and of every creed.

Dr. Yoakum stated recently, in speaking of the undertaking, that he is in communication with people in every country in the world, with the exception of three. He has received three letters from different parts of world, one of which coming from a small island in the East Indies, contained a English money order, the amount of which was to be directed toward the work.

The store building is of concrete blocks and has been built by men who are being taken care of in the Pisgah home. Dr. Yoakum conceived the idea of such a store about three years ago, but was unable to put his idea into effect at the time. Last January he again took it up, and as a starter purchased a concrete block-making machine. Using this, men in the home soon had sufficient blocks made to construct the stone building, and at once set to work building it. It is now completed and carpenters are building show cases and shelves to accommodate the stock of goods which will be installed.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1910

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

The popular vote in Great Britain shows that the victory won by the coalitionists was decisive, if not overwhelming. The Liberal and Labor vote together amounts to 2,075,026. The Unionist vote is 2,410,049. As there were some thirty more Unionists than coalitionists elected by acclamation, it will be fair to add 30,000 to the Unionist total, making it 2,440,049. This is a Liberal and Labor majority of 235,000. But the coalition must also be credited with the Nationalist vote in Ireland, for the Unionist vote in Ireland is included in the total for that party. This would make the coalition majority 364,610.

That the coalition party is composed of three sections is true, but there is also a cleavage in the other party. The Unionist party is rent from top to bottom on the question of protection; and the difference between a protectionist and a free trader is surely as great as the difference between a Labor member and a Liberal, or even between an Irish Home Ruler and an English Liberal.

How far is the election a mandate for the carrying out of Mr. Asquith's veto proposals? To say that there is no mandate because the majority is not substantially increased is to treat an election as a nullity. The Lords accepted the verdict of the people on the budget, although the majority of the Government was reduced from 334 to 124, and although the position of the Nationalists on the budget was by no means a source of strength to the Government. But to say that there is a good argumentative case for the Lords yielding is not to say that they will yield, or that they may not be encouraged to resistance by the knowledge that they have a strong support in the country.

Some things, however, have been decisively settled. The Lloyd George system of finance has been successful, and its main principles, the taxation of the unearned increment of land and the taxation of wealth and luxury, are not likely to be abandoned. No Government would dare to interfere with the old-age pensions, which have relieved tens of thousands of worthy citizens not only from the fear of want but from the undeserved reproach of pauperism. The House of Lords, though it survive, reformed or unreformed, will hardly care to take the risk of rejecting another budget.

As to protection, it is not so easy to speak positively. It is assuredly out of favor to-day and it is doubtful whether even the casting vote of Ireland would turn the scales in its favor. As a means of obtaining more revenue by "broadening the basis of taxation," its usefulness has been destroyed by the success of the Lloyd George taxes. But some change in commercial or industrial conditions might bring it into favor again as a supposed remedy for depression.

THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

round the officers they had betrayed, and talked in wonder and admiration of the surpassing heroism of the defense."

Those men of the rank and file at least were soldiers. They knew nothing of the awful project concocted by the Nana and his chief associates, Rao Sahib, Tantia Topi, and Azimullah.

The procession made its way slowly towards the river, three quarters of a mile to the east. No doubt there were joyful hearts in that sorrow-laden band. Men and women must have thought of far-off homes in England, and hoped that God would spare them to see their beloved country once more. Even the children, wide-eyed innocents, could not fail to be thankful that the noise of the guns had ceased, while the wounded were cheered by the belief that food and stores in plenty would soon be available.

At the foot of a tree-clad ravine leading to the Ganges were stationed a number of heavy native boats, with thatched roofs to shield the occupants from the sun. They were partly drawn up on the mud at the water's edge to render easy the work of embarkation. Without hurry or confusion, the wounded, and the women and children, were placed on board.

Then some one noticed that the thatch on one of the boats was smoking, and it was found that glowing charcoal had been thrust into the straw. About the same time it was discovered that the boats had neither oars, nor rudders, nor supplies of food. Before the dread significance of these things became clear, a bugle-call rang out. At once, both banks of the river became alive with armed sepoys, and a murderous rifle-fire was opened on the crowded boats. Guns, hidden among the trees, belched red-hot shot and grape at them, and the smouldering straw of the thatched roofs burst into flames.

Awakened to the unspeakable treachery of their foe, officers and men rushed into the water and strove with might and main to shove the boats into deep water. They failed, for the unwieldy craft had been hauled purposely too high.

Here Ashe and Moore, and Bolton, hero of that lonely ride through the enemy's country, fell. Here, too, men shot their wives and children rather than permit them to fall into the hands of the fiends who had planned the massacre. Savage troopers urged their horses into the water and slashed cowering women with their sabers. Infants were torn from their mothers' arms, and tossed by sepoys from bayonet to bayonet. The sick and wounded, lying helpless in the burning craft, died in the agony of fire, and the few bold spirits who even in that ghastly hour tried to beat off their cowardly assailants were surrounded and shot down by overwhelming numbers.

One heavily-laden boat was dragged into the stream, and a few officers and men clambered on board. The voyage they made would supply material for an epic. They were followed along the banks and pursued by armed craft on the river. They fought all day and throughout the night, and when the ungoverned boat ran ashore during a wild squall of wind and rain at daybreak, the surviving soldiers, a sergeant and eleven men, headed by Mowbray-Thomson of the 56th, and Delafosse of the 53rd, sprang out and charged some hundreds of sepoys and hostile villagers who had gathered on the bank.

The craven-hearted gang yielded before the Englishmen's fierce onslaught. The tiny band turned to fight their way back, and found that the boat had drifted off again! Then they seized a Hindu temple on the bank and held it until the sepoys piled burning timber against the rear walls and threw bags of powder on the fire!

Fixing bayonets and leaving the sergeant dead in the doorway, they charged again into the mass of the enemy. Six fell. The remainder reached the river, threw aside their guns, and plunged boldly in. Two were shot while swimming, and one man, unable to swim any distance, coolly made his way ashore again and faced his murderers until he sank beneath their blows.

Mowbray-Thomson, Delafosse, and Privates Murphy and Sullivan, swam six miles with the stream, and were finally rescued and helped by a friendly native.

Those four were all who came alive out of the Inferno of Cawnpore. The boat, after clearing the shoal, was captured by the mutineers, Major Vibart of the 2nd Cavalry, who was so severely wounded that he could not join in the earlier fighting, and some eighty helpless souls under his command, were brought back to the city of death. There, by orders of the Nana, the men were slain forthwith and the women and children were taken to a building in which they found one hundred and twenty-five others, who had been spared for the Brahmin's own terrible purposes from the butchery at Massacre Ghat on the 27th.

Returning to Bithoor the Nana was proclaimed Peishwa amid the booming of cannon and the plaudits of his retainers. He passed a week in drunken revels and debauchery, and when, in ignorance of its fate, a small company of European fugitives from Futegarh sought refuge at Cawnpore, he amused himself by having all the men but three killed in his presence. These three and the women and children who accompanied them, were sent to a small house known as the Bibigarh, in which the whole of the captives, now numbering two hundred and eleven, were imprisoned.

Many died, and they were happiest. The survivors were subjected to every indignity, given the coarsest food, and forced to grind corn for their conqueror, who, early in July, took up his abode in a large building at Cawnpore overlooking the house in which the unhappy people were penned.

But the period of their earthly sufferings was drawing to a close. An avenging army was moving swiftly up the Grand Trunk Road from Allahabad. The Nana's nephew and two of his lieutenants, leading a large force against the British, were badly defeated. On the 15th of July came the alarming tidings that the Feringhee [illegible]

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields,

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Miers, D. Sc. F.R.S., Waynflete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline, due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Nictoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derives from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

HOPE OF WALES

Mr. Lloyd George on the Religious Activity of the Day

Lloyd George, in opening a bazaar in Wales, in which Mrs. Lloyd George is president, said of late he had had some experience of extracting money, and he hoped the promoters of that bazaar would not meet with his difficulties, and that their efforts would not arouse resentment, as he seemed to have done, among the customers at his little bazaar. (Laughter).

Within recent years, he said, he had motored more than ever through the sterile and wild parts of Wales, across great mountain moors, with hardly a habitation in sight, perhaps only a shepherd's cot, but he has never gone very far without seeing a little chapel somewhere or other in the wilderness. (Hear, hear.)

"I am also struck by the way Nonconformity is dealing with the rapid changes which are taking place, not so much in the character of the population as in its training and outlook. There are two conditions in the life of Wales which contain elements of peril to the spiritual life of any nation. One is the great access of material prosperity and the other is the enormous improvement in the educational outfit and facilities of the people. Both are full of peril to the spiritual life of the people unless they are properly dealt with, and unless measures are adapted of utilizing them.

"For all the education was very much like carrying a lamp in the darkness. It illumined all the immediate vicinity, enabling one to see everything that was near with greater clearness, but it was very apt to darken the vastness around. At the great centres of learning on the Continent students saw material things with greater clearness, and thus for a moment darkened or thickened the darkness of impenetrable mysteries around them. Nonconformity realized the perils. Its ministry had become a better trained and educated one, and one which was quite adequate to cope with the new generation which was springing up in Wales with an intellectual awakening which was on of the greatest features of its rational life at the present moment. These were things that filled the heart of anyone loving Wales with a great sense of hope and of confidence as to the future of the country." (Cheers.)

THE DEAD SEA

Entertaining Facts About the Remarkable Sheet of Water

In many ways the Dead Sea, in Palestine, can claim the distinction of being the most remarkable sheet of water on the face of the globe. Although known by name to everyone, only twice in modern times has anyone attempted to make any systematic study of this historic region.

Indeed, its banks are seldom visited, and many of the ravines and mountains that skirt its shores are said to be virtually unexplored territory. This account, therefore, of a week spent upon the waters of this little-known lake is of more than passing interest.

The subject acquires an added value from the fact that the Turkish Government recently granted a concession for the exploitation of the minerals in the Dead Sea basin, a sum of £70,000, it is said, being paid for the rights. It is well known that the finest and purest bitumen is obtained here, as well as sulphur, copper, marble, etc. Then experts have declared that there are evidences of coal and oil in the region.

The Dead Sea is some forty-seven miles long, and about ten miles wide at its greatest breadth. Curiously enough, it lies 1,300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean. Many ridiculous stories are told about this sheet of water, even in Palestine itself. For instance, people will tell you in Jerusalem that it is impossible to swim in its waters, and that no animal or vegetable can exist near its shores. While it is true that fish cannot live in the lake, birds may frequently be seen, in certain places, flying over its surface.

As for swimming, the excessive buoyancy of the water merely renders it difficult to make much headway, but swimming is both feasible and refreshing. Among the party on the exploring vessel, which numbered eleven, there were several who could not swim, yet in the evening they often ventured into the water, and floated about on their backs. What one has to be careful about is not to get the water into the eyes.

Indeed, did Palestine belong to any other power but Turkey, probably the northern shore of the lake would be a popular bathing station. No doubt the chloride of magnesium which enters so largely into the composition of the water, would be found to have medicinal and curative properties. The water is certainly very dense, containing twenty-three per cent. of solid matter, and, is, bulk for bulk, heavier than the human body.

How dense it is may be realized from the following table. In a ton of water from the Caspian Sea there are 11 lbs. of salt; in the Baltic, 18 lbs.; in the Black Sea, 26 lbs.; in the Atlantic, 31 lbs.; in the English Channel, 72 lbs.; in the Mediterranean, 85 lbs.; in the Red Sea, 93 lbs.; and in the Dead Sea, 187 lbs.

It has generally been believed that this famous inland sea is decreasing in size, but the reverse is the case.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF OUR AIRMEN

Some of the Troubles They Have to Overcome—Why the Flying Machines Fly

The question that most naturally occurs to you in considering the aeroplane is—"Why, seeing that it is heavier than air, does it not fall? Why does it stay aloft? It is considerably heavier than air, and on the same principle that iron will not swim you would naturally expect that it would refuse to soar. It is the air pressure beneath the plane that keeps it up. A balloon can remain stationary over a given spot in a calm, but an aeroplane must constantly move if it is to remain in the air. The monoplanes and biplanes on which our foremost aviators have been making and breaking so many records of late are somewhat in the same position as a skater on thin ice. The skater must move fast enough to reach a new section of ice before he falls; the aeroplane must move fast enough to reach a new section of air before it falls. Hence the aeroplane is constantly struggling with gravitation.

The simplest and most familiar example of an aeroplane is the kite of our boyhood days. We all remember how we kept it aloft by holding it against the wind or by running with it if there happened to be only a gentle breeze. When the wind died down or the string broke the kite fell. Above all things, it was necessary to hold the kite's surface toward the wind—an end which we sometimes accomplished with a string. The eagle is an animated kite without the string, but it keeps its outstretched wings to the wind by muscular power. If we can find a substitute for the string, some device, in other words, which will enable us to hold the kite in the proper direction, we have invented a flying machine. The pull or the thrust of an engine-driven propellor is the accepted substitute for the string of a kite or the muscles of an eagle. The propeller creates an artificial wind, as it were, to keep the aeroplane up.

Maintaining Balance

Of course, as you will readily understand, there are many other things to be considered besides mere propelling machinery. Of these the first in importance is certainly the very difficult art of balancing the plane so that it will glide on an even keel. As a matter of fact, even birds find it hard to maintain their balance. In the constant endeavor to balance himself a hawk sways from side to side as he soars like an acrobat on a tight rope. Occasionally, as you may have noticed, a bird will catch the wind on the top of his wing, with the result that he will capsize and fall some distance before he can recover himself. If the living aeroplanes of nature find the feat of balancing so difficult, is it any wonder that men have been killed in endeavoring to discover their secret?

The whole art of maintaining the side-to-side balance of an aeroplane consists in keeping the centre of gravity and the centre of air pressure on the same vertical line. If the two should not at least approximately coincide the aeroplane is capsized.

There are obviously two ways of maintaining side-to-side balance—one by constantly shifting the centre of gravity, the other by constantly shifting the centre of air-pressure. The first method involves ceaseless flash-like movement on the part of the aviator; for by shifting his body he shifts the centre of gravity.

The aeroplane must be balanced not only from side to side, but fore and aft as well. The same necessity exists in the old fashioned single-surface kite. To give it the necessary fore-and-aft stability we used to adorn it with a long tail of knotted strips of paper or rags. If the tail was not heavy enough the kite dived erratically, and sometimes met its destruction by colliding with a tree. To ensure longitudinal stability many aeroplane flying machines are similarly provided with a tail, which consists generally of one or more plane surfaces. Some aeroplanes are, however, tailless, but usually they are less stable than the tailed variety.

Commencing a Flight

In order to fly an aeroplane, like a kite or a soaring bird, must rise in the very teeth of the wind. What is more, it must be in motion before it can fly. How this preliminary motion was to be obtained was a problem that long baffled the flying machine inventor. Eagles, vultures, and other soaring birds launch themselves either by leaping from the limb of a tree, or the edge of a cliff, or by running along the ground with wings outspread until they have acquired sufficient speed.

From this we can readily understand why a vulture can be confined in a small cage which is entirely open at the top.

To get up preliminary speed many methods have been adopted. One of the earliest was by running the machine down an inclined track. Many aviators, however, mount their aeroplanes on bicycle wheels, and, like the eagle, run along the ground for a short distance. Just as a soaring bird uses his legs in leaping in the air or running on the ground to start his flight, and also in alighting, so most aeroplanes alight with the bicycle wheels that serve them during the brief moments of launching. Sometimes, however, special alighting devices are provided.

The problem of steering an aeroplane when it is launched is solved by two sets of rudders. A steamboat is a vehicle that travels in two directions only, hence it requires only a single vertical rudder, which serves to guide it from side to side. An aeroplane moves not only from side to side, but up and down as well. Hence, it is equipped with a vertical rudder similar to that of a steamboat, and also with a horizontal rudder, which serves to alter its course up or down, and which is becoming more widely known as an elevator. Fore-and-aft stability is attained in tailless machines by manipulation of this elevator. Even in tailed machines its use for that purpose is almost imperative.

MELVILLE

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville ?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many fold in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark ?

Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of trensportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constrdcted from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city,

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

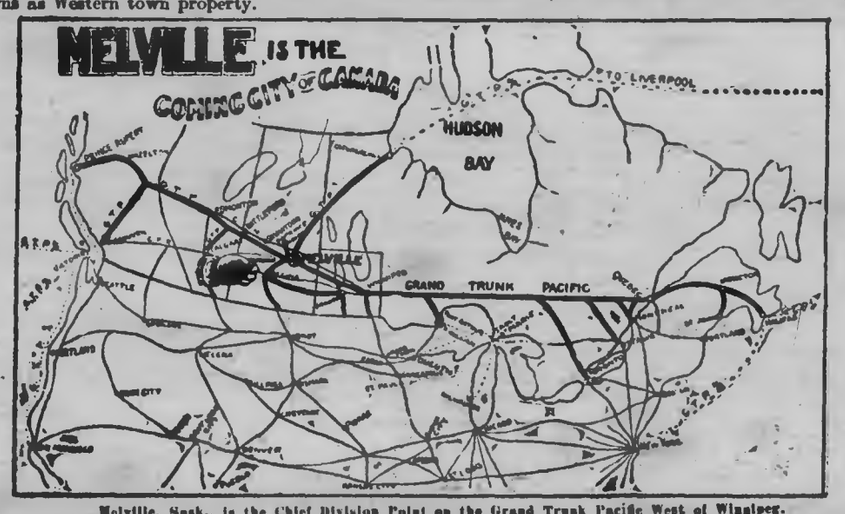
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by wsrehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR.

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last yeir was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enfoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West ol Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more promising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

XMAS IN GOTHAM.

A Double Christmas for the Poor of New York.

New York, Dec. 23.—New York is to have a double Christmas this year. It will begin to-morrow and continue over til Monday. It's to be a charitable Christmas, too, for on both days institutions and individuals are going deep down into their pockets to dispense Christmas cheer to the homeless and hungry and the ill provided with even a more lavish hand than has been seen in former years. Churches of all denominations will distribute well-filled baskets, the Salvation Army and kindred organizations will feed the derelicts at great feasts spread in public halls, several free dinners will be given especially for the newsboys, and in all the hospitals, the prisons and charitable institutions of the city preparations have been made for bounteous Christmas dinners.

Former Chief Forester Alleged to Have Misappropriated Funds.

Denver, Col., Dec. 23.—The Denver Post says to-day:

In an effort to secure enough evidence to prosecute Gifford Pinchot on the charge of misappropriation of Government funds, while holding the position of Chief Forester, secret agents are securing the country. They are headed by cattlemen of Colorado, Montana, Idaho and other States, as well as people who had suffered financial and other losses in the forest fires last year. Two of them have spent the last week in Denver.

The movement, it is reported in despatches from both Montana and Idaho, had its inception in those two States, and the instigators have been to Washington to check up the records to see where every dollar of the forest service appropriations went. When they finished in Washington they headed for the West, and have been in every important centre where the forest service has offices.

If they get evidence which they consider damaging enough to present to the Federal courts, a grand jury will be asked for.

NO CORRUPT METHODS EMPLOYED BY LORIMER.

Senate Committee does Not Support Chicago Tribune Graft Probe Finds.

Washington, Dec. 22.—"The committee submits that in their opinion the title of Mr. Lorimer to a seat in the Senate has not been shown to be invalid by the use or employment of corrupt methods or practices."

This is the verdict submitted to the United States Senate today by the committee on privileges and elections, which investigated the charges of bribery preferred by The Chicago Tribune and the Legislative Voters' League of Chicago against Senator William Lorimer. The report fully vindicates Senator Lorimer of any connection or knowledge of the alleged bribery, and further holds that it is not shown by the testimony that a sufficient number of legislators were influenced in this manner to vitiate his election.

BIG POULTRY SHOW.

A Novel Way of Advertising the Big Event.

The Peterborough Poultry Association will hold their show on January 10, 11th and 12th, and it will be well worth going to see.

Besides a large banner hung across the street, a novelty in the way of advertising is that a number of boys will wear a white feather in their caps. We think their selection of a white feather was rather unfortunate as a white feather is usually considered a sign of fear. However, the Association does not seem to have any fear that their show will not be a great success.

They will have many new features, among them an exhibit of dressed poultry from Guelph. The Association is giving prizes for dressed turkeys—$10.00—$5.00 for first prize, $3.00 for second and $1.00 for third. There should be a big entry. It is an education for the public to be able to see the best prize birds in all varieties in the province. There will be a lecture and demonstration on how to kill, pluck and dress a bird, also how to carve.

THE WAXWORKS AT WESTMINSTER

Wax Effigies of Some of the Most Notable Figures in History Find a Place There

People have a curiously mistaken idea that the only place in London where one can see really good wax figures is at Madame Tussaud's, but this is a great error on their part.

The waxworks at Westminster Abbey are also very interesting, and from an historical point of view, they may also be regarded as most venerable antiquities.

Years ago, in the early days of English history, people liked to be sure of their facts. There were no newspapers to herald the goings on of royalties, and every piece of news that was handed on from one to another came originally from an eyewitness of the scene described.

Therefore, when a king died, as there were no newspapers in which one could read a discreet description of his dying moments, it became necessary to announce the fact in some more direct fashion. It was no use saying a king was dead, the statement had to be proved, and so it became customary to embalm the dead body of the king and to bear it openly upon the bier to its last resting place, so that the populace might see for themselves that there was no deception.

After a bit fashions changed, as they will, and instead of the king being embalmed and placed upon his bier, he was embalmed and placed within it, and a waxen effigy of the deceased sovereign was modelled from his dead figure and dressed in his best Sunday going-to-meeting suit, and borne with pomp and heraldry on his coffin in the place of the poor, dead body.

When the body had received reverent burial at the Abbey the waxen effigy was placed upon the tomb, so that all might see what the sovereign had looked like upon earth. After a bit these effigies were found to lumber up the place, and it was decided to gather them together and to put them in the Islip Chamber, where they could be seen by the curious public for the small sum of threepence, which in those early days of which I write went into the pockets of the Minor Canons and Lay Vicars.

Sovereigns of Many Epochs

Many effigies were gathered in the chapel up the winding stair, but one by one they have crumbled to dust till only a few remain.

Queen Elizabeth is there in all her glory. Arrayed in the huge ruff with which her numerous pictures have made us so familiar, a velvet gown, stitched with gold, a jewelled stomacher, and very high-heeled shoes.

She was so given over to the vanities of this world, that even when dying she insisted upon being arrayed in all her finery, and finally she died on the floor dressed as if for some great Court carnival, as you see her in the Islip Chamber. They say that the contents of her wardrobe on her death amazed everyone, so crowded was it with garments of all sorts, many of which the Queen had never even seen, much less worn.

By her side stands that merry monarch Charles II., in red velvet and priceless lace ruffles. There is a weird fascination in the pallid, ugly face of this well-known lady-killer, surrounded by a falling mass of ink-black curls. His face wears a half cynical smile, as if he loved even death amusing. He was the most attractive scion of the very attractive house of Stuart, if historians are to be believed, and also the most unreliable.

Next him stands one of the fair ladies he loved so gaily, the beautiful Duchess of Richmond, clad in the robes she wore at the coronation of Queen Anne. This fair lady was so beautiful that she sat for the design of Britannia on the copper coinage, a compliment to her classical features that she no doubt much appreciated.

Sidelights on Royalty

The Duchess of Buckingham is also here, a lady who is historically notorious for taking the deepest interest in funerals and their trappings—even her own. When she lay a-dying she ordered the canopy that was to be held over her hearse to be brought for her inspection, to see if it met with her approval. A Duchess of Buckingham could not quit this mortal sphere without every attention being paid to what was due to her rank and position in life. She probably knew the old saying, that if you want a thing done well you should do it yourself—and acted upon it.

William and Mary are also here, standing side by side, Mary completely over-topping her small, disagreeable-looking husband, whom she adored. They say that William, like many another husband, never fully appreciated his wife till she lay dying, and that then his grief knew no bounds.

William was a martyr to asthma, and this trying ailment may partly have accounted for his most uncertain temper, but in the death-chamber of his wife he strove to stifle his most persistent cough in case he might disturb her. But this kind attention on his part disturbed poor Queen Mary more than the cough. He had never bestowed any petits soins on her in life, and so, poor lady, she did not look for them in death, and she repeatedly asked where her husband was, and could not believe he was by her side because she did not hear his cough. What curious side-lights these little domestic details throw upon our knowledge of history! What a pity a few more have not come down to us! Lord Chatham and Lord Nelson are also here, but they are not genuine effigies, only fakes.

Lord Chatham was added to the collection by way of making a larger show, and Lord Nelson, arrayed in the clothes he wore at the battle of Trafalgar, even down to the patch over one eye, was shamelessly put here to attract back the fickle public, who deserted Westminster Abbey for St. Paul's when the national hero was buried there.—M. de L. Bartlett.

PLUCKY STEWARDESS

An Incident on a Passenger Steamer En Route to St. John, N.B.

R. McBride, Glasgow, relates the following story of a plucky stewardess:

"Some years ago, when serving as an assistant engineer on board a passenger steamer en route to St. John, N.B., we ran into one of those impenetrable fogs so prevalent in the Bay of Fundy. Suddenly, as if on the rocks, the ship bumped heavily several times close by where I stood in the engine-room, followed by the telegraph signal from the bridge, 'Full speed astern.' I was relived by the chief engineer, and ordered to take a good look round, and see if any excess water was rising in the bilges. Descending two or three steps to the shaft tunnel convinced me that it was rising rapidly, too, as I found myself up to the knees in sea water. After putting the pumps to work, I hastened to the stokehole, to find that the firemen on watch had already cleared out, and that the fires were burning low. On going in search of them on deck, I was just in time to notice their heads vanish down the stokehole ladder, while the voice of our stewardess was raised in angry tones, denouncing them as cowardly dogs for deserting their post at the first sign of danger. At her feet stood a partly-filled bucket of hot water, and in her hand she flourished the galley soup-ladle; and I learned that she had been liberally douching them with boiling water from the bucket on finding them preparing to clear away on one of the boats. They had evidently slunk back to work, and the risks entailed, rather than brave the biting lash of the infuriated woman's tongue and the compelling influence of the scalding water. To her timely and heroic conduct our salvation from foundering was undoubtedly due, as we all had our work cut out in bringing the ship safely to Halifax dry dock, where it was found that besides being badly strained and fractured, several plates in the ship's bottom had been broken, through which the water was rushing in."

HENNIKER HEATON

Has Four Times Declined the Honor of a Knighthood

The City of London conferred its freedom upon Mr. Henniker Heaton eleven years ago, and successive Governments have pressed a K.C.M.G. upon him. But Mr. Heaton has four times declined the honor. There is a joke in connection with Mr. Heaton's friendship with Mr. Marconi which might bear repetition. When he was made a Freeman of the City of London Mr. Marconi accompanied him, and when the latter's turn came and he received the freedom of Rome, he insisted that Mr. Heaton should return the compliment by going with him to Rome. Some little time before this Sir Benjamin Stone had photographed them together on the terrace of the House of Commons in the costumes of their respective Courts. Mr. Marconi sent a copy of this to an Italian newspaper, and the latter published it on the day Mr. Marconi received the freedom of Rome over the inscription: "Mr. Marconi and King Edward the Seventh." One of Mr. Heaton's most treasured possessions—and he only received it during his election campaign this year—is a letter from Mr. Chamberlain wishing him success. Lord Desborough has chosen the following extract from it as an inscription for Mr. Heaton's tombstone: "It has been given to few men to promote reforms independently, and to see them adopted in their own lifetime with universal approval." There is an amusing anecdote in connection with a Parliamentary chess match which the famous postal reformer got up between Great Britain and America in 1907. It was played by cable, and at one stage of the game everything pointed to the defeat of the Yankees. Realizing this, they wired "You're too good for us; we'll play you at poker!" The game, however, ended in a draw, and the offer to play poker has not been accepted.

THE KING'S TREASURES

Guarded Beyond the Hopes of the Most Daring Burglar

Special precautions were taken to safeguard the Royal treasures during their removal from Marlborough House to Buckingham Palace. Four detectives were especially detailed to guard them. These personal treasures consist of gold and silver works of art and some exquisite Dresden china, a number of valuable pictures, and a large quantity of very rare antique furniture. In addition to these valuables, there is, of course his Majesty's collection of stamps and a big library containing a number of extremely rare editions.

There is only one attempt on record in the past hundred years to burgle Buckingham Palace, which is most carefully watched night and day by the police detectives both inside and out. The private entrance used by members of the Royal Family was one evening left ajar by the Prince Consort, and almost immediately afterwards it was entered by a man who was permitted by the servant at the entrance to pass. Subsequently, the man was stopped when attempting to enter one of the private apartments and was given in charge of the police—a plan of the Palace was found on him.

It may be remembered that some years ago, when some of Queen Alexandra's collection of miniatures were sent to be reframed, four of them were stolen. They were, however, recovered very shortly afterwards. As a rule, the Royal treasures are so carefully watched and guarded that the most daring and ambitious burglar never hopes to capture them.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

PLAN TO BLOW UP U. S. NAVY PLOT BY JAPANESE DISCOVERED

JAPANESE COLONY IN PHILIPPINES IS BEING WATCHED—SOME ARRESTS PROBABLE.

Officers Will Not Talk—They Have Been Threatened With Court-Martial If They Discuss the Matter.

Manila, Dec. 28.—A Japanese plot to mine Manila Harbor for the purpose of blowing up American warships at their anchorage in the event of hostilities between Japan and the United States was discovered today, according to persistent reports circulated in military circles. The reports are emphasized by the result of the organized search by the military authorities of the Japanese quarter, a quantity of high explosives having been found in one of the houses.

So serious is the situation that Maj.-General Wm. P. Duvall, commanding the department, has assumed personal charge of the search. Official information is refused and every effort is being made to keep from the public the nature of the discoveries.

The authorities are understood to have secured by means of their secret service complete information of the plans of the Japanese. It is understood that the arrests of the Japanese spy on the Corregidor Island yesterday was merely an announcement of a round-up that is to come. Leading members of the Japanese colony in Manila have been under surveillance for some time past, and in the house to house search made yesterday which resulted in the discovery of explosives. It is rumored that papers were found disclosing the identity of the Japanese secret agents who are operating there. These men are to be arrested. It is hinted some of them are already in custody, but because of the attitude of the authorities it is impossible to confirm this.

One report is that the Japanese have smuggled quantities of explosives into the country, their method being to land the contraband at isolated obscure spots on the Luzon coast, and then to smuggle them into Manila under the loads of produce.

Just how extensive the proposed plot to mine the local harbor is cannot be ascertained. One report has it that the scheme was to plant the mines close to the bottom, adjacent to the anchorages of the warships, so that in case they were wanted they could be discharged by electrical current from the shorre.

There is considerable excitement in military and naval circles in connection with the latest Japanese scare, but none of the officers will talk, fearing to incur wrath of General Duval, who has warned all who are supposed to have knowledge of what is going on that a court martial will follow any talk.

Two Aviators Met a Horrible Death

Paris, Dec. 28.—The worst aeroplane accident in the history of French aviation occurred to-day at Issy, when Marquis Mario Paulla and Alexandre Laffon, chief pilot of the Antoinette School of Aviation, were killed in an eighty-foot fall of their Antoinette monoplane.

Laffon's wife witnessed the tragedy. Within fifteen minutes of the time she kissed her daring husband farewell she threw herself in a paroxysm of grief over his mangled body. She is in a critical condition from the shock.

Laffon was piloting the machine and Paulla, the owner of the aeroplane was his passenger. They were contesting for the $20,000 prize offered for the speediest two-passenger flight from Paris to Brussels and return.

When almost directly over the hangar the machine capsized. Laffon made frantic efforts to right the falling craft, but it dashed to the earth, turning over twice in its decent. Laffon fell a few feet from his wrecked aeroplane, his head crushed and his right arm driven into his chest. The Marquis was caught in the wreckage. Both men were unconscious. They were rushed to Bourcicault hospital, Paulla dying as he was being taken into the hospital, and Laffon a few minutes later.

Laffon was 67 years old and one of the best known of the French instructors. Paulla had done little flying himself, but was one of the chief promoters of the sport, spending much of his great wealth in furthering the science.

Struck Vital Blow at Black Hand Operations

New York, Dec. 27.—Disregarding threats of violence, County Judge Fawcett in Brooklyn to-day struck a vital blow at Black Hand operations when he sentenced two convicted Italian blackmailers to not less than twenty-five years nor more than forty-nine years and ten months at hard labor in Sing Sing Prison.

The couple were Anislo Pattenza and his female accomplice, Maria Rappa, convicted of holding two Italian boys prisoners in an attempt to extort a ransom.

Judge Fawcett bitterly scored the couple in passing sentence. Their conviction, he said, was a victory for law, and careful investigation had shown they were the brains of the "Black Hand" organization in New York. He paid high tribute to Deputy Commissioner of Police Flynn, former captain in the Federal secret service, who was personally responsible for the conviction, and expressed the belief that the sentence in these cases would end the "Black Hand" terrorism in this vicinity.

In sentencing the Rappa woman the court said: "It is almost unbelievable that you could have held these two crying, broken-hearted, stolen children captives for twenty days, knowing as you must have known, the terrible suffering of their weeping, distracted parents. You have given birth to children. Your own children lived with you in the very room where you kept Joseph Longo a prisoner. The part you have taken in this crime shows you have not the spirit of instinct of a mother. The God-made mother love is better shown in beasts and birds than in such as you."

Mrs. Stetson May be the New Leader

HER OPPONENTS SAY SHE IS SEEKING TO SUCCEED THE LATE MRS. EDDY.

Power of the Directors—Ex-communicated Leader Would Destroy It—She Issues Statement Regarding Her Attitude.

New York, Dec. 27.—Despite a statement issued by Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, in which she denies that she seeks the leadership left vacant by the death of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, opponent of the ex-communicated leader declared today that she was waging a secret campaign to destroy the power of the mother church directors in Boston and to have herself elevated to the position of chief spiritual adviser of the cult.

NOT INTEND TO SURVIVE.

They assert that Mrs. Stetson's friends argue that Mrs. Eddy never intended that the mother church organization survive her, and they quote from her writings to show that the Boston directors have served the purpose of their organization and should dissolve, their reign to be "succeeded by love, truth and divine light as radiated by those who have become spiritually fit."

Mrs. Stetson is regarded by her followers, of course, as pre-eminently in the lead of the "spiritually fit."

DIVORCE COURT FOR ONTARIO.

Committee on Law Reform Recommends This to Ontario Bar Association.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—"A divorce court should be established in the Province of Ontario."

That was one of the suggestions made by the Committee on Law Reform in a report presented at the meeting of the Ontario Bar Association this morning.

"It should have power to dissolve marriages on the same basis as similar courts in England.

"Already this season nineteen applications for divorce have been submitted to the Dominion Parliament, and, if the principle is to be thus admitted a regular court should be instituted for the trial of such cases."

Montreal, Que., Dec. 28.—One of the biggest cocking mains ever held in this Province was pulled off on Christmas night at Mascouche, on the Quebec line of the C.P.R., 27 miles from Montreal. There were 80 pairs of game birds fighting, that commenced at midnight Sunday, and lasted until the crowd of "sports" that went out from Montreal had to leave to catch the afternoon train from Quebec Monday afternoon.

The cockpit was on the top floor of a hotel, where a temporary bar had been erected. A gambling wheel was in operation and a crap game was conducted.

Germany's Progress Unparalleled Under Present Fiscal System

Secretary for Interior in Reichstag Shows that National Fortune has Increased by Five Hundred Million Dollars in Past Decade.

Berlin, Dec. 24.—Striking facts and figures illustrating the benefits which Germany had derived from protection were presented to the Reichstag by secretary of the Interior, Herr Delbrueck, in the course of a spirited defence against the attacks of free trade radicals and socialists in connection with the prices of meat.

The minister declared that the value of the protective system could not be judged by theoretical considerations, but only by its success. Could it be contended that the fiscal system of thirty years' standing, under which the national fortune in the past decade had increased by five hundred million dollars, was wrong? Could a system be false under which, during the same period and notwithstanding that the population had grown at the rate of 300,000 a year, there had been such abundance of wages and employment opportunities that immigration had almost ceased?

"I do not need to remind the house," continued the minister, "that our fiscal policy enabled us up to the year 1907 to devote over two hundred million dollars to the amelioration of the social conditions of the working classes, of which seventy-five millions came directly from the pocket of the empire. It is not true that the condition o our working classes has grown worse in recent times. Our impartial economist Calwer has calculated that while German wages from 37½ per cent. between 1906 and 1910, the aggregate cost of living of the working man increased by only 22½ per cent. The German working man may be paying more for bread and meat, but their quality at the same time has risen considerably.

"Our famous economist, Professor Adolf Wagner, who cannot be accused of hostility to the working class, has rightly said that no other nation enjoyed such development as the German during the nineteenth century, and none indulges itself more in enjoyments of all kinds in all its classes from the highest to the lowest, from the working man to the capitalist."

The minister concluded: "No passing phase of theoretical generalities will move us from the fiscal policy which has brought us to the pinnacle. I can only hope that the German nation will possess the insight to send us another Reichstag which will enable us to perpetuate the fiscal policy of the past."

SOURCES OF BRITAIN'S BREAD.

During the British elections, the Manchester Guardian published a table showing the sources of wheat and flour consumed in the United Kingdom. In the period between 1898 and 1902 the United States were far ahead of all other sources of supply, their contributions being 14,500,000 quarters annually. In the period between 1906 and 1910 the American contributions had fallen to 7,358,66 quarters. This bears out the common belief that consumption in the United States is overtaking production, and that exportation will soon come to an end unless vigorous means are adopted for increasing the fertility of the soil.

Rather than adopt this course, the American farmer prefers to move on to fresh fields and pastures green, and this explains the migration to Canada, which still has many millions of new acres available for wheat-growing. There is already a demand among American millers for Canadian wheat, and this demand will grow. Canada is among the countries which are taking the place of the United States as providers for the United Kingdom. In the period between 1898 and 1902 we supplied, on an average, two million quarters a year. Between 1906 and 1910 the annual average was 3,877,947 quarters. This latter figure only faintly indicates the movement. It is only in very recent years that there has been a large immigration into the Canadian West, and wheat raising is still in its infancy. In a very few years the export of Canadian wheat to the United Kingdom will surpass that of the United States.

We have some formidable rivals. The South American countries show an increase much greater than ours, namely, from 2,250,000 quarters to 4,429,206 quarters. Russia's contribution has been trebled, and that of India doubled. It is noted by the Manchester Guardian that while Canada ranks only tenth in production, she ranks fourth in exportation, showing that production very largely obtains consumption. Production in the United Kingdom is almost stationary, and in the years between 1906 and 1910 stood at 7,350,000 quarters, about one-fifth of the whole amount consumed, while 17,433,043 quarters come from foreign sources, and 9,060,000 from the colonies and India. The foreign supply is about the same in the later as in the earlier period. The colonial and Indian supply has been nearly trebled.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

his were only a day's march from the city.

The Furies must have chosen that date. The Nana, the man who thought himself fit to be a king, decided that Havelock would turn back if there were no more English left in Cawnpore! So as a preliminary to the greater tragedy, five men who had escaped death thus far—no one knows whence two of them came—were brought forth and slaughtered at the feet of the renowned Peishwa. Then a squad of sepoys were told to "shoot all the women and children in the Bibigarh through the windows of the house."

Poor wretches—they were afraid to refuse, yet their gorge rose at the deed, and they fired at the ceiling! Such weakness was annoying to the puissant Brahmin. He selected two Mohammedan butchers, an Afghan, and two out-caste Hindus, to do his bidding. Armed with long knives, these five fiends entered the shambles. Alas how can the scene that followed be described!

Yet, not even then was the sacrifice complete. Some who were wounded but not killed, a few children who crept under the garments of their dead mothers lived until the morning. Not all the native soldiers were so lost to human sympathies that they did not shudder at the groans and muffled cries that came all night from the house of sorrows. Some of them have left records of sights and sounds too horrible to translate from their Eastern tongue.

But the rumble of distant guns told the destroyer that his short-lived hour of triumph was nearly sped. In a paroxysm of rage and fear, he gave the final order, and the Well of Cawnpore thereby attained its ghastly immortality. By his command all that piteous company of women and children, the living and the dead together, were thrown into a deep well that stood in the garden of Bibigarh—the House of the Woman.

It was thus that Nana Sahib strove to cloak his crime. Yet never did foul murderer flaunt deed more glaringly in the face of Heaven. Fifty years have passed, myriads of human beings have lived and died since the well swallowed the Nana's victims, but the memory of those gracious women, of those golden-haired children, of those dear little infants born while the guns thundered around the entrenchment, shall endure forever. The Nana sought oblivion and forgetfulness for his sin. He earned the anger of the gods and the malediction of the world, then and for all time.

CHAPTER VII.
To Lucknow

The tragedy of Massacre Ghat, intensified by the crowning infamy of the Well, brought a new element into the struggle. Hitherto not one European in a hundred in India regarded the Mutiny as other than a local, though serious, attempt to revive a fallen dynasty. The excesses at Meerut, Delhi, and other towns were looked upon as the work of unbridled mobs. Sepoys who revolted and shot their officers came under a different category to the slayers of tender women and children. But the planned and ordered treachery of Cawnpore changed all that. Thenceforth every British-born man in the country not only realized that the government had been forced into a Titanic contest, but he was also swayed by a personal and absorbing lust for vengeance. Officers and men, regulars and volunteers alike, took the field with the fixed intent of exacting an expiatory life for each hair on the head of those unhappy victims. And they kept the vow they made. To this day, though half a century has passed, the fertile plain of the Doab—that great tract between the Ganges and the Jumna—is dotted with the ruins of gutted towns and depopulated villages. But that was not yet. India was fated to be almost lost before it was won again.

On the night of June 4th, when the roomy budgerow carrying Winifred Mayne and her escort drifted away from the walls of the Nana's palace at Bithoor, there was not a breath of wind on the river. The mat sail was useless, but a four-mile-an-hour current carried the unwieldy craft slowly down stream, and there was not the slightest doubt in the minds of either of the Englishmen on board as to their course of action.

Mr. Mayne was acquainted with Cawnpore and Sir Hugh Wheeler was an old friend of his.

"Wheeler has no great force at his disposal," said he to Malcolm. "It is evident that the native regiments have just broken out here, but, by this time, our people in the cantonment must have heard of events elsewhere, and they have surely seized the Magazine, which is well fortified and stands on the river. If I can believe a word that the Nana said, the sepoys will rush off to Delhi to-night, just as they did at Meerut, Aligarh, and Etawah. I am convinced that our best plan is to hug the right bank and disembark near the Magazine."

"Is it far?" asked Malcolm.

"Almost eight miles."

"I wonder why the Begum was so insistent that we should go back along the Grand Trunk Road?"

Mayne hesitated. He knew that Winifred was listening.

"It is hard to account for the vagaries of a woman's mind, or, shall I say, of the mind of such a woman," he answered lightly. "You will remember that when you came to our assistance outside Meerut she was determined to take us, willy-nilly, to Delhi."

Malcolm, who had heard Roshkara's impassioned speech and looked into her blazing eyes, thought that her motives were stronger than mere caprice. He never dreamed of the true reason, but he feared that she knew Cawnpore had fallen and her curiously friendly regard for himself might have inspired her advice. Here again, Winifred's presence tied his tongue.

"Well," he said, with a cheerless laugh, "I, at any rate, must endeavor to reach Wheeler. I am supposed to be bearing despatches, but they were taken from me when I was knocked off my horse in the village—"

"Were you attacked?" asked Winifred, and the quiet solicitude in her voice was sweetest music in her lover's ears.

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields,

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayneite, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing naggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quarts pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

AN OLD PROSPECTOR

Around the British Empire in the Hunt For Gold

Brown visaged, with keen, observant eyes and an active form, Mr. Robert P. Banner, one of the men who have prospected for and mined gold in most parts of the Empire, is now in London.

"I had a good deal to do with the natives," Mr. Banner says, "especially those from Lake Mitsani and Nyassaland. They told me of a people who were there in the days of their forefathers, with whom, as their legends declare, they fought a great war. They say they were not white people, and from their general description I should think they were Arabs.

"We found many curious things, indicating beyond dispute an ancient civilization. For instance, at one place where I was prospecting we broke into gold workings that must have been thousands of years old. There were great masses of slag, also, such as one finds in the neighborhood of iron foundries, and huge crucibles which had been used for separating gold from dross. Apparently they had worked in a similar manner to ourselves, for there were lumps of slag the shape of the crucibles, from which the metal had been abstracted by precipitation. Our crucibles are no improvement on those I found there, which were practically indestructible."

Mr. Banner had some exciting experiences in the wilder parts of the American continent, and on Christmas Eve in 1883 witnessed a murder and lynching at Durango, which was then a township of La Plata, Colorado, chiefly inhabited by men of the tough est kind.

"On Christmas Eve, 1883, at Durango," he said, "everything was going on very pleasantly, when suddenly a shot was heard, and a man from Lake City fell dead. The murderer walked coolly out of the door unmolested, but the Marshall shouted, 'A hundred dollars reward for the man who arrests the murderer—Big Charlie is the man.'

"It was not long before Big Charlie was grappled into the calaboose, or jail, with a couple of men armed with winchesters, to keep him safe.

"Then the dead man was rolled into a corner of the saloon, covered with a cloth from the billiard table, and five minutes afterwards the floor manager yelled, 'Gentlemen, please select your partners for a quadrille.' And the ball went on as merrily as if the man had not been killed.

"Next evening forty or fifty of the Vigilance Committee, headed by Judge Lynch, took Big Charlie from the jail led him to a pine tree, and made him mount three boxes that had been placed under the boughs.

"'You're going to die,' said the captain of the Vigilance Committee, 'to killing a man without giving him a chance to defend himself. Have you anything to say?'

"'Yes,' replied the doomed man. 'I will give you the address of my mother and sister in Ohio. Tell them what happened, and say whisky was the cause of the whole thing.'

A TONKIN AMAZON.

The Remarkable Wife of a Notorious Rebel.

Fourteen followers or accomplices of the rebel De Tham, who still defies the French in the fastnesses of Tonkin, arrived at Marseilles on their way to the convict station of French Guiana. Among them is a woman. She is Thy Ba, De Tham's second wife, an altogether remarkable person. Her age is about 30. Imperious and cruel, this woman fought by her husband's side in all his battles with the French troops, and exercised great influence over him. She strenuously opposed the release of the Frenchman Voisin—who had been kidnapped by De Tham—and urged that his head should be struck off. It was by a mere chance that she was captured. The French troops, victors in a skirmish, were searching the bandit's lair. Thy Ba had taken refuge in a thicket into which a passing soldier drove his bayonet. There was a howl. Thy Ba had betrayed herself. On the voyage this woman's word was law to her fellow prisoners, all of them men. She maintained an iron discipline over them in the improvised cell in which they were kept, and which they were only allowed to leave twice a day. She distributed their food to them and regulated all the details of their daily life on board. When the vessel reached port it was she who led the captives as they stepped ashore.

AN ACCOMMODATING FLAG

"The King of the Cocos Islands," who died the other day, came of a stock that would have done credit to the old Scottish clan system. The original "king" was king in more than name, but he preferred to be like an old time Highland chief. So he came voluntarily under the shelter of the British flag, and remained king all the same. It is a most accommodating bit of bunting is the British flag.

ORFORD'S CENTENARIAN DOCTOR

Mr. Robert Mills, a former Orford surgeon, has entered on his 100th year, having been born on July 10, 1810. He was skilled in midwifery, and although he attended 3,000 births, he never lost one mother. He attended at a birth when he was 92.

THOSE BIG HATS

The "Man in the Seat Behind" is up in arms in the religious papers against the enormous hats worn in church by ladies. "For many Sundays past," he says, "I can truthfully declare that, except at quite early services, I have seen neither priest nor altar, chancel nor choir, pulpit nor preacher. My outlook is entirely bounded by rows of enormous hats."

WRITER OF "KELLY"

The Author, a Glasgow Man, Died in Tragic Circumstances

The author and composer of "Kelly" has just died in tragic circumstances. His name was Will Letters, and he was known throughout the music-hall profession as a man of many admirable traits. He started his career on the stage at the modest end of the business, and attained some eminence as a comedian.

For several years he has appeared with the Pierrots at various summer resorts, and he was thus engaged when attacked with a fatal hemorrhage of the lungs. It occurred last week when he was at work in his white suit and painted face. He lurched forward, and was carried out to await the arrival of the doctor. He became delirious at a later stage, and rambled furiously about songs he was to write.

Letters was one of a school of comedians who had their first successes in the singing rooms "sing songs" they were called—of the North of England. Possessed of a good, strong voice says the Daily Sketch, he first of all made descriptive songs his specialty, but in later years he developed low comedy.

He was engaged successfully in various pantomime productions in England, Ireland, and Scotland, and for a time played the part of Sergeant Lightning in Fred Karno's "Dandy Thieves." He also appeared in succession to Fred Kitchen, as John Willie Jaggs in "Saturday to Monday."

With a certain gift of melody he put together a number of music-hall song successes and provided Wilkie Bard with one of his greatest pantomime hits, "Put me on an island where the girls are few," which was wedded to a garbled version of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

Later he wrote "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" a song which became so popular as to be a nuisance. The song was taken to Canada and the United States and was the rage of the last song season. His latest success was "Flanagan," which Miss Florrie Forde sang at the Isle of Man. He was engaged on other numbers at the time of his sudden and fatal indisposition.

He was a Glasgow man, and something of a favorite in that city. Following upon several years' approved appearances in pantomime, he had been re-engaged as chief comedian at one of the Birmingham theatres next season.

MILLIONAIRES' DISPLAY

Ten Thousand Pounds Spent Ove Grouse Shooting

Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, the millionaire, who derives his wealth from banking and railway enterprise, is illustrating the pitch of costliness to which sport in England may attain. Mr. Whitney has laid out about $50,000 upon the grouse shooting over the Holwick Moors.

Mr. Whitney left New York on August 13th by the White Star liner Celtic, and disembarked at Holyhead. With him travelled Mrs. Whitney, their two children, and a number of sportsmen he has brought over for the grouse shooting, a party.

Mr. H. Burden, Mr. Payne Thompson, and several other well-known "New Yorkers" travelled in luxuriant style and occupied the private suites specially fitted, and for which a charge of $700 each is reported to have been made. The sitting rooms in the suites were decorated daily with choice flowers, for which Mrs. Whitney paid $200 before leaving New York.

During the early part of the voyage the millionaires' party kept to their own rooms, but later on dined in the saloon and entered upon an exchange of socialities with other passengers.

Mrs. Whitney, who is a daughter of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and is said to be worth a couple of millions in her own right, appeared in a number of magnificent costumes during the voyage, and on one occasion wore a diamond necklace worth $50,000. Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, like his father, the late Mr. Charles Whitney, one time Secretary to the American Navy, during the Administration of President Cleveland, is a keen sportsman, and keeps the best racing stable in the States.

SHOULD DOCTORS SHAVE?

A Question Which Has been Discussed for 300 Years

The question, which has been discussed for some three hundred years, as to whether the doctor, and more especially the surgeon, should sacrifice that playground of microbes—his beard—is once more to the fore, especially in France, says The Hospital. It is more than probable that everyone interested will act according to his own particular fancy in this matter, and it will probably be a long time before our Gallic confreres will be forced to sacrifice the glories of their facial decorations on the altar of hygiene. Those who have embarked upon the present crusade attack the problem from a somewhat different standpoint, and although the bacteriology of the beard has not as yet been the object of very profound study, their ideas are not unreasonable. Still, without being as radical as they would like, is it not possible that the sanctity of the laws of hygiene can be respected by the use of ordinary measures of cleanliness, or, at most, an antiseptic beard-bath?

PIGEON'S LONG TRAVELS

A homing pigeon liberated from Stafford on July 22, alighted on the liner Laurentic soon after it got out to sea on its last outward passage, and the bird was taken to Montreal, returning with the vessel to Liverpool. It was then thrown into the air with a label attached to its leg by the ship's officers, and it was found by its owner in the loft at Sowerby Bridge.

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville ?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many fold in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark ?

Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of transportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constrdcted from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

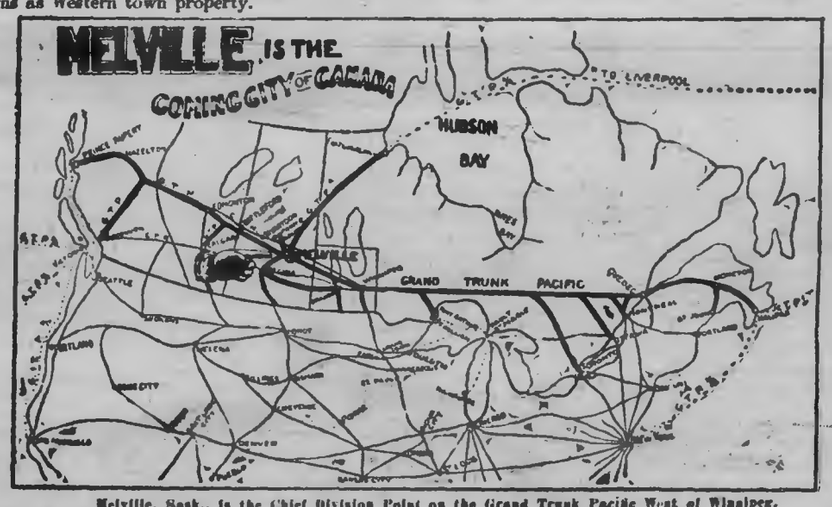
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by wsrehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enfoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West ol Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more premising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1.214.000. for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Rosslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

WANTS A THOUSAND CATS.

Western Farmer to Use Them in War on Gophers.

Sharon, Pa., Dec. 24.—Squire S. S. Gilbert of this place has received a request from the State of Washington for 1,000 cats.

The request is made in a letter from Albert J. Randall, formerly of Sharon, but now of Okanogon county in the western state. He writes that he will visit Pennsylvania within a month to pick up all the stray cats that can be delivered to him, for which he is willing to pay a fair price.

Mr. Randall has associated with him a number of property owners, determined to rid Okanogon county of gophers that destroy gardens and farm lands in that section of the state. Five thousand cats are to be shipped to Washington by April 1.

New Wharf at Little Lake.

The Dominion Government through the Hon. J. R. Stratton have just completed a fine wharf on Little Lake at the foot of Mark Street. It will be a great convenience to the business community of Ashburnham as well as to pleasure seekers. The wharf is constructed of a crib work of ten inch timber, and is filled with gravel, and finished with cement. It is one hundred and eighty feet long by fifty feet wide. It is one of the best wharves on the Trent waterway.

Mr. F. C. Downey, Campbellford, is in the city.

MAN SEARCHING FOR JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, SHOT AT THE KEEPER OF HIS ESTATE.

Police on the Search—"Get That Maniac" is the Command—Intruder Refused to Heed Challenge After Climbing Wall.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 27.—"Get that maniac," was the order given to the Cleveland police today when a hunt was begun for a man who exchanged a number of shots last night with Bert Knapp, keeper of John D. Rockefeller's Forest Hill estate, and Marshall Stamberger, of East Cleveland, while he evidently thought he was shooting at Mr. Rockefeller.

After emptying his revolver the man fled through the grounds, and the police this morning tried to trace the footsteps.

BUDGET WILL BE POSTPONED.

Canada May Grant Concessions to Uncle Sam in Tariff Negotiations.

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, returned to the department yesterday. He came back sooner than intended because a conference with his colleagues was made necessary by the demands of the Western Grain Growers.

It is said he will go to Washington to resume reciprocity negotiations next month, and that the Budget speech will be postponed till afterwards. It is understood also that a treaty will be pressed more urgently and greater concessions made by Canada on account of the farmers' deputation.

FLY FROM DETROIT TO CLEVELAND.

Without Stopping Attempts Will be Made by a Cleveland Man.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 26.—H. D. Gould, civil engineer, of Cleveland, and M. C. Thomas, of Detroit, have completed the construction of a monoplane with which Mr. Gould will make an attempt to fly from Detroit to Cleveland in one flight. He expects to be able to go 60 miles an hour, and thinks the machine will be able to ascend at starting without the long run on the ground required by some machines.

NEW STEAMSHIPS.

Impressed with the splendid service offered by the Grand Trunk Pacific boats.

The new steamships of the Grand Trunk Pacific Coast Steamship Co., operating between Seattle, Victoria, Vancouver, Prince Rupert, and the Portland Canal, are receiving pleasing encomiums regarding the service they are offering.

At Grand Trunk Pacific headquarters a letter has been received from a prominent member of the Government which reads as follows:

"I made so enjoyable a trip on the steamer 'Prince Rupert' to the north and return that I cannot allow the occasion to pass without congratulating you on the splendid service of that steamer.

"Capt. Johnson and his officers are a fine lot of men, and the service and attention on the vessel are all that can be desired."

Another letter which came in by the same mail from a prominent traveller, and which was unsolicited reads as follows:

"Along with a couple of friends of mine I travelled to Prince Rupert early in October, and I feel that it would be lacking in appreciation not to let you know how much we were impressed with the magnificent steamships you have on that route. The appointments, food, and service, we found all that could be desired, and as one of the party stated "This is the finest steamship (Prince George) I have ever had the good fortune to travel on, the service the best, and the trip the most interesting I have ever had."

Annual School Concert of S.S. No. 2 Smith.

The annual school entertainment and Christmas tree of S.S. No. 2, Smith, was held in the Temperance Hall on the evening of December 22. A large number of parents and friends of the children were present and the hall was filled to its capacity. The affair was a decided success from both a financial and entertaining standpoint. The programme was varied and well prepared and highly enjoyed by all present.

The Chairman, Mr. Broderick, inspector of schools for part of Peterborough county, and part of Victoria ably presided at the concert. In a neat speech he expressed his pleasure at being present and meeting with the parents and friends of the children and testing the abilities of the children in other relationships than were connected with school work.

NEW STATION FOR GUELPH.

While in the West last week, First Vice President Fitzhugh met a committee representing the city of Guelph, and after several hours deliberation settled the long standing question of a new station, sub-ways and track elevation which has been up on and off for the past ten years.

Under the arrangement made, the Grand Trunk has to pay the city $9000, and has to construct a foot subway at Neeve St. On the other hand the city is to transfer to the Grand Trunk, Jubilee Park, one block west of the present station. Here the new station is to be erected.

A number of minor matters were settled involving the surrender by the Grand Trunk of a narrow strip of land near the old station, and the transfer to the Grand Trunk by the city of certain territory for freight facilities south of the new station. Also the city surrenders to the company certain lands which have been used by the city either for sites or lots, but which really was the property of the Grand Trunk.

All the members of the Committee expressed their satisfaction with the outcome of the negotiations.

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $15 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

Live Geese as Decoys.

George Carruthers, of Winnipeg, has trained some live geese as decoys and they act most effectively. The geese appear to know that they are safe however fierce may be the cannonade, and accordingly they continue to call down the passing flocks by every goosey wile of which they are capable. Many offers have been made for the use of these trained decoys, but their owner prefers to keep them under the cover of his own gun.

Was Fined $2.00.

Fred Stephens, the young man who was blazing away with a shotgun on Monday night, claimed when brought before the police magistrate that he could not remember anything about the shooting. As previously stated some of the shot went through a window of the house opposite and might have injured a young girl who was sleeping in the room. He seemed to realize the seriousness of his action and said it would be a lesson to him he would never forget. He was let off with a fine of $2.00.

MCWHINNIE—BALL.

One of the prettiest house weddings of the season was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at the handsome residence of Mr. Robert McWhinnie, 543 Harvey street, when his daughter Effie I., was joined in marriage to Mr. Frank W. Ball, of Kerrobert, Sask.

Rev. I. Couch, of George Street Methodist Church, officiated. The contracting parties were unattended. To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Letitia Elliott, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the parlor. The ceremony was performed under a large arch of evergreens and roses, with a background of palms. The bride looked graciously charming in a becoming suit of white liberty satin, with the usual bridal veil caught with orange blossoms from California.

At the conclusion of the ceremony all partook of a dainty wedding luncheon, Mr. T. H. Hooper catered.

The house throughout was tastefully adorned with evergreens, holly, roses and palms.

Mr. and Mrs. Ball left on the 5.20 G.T.R. for an extended wedding trip before taking up residence at Kerrobert, Sask.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in a gown of white silk covered with point d'esprit lace, and entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Wilson. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the spacious dining room, where a dainty repast was served. The happy couple left on the noon train for Peterborough, where the groom has a lucrative position. Miss Sherbino was very popular here, as was testified by the number of beautiful and costly presents which were showered upon her, including a present from the choir and Young People's Guild of Cooke's Church, of which she was a member.

WINDSOR—LARUSH.

A quiet wedding took place on Monday evening at seven o'clock, when Miss Charlotte Larush was united in marriage to Mr. James Windsor.

THE MAPLE LEAF.

When It Was Adopted As Our Emblem.

Stewart Paterson, senior chaplain of the Red River expedition of 1870, says, that the Maple Leaf was the recognized emblem of Canada long before 1860, the date claimed for its first recognition. On the initiative of the late Dr. Richardson, of Toronto, he as secretary of a patriotic association of Peterborough in 1868, designed a badge on which there was a wreath of maple leaves. He also wrote verses mentioning the maple leaf and ranking it with the rose, shamrock and thistle.—From "Opportunity."

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

City Fathers Wind Up Business for 1910

Ald. Phelan Suggests That Mayor and Finance Chairman Serve on Board of Water Commissioners, Ex-Officio

The City Council of 1910 met in final session last night.

There were present Mayor Morrow and Aldermen Batten, Turner, Gillespie, Buller, Graham, Metheral, Bradburn, Duncan, Phelan, Duffus, Hicks and Morgan.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

The City Fathers first met in Committee of the whole, when his worship asked his colleagues' approval of the city's bill to be submitted at the next meeting of the Legislature for ratification of the following measures:

By-laws to fix the assessments of B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., and the Peterborough Lock Mfg. Co.; to aid the Bonner-Worth Co.; to grant a street franchise to Chas. E. Dittman Co., re natural gas. For permission to apply to other purposes a balance of $4,041.27, voted for specified bridge and road work a few years ago. To sanction the incorporation of the Peterborough Protestant Home and the raising by debentures of $10,000 for building in conjunction with the Peterborough Protestant Home Board, a new home for Protestant poor; to permit of taxing Protestants and Roman Catholics separately for the maintenance of the poor sent to either the House of Providence or the new home for Protestant paupers by the Council under the direction of its Charity Board. Also to sanction the conveyance to the Peterborough Cereal Co. of a deed for the water front property they filled in, on payment of $1,000 (Part of this Company's building is erected on the land in question.)

The application for legislation as above outlined was unanimously acquiesced in by the Council as a whole.

THE WATER WORKS BOARD.

Ald. Phelan offered that there seems to prevail amongst citizens the opinion that they are not properly represented on the Board of Water Commissioners. He suggested that as the feeling of unrest exists in this connection, legislation be applied for to permit of the Mayor and possibly the city's Finance Minister being members of that Board ex-officio.

Ald. Bradburn replied that Council had better wait until after the elections before going into this matter. Should there be any feeling of unrest regarding the water works question, it will be demonstrated in the election of water commissioners.

The Council will wait before taking action on Ald. Phelan's suggestion.

A QUESTION OF SEWERS.

Ald. Hicks here offered that legislation was needed to better facilitate a more general construction of sewers. A two-third majority vote, representing 50 per cent. of the property affected, is at present required before new sewer construction can be undertaken. In the laying of water mains, however, a frontage tax can be charged against vacant property adjacent to such mains. And as sewers and water mains run practically on parallel lines he could not understand why the former work should require a two-third vote, representing 50 per cent. of the property affected, while no such restrictions are placed upon the latter. The worthy chairman of the Board of Works thought there was room for legislation in this connection, and he is right, too.

WHERE TO VOTE.

Ald. Hicks moved, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the city advertise the boundaries of the different wards together with their polling places, for the guidance of voters at the election on Monday.
—Carried.

FINANCE REPORT.

Ald. Bradburn, the capable chairman of the Finance Committee, submitted the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1.—That the City Treasurer be instructed to pay to the Water Commissioners the proceeds of the $20,000 for water works debentures which have been sold.

2.—That the matter of the price of the pipes for the sewer in the south-western section of the city be left with the Mayor and Engineers to adjust.

3.—That a number of accounts be paid.

The report was adopted as read.

Ald. Hicks had no doubt but what Ald. Bradburn would be a member of the Council next year, and he hoped he would see that the $20,000 referred to in his report are applied to water mains extension.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Ald. Duncan, the Property Committee's energetic chairman, reported the proceedings of his committee's meeting as published elsewhere. The report was adopted.

Deputy Returning Officer Jas. Edgar having resigned to run for alderman, John Edgar was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Council here adjourned.

Caretaker for the Isolation Hospital

The Property Committee of the City Council met last night to consider the appointment of a caretaker for the New Isolation Hospital.

Chairman Ald. Duncan announced that there were eighteen applicants for the position and asked what action the committee wished to take in the matter.

It was decided to leave this question over for the new council to deal with.

The chairman was authorized to make provision for the hospital being properly taken care of until such time as a caretaker is appointed.

On motion of Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Bradburn, it was decided to have an electric bell or buzzer placed at the librarian's desk in the new public library, to connect with the boiler room.

A PLEASANT EVENING.

Enjoyed the Dance at Conservatory of Music.

The Conservatory of Music Hall which was very neatly decorated, was the scene on Wednesday evening last of a brilliant gathering of the belles and beaux of this city. The occasion was the dance given by the Gentlemen's Club of Peterborough. There were about one hundred couples present who evidently enjoyed themselves. Refreshments were served at midnight. The company continued to trip the "light fantastic" until the "wee sma' hours. The music was furnished by Fralick's orchestra, of Toronto.

Great credit is due the committee, Messrs. Ross Cameron, secretary, R. Davidson, W. Davidson, S. Rush, J. C. Wainwright, Keith G. Lech, Jas. Hamilton and J. Crane.

To The Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Having served during the past nine years as a Water Commissioner with that attention to duties which has, I hope, been of help to my co-commissioners, and of some service to the City, I am desirous of continuing for another term for what I believe will be considered as fairly sufficient reasons. The ratepayers are aware that the Commissioners have had during the past two years under construction for the City a new water works dam and pumping station, which with the additional pumping power now supplied will, I am sure, prove one of the most effective systems in Ontario. The contracts have not yet all been completed for these works, nor settlements made, nor has all fear of difficulties with contractors passed. My co-Commissioners are anxious that I should continue on the Board for they think that I would be of assistance in these matters from my necessarily intimate knowledge of circumstances surrounding these contracts.

I am inclined to think the ratepayers will approve of my course in presenting myself in view of what I have said, and therefore with some degree of confidence most respectfully ask for their support.

W. H. HILL

To The Ratepayers of West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Bonner-Worth By-law

If Peterborough is to Encourage New Industries in Any Way This Measure Should be Carried on Monday Next!

From the standpoint of securing new industries for Peterborough, it will be a calamity indeed should the ratepayers turn down the Bonner-Worth by-law on Monday next. If this city is not prepared to offer reasonable inducements for the acquisition of new manufacturing enterprises, there are many other cities and towns in Ontario that are vieing with each other in the race for new factories, and at a price that reduces the terms accepted by the Bonner-Worth people to a truly minimum figure compared with the premiums freely offering these days for similar acquisitions. The city will simply loan $10,000 or $12,000, free of interest for 10 or 12 years, properly secured by mortgage on land, buildings and fixed machinery. The loan will cost us $292 a year against the Company's annual expenditure in wages of at least $20,000. The School taxes on this property will amount to $100 per annum. Not to be prolix, this by-law has been well advertised, and citizens should be conversant with its provisions. The Company's future is assured, its stock was readily bought up, and that the capacity of the plant will be doubled within two years is warranted by the rapidly growing market for woolen yarn and the fact that but one other industry of this nature exists in Canada today. Other communities are anxious to secure this industry, and if our ratepayers don't want that initial expenditure in wages of between $20,000 and $25,000 a year, the Bonner-Worth Company need not go begging for a desirable location elsewhere. Apart from this, the moral effect of so reasonable a proposition being voted down would be disastrous. It would establish another precedent that Peterborough has no inducements to offer new factories. This is not a question of whether one believes in aiding new industries or not, on principle; but whether our ratepayers are compared to compete with all other cities and towns in the commendable enterprise of reaching out after additional manufactories. And as long as aiding new industries is recognized by municipalities and the legislature as a legitimate transaction, Peterborough must fall in in line with her sister municipalities or abandon all hope of further industrial expansion.

In conclusion, every city and town needs avenues of employment for girls as well as men, and the Bonner-Worth Co. while offering employment to a percentage of skilled men, will also train a number of female help in the skillful operation of machines by which they may be in a position to earn fair living wages. The prosperity of this community has been considerably enhanced by the establishment of more than one industry that, in affording good positions for girls, has opened the way for many an heretofore struggling family to live in comfortable circumstances and even to acquire property.

The Bonner-Worth By-law is a measure that should commend itself as strongly to all thinking ratepayers as it has to the city council without a single exception, and also to other leading citizens who are actively cooperating with the city fathers to assure its being carried out the polls. Vote for this By-law on Monday, and secure another promising industry for Peterborough, and encourage other factories to seek location in our midst.

COMMISSION SYSTEM GROWING.

The recent discussion at a recent Board of Trade meeting, and the paper read by Mr. W. H. Moore on "Commission Government," lends special interest to a list of commission cities and towns published in an American newspaper.

It appears that at the time the list was under preparation ninety-six cities and towns in the United States had adopted commission government.

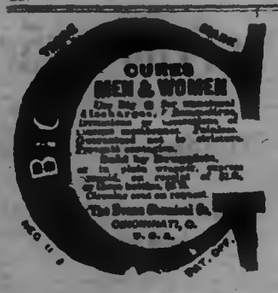
These ninety-six municipalities are distributed through twenty-three states—east, west, north and south. Texas, the pioneer, naturally leads with the largest number of commission cities, but Kansas is second, Oklahoma third and Iowa and South Dakota share the honors of the fourth place.

Improved and modern zed charters containing some of the features of commission rule are not included. The list is remarkable, but it does not really indicate the full strength and sweep of the movement in favor of simpler, more efficient, more businesslike municipal administration.

PROHIBITION IN NEW ZEALAND.

The war against the liquor traffic is taking a new form in the Dominion of New Zealand, and it is expected that the result will be either national or local prohibition, in forms which will lead the way for other sections of the Empire. A licensing bill now before the New Zealand Parliament contains these interesting provisions:

National prohibition is to be submitted as an issue at licensing polls; local no-license and national prohibition are to be carried be 55 per cent. of the votes' this percentage, according to a later message, has been raised to 60 per cent.) national prohibition is to come into force four years after its adoption at a poll, and local prohibition one year after adoption, if national prohibition is carried the subsequent votes (every three years) will be on national restoration, the 55 (60) per cent majority operating and licenses to be restored in three months, during national prohibition liquor is not to be imported, manufactured, or sold in New Zealand; breweries and "depots" within five miles of a no-license district are to be prohibited; there is no provision to prevent any increase in the existing number of licenses; the employment of barmaids is to be prohibited after June next, with certain exceptions; the axe under which it is illegal to serve youths is to be extended to 21.



THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

His brief recital of the night's adventures was followed by the story of the others' journey and detention at Bithoor. It may be thought that Mr. Mayne, with his long experience of India, should have read more clearly the sinister lesson to be derived from the treatment meted out that night to a British Officer by the detachment of sowars, amplified, as it was, by their open reference to the Nana as a Maharajah. But he was not yet disillusioned. And, if his judgment were at fault, he erred in good company, for Sir Henry Lawrence, Chief Commissioner at Lucknow, was even then resisting the appeals, the almost insubordinate urging, of the headstrong Martin Gubbins that the sepoys in the capital of Oudh should be disarmed.

Meanwhile the boat lurched onward. Soon a red glow in the sky proclaimed that they were nearing Cawnpore. Though well aware that European houses were on fire, they were confident that the Magazine would be held. They helped Akbar Khan, Chumru, and the two troopers to rig a pair of long sweeps, and prepared to guide the budgerow to the landing-place.

Winifred was stationed at the rudder. As it chanced the three sowars took one oar and Chumru helped the sahibs with the other, and the two sets of rowers were partly screened from each other by the horses. Malcolm was saying something to Winifred when the native bent near him and whispered:

"Talk on, sahib, but listen! Your men intend to jump ashore and leave you. They have been bitten by the wolf. Don't try to stop them. Name of Allah, let them go!"

Frank's heart throbbed under this dramatic development. He had no reason to doubt his servant's statement. The faithful fellow had nursed him through a fever with the devotion of a brother, and Malcolm had reciprocated this fidelity by refusing to part with him when he, in turn, was stricken down by smallpox. In fact, Frank was the only European in Meerut who would employ the man, whose extraordinary appearance went against him. Cross-eyed, wide-mouthed, and broken-nosed, with a straggling black beard that ill concealed the tokens on his face of the dread disease from which he had suffered, Chumru looked a cut-throat of the worst type, "a hungry, lean-fac'd villain, a mere anatomy." Aware of his own ill repute, he made the most of it. He tied his turban with an aggressive twist, and was wont to scowl so vindictively at the mess khamaamah that his master, quite unconsciously, always secured the wing of a chicken or the best cut of the joint.

Yet this gnome-like creature was true as to his salt at a time when he must have felt that his sahib, together with every other sahib in India, was doomed; his eyes now shot fiery, oblique, shafts of indignation as he muttered his thrilling news.

Malcolmn did not attempt to question him. He glanced at the sowars, and saw that their carbines were slung across their shoulders. Chumru interpreted the look correctly.

"Akbab Khan prevented those Shia dogs from shooting you and Mayne-sahib," went on the low murmur. "They said, huzoor, that the Nana wanted the miss-sahib, and that they were fools to help you in taking her away, but Akbab Khan swore he would fight on your honor's side if they unsiung their guns. They do not know I heard them as I was sitting behind the mast and I took care to creep off when their heads were turned toward the shore."

"Here we are," cried Mayne, who little guessed what Chumru's mumbling portended. "There is the ghat. If it were not for the mist we could see the Magazine just below, on the left."

Assuredly, Frank Malcolm's human clay was being tested in the furnace that night. He had to decide instantly what line to follow. In a minute or less the boat would bump against the lowermost steps, and, if Akbab Khan and his companions were, indeed traitors, the others on board were completely at their mercy. Mayne was unarmed. Chumru's fighting equipment lay wholly in his aspect, while Malcolm's revolvers were in the holsters, and his sword was tied to Najdi's saddle, its scabbard and belt having been thrown aside while Abdul Haq was robbing him.

The broad-beamed budgerow presented a strangely accurate microcosm of India at that moment. The English people on her deck were numerically inferior to the natives and deprived by accident of the arms that might have equalised matters. Their little army was breathing mutiny, but was itself divided, if Chumru were not mistaken, seeing that all were for revolt, but one held out that the Feringhis' lives should be spared. And, even there, the cruel dilemma that offered itself to the ruler of every European community in the country was not to be avoided, for, if Malcolm tried to obtain his weapons his action might be the signal for a murderous attack, while, if he made no move, he left it entirely at the troopers' discretion whether or not he and Mayne should be shot down without the power to strike a blow in self defence.

Luckily he had the gift of prompt decision that is nine-tenths of general ship. Saying not a word to alarm Mayne, who was still weak from the wound received an hour earlier, he crossed the deck, halting on the way to rub Najdi's black muzzle.

The sowars were watching him. With steady thrust of the port sweep they were heading the budgerow toward the ghat.

He went nearer and caught the end of the heavy oar.

"Pull hard, now," he said encouragingly, "and we will be out of the current."

He was facing the three men, and his order was a quite natural one under the circumstances. Obviously, he meant to help. Stretching their arms for a long and strong stroke, they laid on with a will. Instantly, he pressed the oar downwards, thus forcing the blade out of the water, and threw all his strength into its unexpected yielding. Before they could so much as utter a yell, Akbab Khan and another were swept headlong into the river, while the third man lay on the deck.

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2.625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayafiete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

TREASON IN INDIA

Sentences on Eleven Bengalee Plotters at Calcutta

The special tribunal of the High Court at Calcutta has sentenced eleven Bengalees of the better class who were concerned in the Khulna conspiracy to terms of transportation varying from seven to three years. The charge on which they were tried was one of conspiracy to wage war on the King-Emperor. In summing up for the prosecution, the Advocate-General of Bengal contended that the evidence proved the existence of a secret society, or combination of individuals, with the common purpose of overthrowing the British Government in India. Their operations were not confined to the city of Calcutta, but extended to the villages of Paikpara, Dulgram, Sholpur Agra, and other places in the districts of Khulna and Jessore. The transported men are all persons with some education, and superior in position to the masses of the people.

When these Bengalees were arrested a large quantity of seditious literature was found at their houses. Several documents dealt with the preparation of bombs, and contained hints about explosives which it was dangerous to manufacture. All the evidence pointed to their being engaged in an extensive conspiracy to overthrow British rule in India.

WRITES OF HABITANTS

What a Correspondent Says of French Canadians

R. E. Vernede, writing to The Daily Chronicle from Montreal, says in part:

The "Habitants" probably are the most prolific people in the world Years ago the Government had to drop the free grants to families consisting of twelve or more children, for the simple, but amazing, reason that the grants were taken up by thousands and thousands. The withdrawal of the bounty has not, it seems, affected the increase of population, and the next census is likely to see the ratio maintained. No other people can compete with them if this continues—except by immigration; and a Scotch Canadian assured me recently that the "habitants" hate to see the emigrant ships arrive at Quebec, because it means peopling from outside of land that they of themselves could in due course people from within.

EMPTY CRADLES

Father Vaughan Says Low Birth Rate is "Simply Appalling"

Father Vaughan, speaking in London, referred to the fall in the birth rate, more especially among the well to-do and leisured classes. The decreases from 37 and 38 to 24 and 25 per 1,000 was simply appalling in one generation. In the slums of the City and East-end life was teeming while in the squares of the West-end life was declining. Its cradles were as empty as its churches. Married life was fast ceasing to be recognized as a divine institution—a contract binding man and wife till the hand of death did them part. They were preparing material in England for a history of "The Decline and Fall of the British Empire," and he much feared it would be a far sadder story than the Roman one told by Gibbon.—The Chronicle.

A VULTURE ESCAPED

While an attendant in the Glasgow Zoo was cleaning out one of the bird cages the other day a large bird of the vulture species escaped, and, falling a victim to the prevailing craze for aviation, winged its way out of the building. It got on to the house-tops of the district and flew in a westerly direction. A large crowd gathered and followed the escaped bird. The attendant offered two shillings to anyone who would recapture the fowl and many tried to lay hands on it. After being at liberty for a considerable time, and apparently having had quite enough of the view of Glasgow's roofs, the bird permitted itself to be caught.

TATTOOED BY LIGHTNING

Two men named Caspian and Smith were killed by lightning and another badly injured at Linton, England. The men, who were fishing, took shelter from the storm under a larch bush, where they were struck by a flash of lightning. Two were killed instantly, and the third was much burned, but was breathing, and was revived with the aid of artificial respiration. The men killed were marked on the body with the exact representation of the bush, and a boy with them had imprinted on his back a representation of a tree near by. He was uninjured except for shock.

THE LARGEST CRAB

The largest crab in the world, a specimen of the giant spider crab from Japan, is at the Museum of Natural History, New York. The spread of the two largest legs, or arms, having sawlike teeth, called "pincers," is nearly twelve feet, and the body portion is over one foot in diameter and about the size of a large dinner-plate. The monster crab inhabits the sea and islands of Japan, and is known to occur at depths of over two thousand feet.

ESCAPES BEAR HUG

Harold Lozo, a lad of thirteen, living with his uncles, the Fleming brothers, near Star City, Saskatchewan, was attacked by a bear. He had been sent on an errand to a neighbor's, was returning, and had just reached a bridge over a creek which crosses the farm. Hearing something behind him the lad turned in time to see a huge black bear at his very heels. Harold drew his knife and had it half open when the bear rose on its hind legs and grabbed for him, knocking the knife out of his hand. The boy immediately dropped into the creek, and being a swimmer, dived under the bridge, bravely fooling the bear and thus saving his life.

Apparently the bear had been lying in a bluff near the trail, and seeing the boy pass, had followed him, catching him at the bridge. Bruin gave two or three growls of disappointment and finally walked away. Chase was immediately given but no bear could be found.

The berries being scarce this year, bears are getting bold and hungry. Harold's overalls and shirt were torn by the claws of the animal, otherwise he is none the worse for his adventure.

OYSTER SHELL SCALES

While looking over several young orchards in the southern districts of Hastings, Mr. O. D. McIntosh, Stirling, says he finds a great many dead and dying trees. Many of them are badly affected with oyster shell scales and the egg masses of the apple tent are very abundant, and unless something is done before next summer the trees will no doubt suffer severely. The green apple aphis is a serious pest this summer. The growth of young wood this year, in most cases, is excessive, and it will be well for the trees if they are headed back some for next year. Early spring is probably the best time to do the pruning of young trees. It is while trees are young that they get their shape to the grower's liking, and those who are buying trees will do well to get two-year-old trees, and then see that they get a good start. The Codling Worm is getting in its work this year in the old orchards, with the result that very many wormy apples may be seen in most of the old orchards. If the only losses were the wormy apples, it would not be so bad, but the extra expense of picking and sorting to get a few good ones very materially affects the price the buyers can afford to pay for apples.

A LONG TRAIN

Pennsylvania Engine Hauled 135 Steel Cars

A monster train of loaded cars of over a mile and a quarter in length was hauled over the middle division of the Pennsylvania road between Altoona and Harrisburg, August 18. The train was made up of 120 steel cars, all of 100,000 pounds capacity. A year ago a model H. B. engine hauled 105 cars over this division, and at that time the feat was regarded throughout the country as remarkable. The same model engine pulled the train on the last big haul, and representatives from a number of engineering journals, together with Freight Superintendent W. C. Copley, accompanied the train. Telephonic communication was established between the engine and caboose of the train, and the engineer was directed by the officials from the rear end of the train. An average speed of more than 20 miles an hour was maintained over the division.

GIRL AT THE WHEEL

Fast Ride in Motor Boat to Bring Young Man to the City Hospital

Frederick W. Feuss became seriously ill of appendicitis at St Lawrence Park, Ogdensburg, and the doctors stated that an operation must be performed within a few hours if the life of the young man were to be saved. Miss Ruth Remington volunteered the services of her fast yacht, and she had the boat in readiness at the dock. Miss Remington guided the boat to Ogdensburg, and the run of 38 miles was made in the fast time of one hour and twenty minutes. Mr. Feuss was then removed to the city hospital, where Dr. Madill was in readiness, and the operation was performed at once and a life saved.

LOGGERS' NARROW ESCAPE

They Had to Make a Quick Dash From the Flames

One hundred loggers employed in the camp of Hastings' Mills on Wales Island, British Columbia, one hundred miles up the coast, last Saturday, had to board a logging train and through raging smoke and angry flames seek refuge on the beach at Granite Bay, five miles away. A bush fire, fanned by a west wind, travelled five miles in less than an hour and a half, destroying the valuable standing timber, it cleared a pathway a mile wide. The loggers abandoned their camp after loading their supplies and donkey engine on flat cars. The run to the beach was made down grade at a record speed. They had a close call.

MELVILLE

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville ?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many told in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark ?

Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of transportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constructed from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

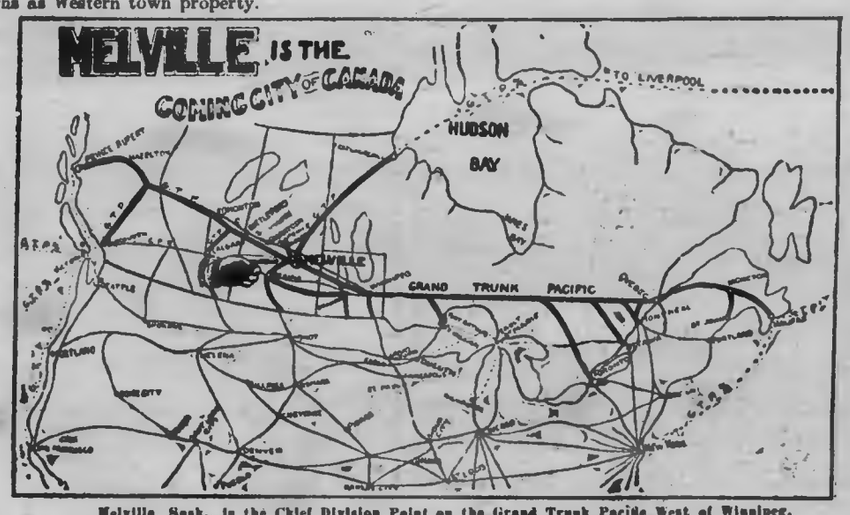
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by wsrehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enfoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West ol Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more premising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Rosslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, as should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

TRAVELLING PUBLIC PAY.

Railway Company Purchases Property Worth $500,000.

Large interests, probably either C.P.R. or Canadian Northern, are reported to have recently purchased property just north of the C.P.R. right-of-way in North Toronto worth $500,000. The prices paid are reported as being in many cases more than double the previously estimated value of the property.

This means an extra $250,000 or probably $500,000, when the rest of the property is secured, of extra capital on which the public will have to pay dividends.

We believe that folks who have no desire to move or sell should receive some compensation for their trouble, but isn't 100 per cent. pretty high, especially when the public have to pay it?

The man who lives in a rented house, by the way, receives notice to quit, has all the trouble, and the owner receives the compensation.

Why not have a law fixing the purchase price for expropriation at, say 120 per cent. of assessed value? This would give ample compensation, save the public millions of dollars, and at the same time induce property owners to see that their property was assessed at its fair value, neither too high for fear of taxes, nor too low for fear of expropriation.

WOMEN IN THE AIR

The Growth of a Dangerous and Sensational Pastime

The evolution of the aeroplane is wonderful in all its branches, but it is nothing like so wonderful as the rapid advent of the amateur aeroplanist. Flying schools are now being established and are reaping a rich harvest from enthusiastic would-be fliers who patronize the schools' aeroplanes in order to be instructed in the fascinating art of flying.

The successful aviator must have nerves of steel, practically a sixth sense of foresight, and perfect control over himself in moments of peril. During recent years the emancipation of women has certainly grown apace, but even the most confirmed female optimist could scarcely attribute even the most advanced woman with any two of these qualifications.

Morbid Sensation

Why is it that the attendance at a flying meet will go up nearly fifty per cent. if a lady flyer is billed to appear? One might as well assume that it is due to a spirit of morbid sensation similar to that displayed some years back when a woman revived the popularity of the sensational music-hall turn "Looping-the-Loop."

The public soon tired of watching a man endanger his life and limbs in such an act, but their interest was speedily revived when his mantle descended upon the shoulders of a woman.

A famous aviator recently stated that one of the secrets of successful flying is the complete understanding of one's engine. And he is a gentleman who employs a baker's dozen of skilled mechanics to daily groom his aeroplane.

Before making a flight you can see him crawling round his machine tightening stray nuts, and lubricating dry bearings with complete disregard to his personal comfort. After such excursions he is a sorry spectacle, oil-stained and dirty, with bruised and bleeding fingers from rough contact with refractory bearings.

Work for Men Only

What woman would—or could be expected to—indulge in such duties? Her delicate fingers were not constructed by nature to undertake work such as this. But unless a very keen personal interest is taken by the aviator in such seemingly trifling details, disaster is bound to occur sooner or later. There is a lady in France at the present time who is passing through a tedious term of convalescence, disfigured, and perhaps crippled for life, owing to her ill-timed entry into the world of aeronautics. She is the Baroness de la Roche who a month or so back fell from a considerable height whilst flying in her aeroplane. The accident was due to the sudden loss of her head, and consequently control of her machine, when she was passed by a fellow flyer. Experts who witnessed the accident were of opinion that had a man been in the place of the Baroness, the disaster might have been averted.

LIKE HIS GRANDSIRE

Prince Edward Visited an Old Tenant of the Royal Estate

During his holidays at Balmoral, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales went to see an old tenant on the Royal estate who had often accompanied the late King on fishing and shooting expeditions, when his Majesty was a boy.

When the young Prince entered the room where the old man was, the latter, who was sorely stricken with rheumatism, made an attempt to rise, but his Royal Highness ran over to him, and, putting his two hands on his shoulders said: "Oh, please do not stand up; I hope you don't mind my coming to see you, but I wanted to have a talk with you awfully."

Then tears came into the old man's eyes as he looked at the Prince, and he exclaimed: "Ah, sir, you remind me so of your grandsire when he was a boy."

The two sat chatting together for a long time, the Prince listening with immense interest to anecdotes of some youthful sporting adventures of the late King which the old man related. In his quick, impetuous moments the young Prince is very like his grandfather, and, when very much amused, he has a way of putting his hands behind his back when he laughs exactly as the late King often used to do, a little habit of the Prince's that has been noticed with much interest by members of the Royal Family.

A WORLD'S RECORD

Boy of Eighteen Makes a Billiard Break of 936

George Gray, the eighteen-year-old boy champion billiard player of Australia, established a world's record at Leeds when, with F. W. Hughes, a Leeds professional, to whom he is conceding 1,500 points in 4,500 up, he made a great break of 936, which included consecutive runs of 447 and 522 of losing hazards, principally into the middle pockets off the red ball.

He played with mechanical accuracy for about two hours. In this world's record Gray made no fewer that 969 points by losing hazards off the red.

The table was passed as standard before the match, and Gray is to receive a hundred guineas from the makers and fifty guineas from the Crystalite Ball Company.

A DEPLORABLE THING

Everybody who has thought about the matter must have deplored what they see going on throughout Europe—namely, the transfer of the population from the country districts to the big towns.—The Speaker.

NEW STATION FOR GUELPH.

While in the West last week, First Vice President Fitzhugh met a committee representing the city of Guelph, and after several hours deliberation settled the long standing question of a new station, sub-ways and track elevation which has been up on and off for the past ten years.

Under the arrangement made, the Grand Trunk has to pay the city $9000, and has to construct a foot subway at Neeve St. On the other hand the city is to transfer to the Grand Trunk, Jubilee Park one block west of the present station. Here the new station is to be erected.

A number of minor matters were settled involving the surrender by the Grand Trunk of a narrow strip of land near the old station, and the transfer to the Grand Trunk by the city of certain territory for freight facilities south of the new station. Also the city surrenders to the company certain lands which have been used by the city either for sites or lots, but which really was the property of the Grand Trunk.

All the members of the Committee expressed their satisfaction with the outcome of the negotiations.

A CONSUMPTIVE'S DESPAIR

A Wife's Terrible Struggle to Save Husband's Life

Short but tragic was the story told by a feeble, nervous, elderly woman to a London, England, coroner, describing how she struggled with her husband to prevent him taking his life. Deceased was Henry Archibald Death, 49, a gas-fitter, and his widow said that he had only been kept alive during the past twelve months through having two silver tubes inserted in his throat. He was a consumptive. He also had epileptic fits, and one of these occurred when she was alone with him. Suddenly he attempted to pull the tubes from his throat, but she caught his hands and they struggled together for some time until she was finally overpowered. Deceased then pulled out the tubes, and, being unable to breathe, very soon died. Dr. Frederick Ellis corroborated the woman's statement as to the cause of her husband's death, and the jury found that deceased committed suicide whilst in a fit.

TIPS OR NO TIPS

To the Traveller the Practice of Tipping Seems to be Necessary

The traveller's thoughts naturally turn to tipping. The old controversy for and against tips has again been revived, and the old pieces of advice given. At hotels, tip on the scale of 5 per cent. of your bill, after Baedeker, or 10 per cent., as most other people say. Tip everybody you can find. Tip only those who have put themselves out specially for your benefit. Tip nobody at all, and wait to see what happens. Entrust the tips in a lump sum to the hotelkeeper, or give it all to the head waiter, hoping it will be fairly distributed. Every different course is once more advised. The only idea that is dying out, if it ever existed is that of not tipping at all. A German hotelkeeper is said to have tried to abolish tips by paying his servants double wages. The result was that he could get no servants, and sometimes got abuse from his customers.

A French landlord examined on the topic, was cheerfully sceptical, and said he certainly was not going to try his German colleague's experiment. He took the detached view that "hotel servants are the servants not of the hotel proprietor but of the hotel customers. Therefore, why should not the latter, when well served, reward their servants?" In fact, he refuses to interfere between customers and servants. The latter are not his servants at all. He is merely a spectator in the game, and looks on while the scrimmage is played between tippers and tipped. "The hotelkeeper is no judge in the matter of tips. The customer alone is competent to judge."

PROVING HIM

Here is a quaint little Turkish fable:

As a woman was strolling along a road a man started to follow her.

"Why," said she, "do you follow me?"

"Because," he replied, "I have fallen in love with you."

"My sister," said she, "who is coming after me is much handsomer than I. Go and make love to her."

The man turned back and saw a woman with an ugly face, and, being greatly displeased, returned and said: "Why did you tell me a falsehood?"

The woman replied:

"To discover if you were telling me the truth. If you were in love with me why did you go back for another woman?"

A COW AS A SUSPECT

The Paris Journal publishes an amusing story of an incident occurring outside Maraas, a fort near Trente, Austria. A cow strayed from its pasturage and came within reach of the fort. The officer in command suspected the presence of an automatic photographic apparatus, and had the beast seized and closely examined, and when he found nothing to justify his suspicions he turned the animal loose again under the observation of two of his men charged with the duty of following the suspect home to ascertain whether her owner was an Italian spy.

THE FALL OF A BOOKWORM

How a love for Hall Caine's works proved the downfall of George Livermore, thirty-four, an insurance agent, was told on Saturday at the Guildhall, when he was charged with stealing from Smith's bookstall at Liverpool Street station, four books by that writer. The prisoner, who was caught red-handed, said he could not tell what made him take the books. He was particularly fond of this author's works, and was quite unaware that he took four books. He was sent to prison for seven days.

SANDY AND THE BOATS

"Waal," drawled the Yankee, "I guess we've got boats which can beat your British boats hollow. Why, if war broke out between us and Great Britain our fleet would tow the whole British fleet into New York harbor before they knew where they were!"

"Ay," replied Sandy, "ye micht do that; but it would take a much better man than Columbus to discover America after it!"

NORAH'S OBJECTION

Alfred (rapturously): "Now, darling, please name the happy day."

Minnie (blushing): "Three weeks from next Thursday, Alfred."

Norah, the domestic (through the keyhole): "If you please, miss, that's my reg'lar day out. You'll have to get married in the early part of the week."

PAT'S RETORT

A warship called at a military port on the coast of Ireland. Tommy Atkins, meeting a full-bearded Irish tar in the street a little later, said:

"Pat, when are you going to place your whiskers on the Reserve List?"

"When you place your tongue on the Civil List," was the Irish sailor's reply.

A PRESENTATION.

To a Popular Young Lady Who is Leaving the City.

A complete surprise was sprung on Miss Olive, Allison Wednesday evening at her home, 887 Water St., when she was presented with a handsome silver mounted parasol on behalf of the teachers and officers of Grace Church Sunday School.

Miss Allison, who is soon to leave the city, has been a faithful teacher and also the organist of the church, and the members felt that they must show in some slight manner that her presence will be much missed.

Accordingly a number of them gathered last night at her residence, Mr. J. J. Hartley, the superintendent of the school, paid a strong tribute to the earnest work of Miss Allison. He spoke very feelingly, and assured her that while her departure will be severely felt, still they hoped for her an enjoyable and useful stay in the place to which she was going.

Miss Gertie Hartley then made the presentation.

Miss Allison, although greatly surprised, managed to thank the company in a few suitable words, and assured them that many pleasant memories would always linger around the associations contracted in Peterborough.

Miss Allison has been connected with the mantle department of Rogard Hall & Sons for some years, and was very popular among the employees. She also belonged to the Madrigal Club of the Conservatory of Music.

BLOWN TO PIECES.

Immense Ice Plant Shattered in Massachusetts City—Score of Persons Injured and Houses Rocked by Force of Detonation.

Pittsfield, Mass., Dec. 29.—Thirteen men were killed, one died on the way to the hospital and a score were injured by the explosion of a boiler in the Morewood Lake Ice Company's plant, one and a half miles outside this city today.

Owing to the fact that the company had just started to harvest ice this morning the names of many of its employees had not been placed on the books and the work of identifying the dead could not be completed until friends or relatives had reached the scene.

Practically the entire left wing of the immense ice plant was demolished. It was here that the boiler exploded.

All of the injured were rushed to the House of Mercy Hospital in this city in wagons and automobiles. At the hospital it was stated that probably ten of the injured would die.

The plant was shattered by the explosion and some of the bodies were literally blown to pieces. The disaster is the worst that ever occurred in Pittsfield. The plant is located mile and a half from the city, but the force of the detonation was so great that houses were rocked in Pittsfield, and windows broken.

W. Dunn, engineer, in charge of the boilers, was among those instantly killed. The others were those working in the engine room and the adjoining ice house.

Survivors of the disaster told harrowing stories. One wounded man said that he was at work in the storage plant when a noise like the firing of a battery of artillery sounded in his ears and he was hurled against the wall as though thrown by a giant hand. Then began a rain of wreckage, he said, which covered everything.

An assembly of workmen set to work to remove the wreckage that covered the bodies of the dead and wounded. Cries could be heard from beneath the debris, that showed that some of those imprisoned still lived.

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold - Silver - Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The following from the Chaffee County Independent, published at Buena Xista, Colorado, tells the whole story:

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

The Isolation Hospital

A Description of the Building, which Reflects Considerable Credit Upon All Connected with Its Erection

Some quarter of a mile beyond the end of the Street Railway tracks north, a short distance west of the road, on top of a steep hill which overlooks the river, and surrounding country is located the New Isolation Hospital.

With the exception of a small group of pines on the north side of the road on which the building faces, there is not a tree to be seen for some distance, so that all the winds that blow, no matter from what quarter, have a clean sweep.

The building which is 42 by 70 feet is set back some 100 feet from the road and faces both North and South, there being two independent entrances.

It is a two story structure of red brick, with a high stone basement. On both the north and south fronts are two wide verandahs, one on each floor and extending all across each end of the building.

In reality the structure is two buildings in one, as a solid division wall runs through the centre of the building from East to West, cutting off all interior communication between the two sections, which are laid out on the same general plan, so that a description of one section is practically a description of the other, with the exception that as there are no offices on the South side more room is available for patients.

The North half of the building is intended for diptheria patients and the South half for scarlet fever cases.

The reason the South end is devoted to scarlet fever patients is because they are much longer in the hospital and need more sunshine than the others. Small pox patients if any, will be placed in tents on some other part of the grounds and at a distance from the building.

In the basement, living rooms for the caretaker are provided, and there also are situated the kitchens, cellars laundries and steam heating apparatus.

On the ground floor on the North side are an office and bedroom for matron and a dispensary for the doctor.

The nurses' bedrooms are on the second floor. On each floor in both sections, are separate lavatories for nurses and patients. Each floor in each section is also provided with a pantry, which is conveniently fitted up with cupboards, drawers and a sink, and a dumb waiter communicates with the kitchen. There are also clothes shutes to the laundry.

On each floor, in both sections of the building are small private and public wards. These and the halls are light and airy and are also perfectly ventilated. There is accommodation for from twenty-five to thirty patients. There are four wards on each floor of the North section and five on each floor of the South section.

The building is heated throughout by steam, there being coils in every ward and in every hall or corridor. Thorough ventilation is provided for by indirect coils in the basement which allow fresh warm air to pass up into the various halls.

The interior of the building is painted white throughout, which gives it a clean and cheerful aspect.

All the stairs, dumb waiters and clothes shutes are bricked in and fitted with metal doors so as to make the building as nearly waterproof as possible.

Everything that could be thought of to render the Isolation Hospital adapted to the purpose for which it is intended has evidently been carefully considered and the result reflects great credit on the architect, Mr. W. Blackwell.

It is expected that the building will be ready for occupation early in January, as the workmen are now engaged in putting on the finishing touches.

The building and furnishings will cost $12,000, and the money was provided by the sale of debentures for that amount.

The property on which the hospital stands, belongs to the city, and we understand, is part of a large farm owned by the municipality.

The people of Peterborough are to be congratulated on possessing so important an institution, as not only will the careful and skilled attendance tend to materially lessen the chances of fatal results, but, by the proper isolation of patients, materially assist in checking any epidemic should one occur.

The question of an isolation hospital had been a vexed one with several past councils; in fact there have been occasions when the matter was referred to as an unnecessary expense. However, such an institution is demanded by the Provincial Board of Health, and seeing that no adequate means of isolating patients, and thus effectually checking a possible spread of infectious diseases into an epidemic were available, the present City Council took the question up with commendable energy, and in a business-like manner. As a result Peterborough now has an isolation hospital that is a credit to the city and which fills a crying need.

The committee in charge of the work were Ald. Duncan, chairman; Aldermen Graham, Bradburn, Morgan and Batten. They have kept well within their appropriation. As usual the heaviest portion of the responsibility fell upon the chairman, and Ald. Duncan, applied himself to his duties with undefatigable attention and intelligence.

To The Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Having served during the past nine years as a Water Commissioner with that attention to duties which has, I hope, been of help to my co-commissioners, and of some service to the City, I am desirous of continuing for another term for what I believe will be considered as fairly sufficient reasons. The ratepayers are aware that the Commissioners have had during the past two years under construction for the City a new water works dam and pumping station, which with the additional pumping power now supplied will, I am sure, prove one of the most effective systems in Ontario. The contracts have not yet all been completed for these works, nor settlements made, nor has all fear of difficulties with contractors passed. My co-Commissioners are anxious that I should continue on the Board for they think that I would be of assistance in these matters from my necessarily intimate knowledge of circumstances surrounding these contracts.

I am inclined to think the ratepayers will approve of my course in presenting myself in view of what I have said, and therefore with some degree of confidence most respectfully ask for their support.

A REVOLUTION.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 29.—Advices received here late last night say that a revolution has broken out in Honduras and fighting is going on along the Honduras-Nicaraguan border 20 miles below Cape Gracias, Nicaragua.

The forces are being led, according to wireless reports, by General Lee Christmas, who was to have met 1,600 men on the Nicaraguan border with forty days' provisions.

It is known that the Davila Government moved $55,000 in silver Puerto Cortez to Ceiba and the latter city is believed to be the objective point of the advancing revolutionists.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL LAWS DEFIED BY THE CATHOLICS

Government Was Formally Notified Yesterday

Ratepayers of School Section No. 8, Otonabee, in Fierce Conflict--Protestant Ratepayers Insist That the Government Should Investigate at Once

For some time rumors have been circulated regarding trouble in School section No. 8, Otonabee. It is said that Roman Catholic teaching has been going on in this school for several months, and that the protests of Protestants, whose children attend the school, are ignored by the teacher, and also by the trustees of the school. The Times was also informed that the matter was laid before Mr. Richard Lees, Public School Inspector, who is either unwilling or unable to enforce the Public School laws. Be that as it may considerable ill-feeling exists between the Protestants and Catholic school supporters of the section. These are about evenly divided, there being 23 Protestant and 24 Roman Catholic ratepayers. A stormy meeting was held a few days ago at which strong language was used by both sides.

Yesterday the Times called up Mr. Lees, and was informed by that gentleman, that there was no trouble that he was aware of. At least nothing had been reported to him. In the meantime the matter has been referred to Sir James Whitney, who has been requested to order an immediate investigation.

The teacher is a Miss Ward, a Roman Catholic. The members of the School Board are Messrs. F. F. Redmond and John O'Connor, Roman Catholics, and Mr. L. Hatherley, a Protestant. Mr. S. Redmond (Roman Catholic) is the secretary.

THE RETIRING COUNCIL

Brief Synopsis of the Public Work Undertaken by the Energetic Council of 1910

This is the last day of the old year 1910, and with its expiration the members of the City Council vacate their offices and place themselves in the hands of the ratepayers. There are some exceptions however, this year. His Worship, Mayor W. G. Morrow, retains his high seat by virtue of the acclamation of a grateful public, who recognized in him the personification of those exceptional qualifications necessary in the presiding officer over a board representing so many divergent interests. Our citizens have chosen wisely and well in retaining the services of so exemplary a chief magistrate to direct the civic affairs of 1911. The generally accepted principal that experience is the most acceptable qualification in an aldermanic candidate engenders regret that Aldermen Hicks, Turner, Batten and Gillespie have retired.

Taken as a whole the Council of 1910 was a strong and progressive one. Its members had the courage of their convictions and governed themselves accordingly. They undertook much new work which was carried through successfully. And a brief reference thereto may not be out of place:—

SMITH ST. BRIDGE.

The Smith street bridge, a much needed improvement, has been erected. This is a concrete structure on modern plans and is a credit to the city. This work came under the direction of the Board of Works, of which Ald. Hicks was chairman. His colleagues were Ald. Phelan, a past chairman of the busy committee, Aldermen Metheral, Graham, Gillespie, Duffus and Duncan.

LIBRARY AND HOSPITAL.

The Property Committee were responsible for the new Isolation Hospital and Public Library. This committee was composed of Ald. Duncan chairman, and Aldermen Graham, Bradburn, Morgan and Batten. Both these buildings fill a long-felt want and furnish opportunity for congratulations to the committee who were responsible to the Council and citizens for their proper and effective construction. As chairman in charge of these additions to Peterborough's public buildings, involving an expenditure of $42,000, Ald. Duncan had an extreme heavy year, into the duties of which, however, he fitted like a glove. In fact both he and his colleagues are entitled to a full measure of credit for their whole-hearted interest in and attention to these public works in question. And they kept well within their appropriations too.

THE FIRE HALL.

This institution has had an exceedingly capable chairman in Alderman Harry Morgan. His colleagues were Aldermen Buller, Metheral, Batten and Graham, all good men and true. The closest possible attention has been given to the work of the Fire, Water and Light Department.

Harry Morgan has been a good member for the East Ward: in fact he made a point of seeing that East Peterborough secured an equitable share of monies available for public improvement. And what more can be expected, even under the ward system.

SOUTH CITY SEWERAGE.

The Council has also provided for a sewerage and drainage system in South Peterborough, a measure that must assuredly commend itself to all concerned.

THE FINANCE BOARD.

The city this year has enjoyed an exemplary Finance Committee, composed of Ald. Bradburn, chairman, and Aldermen Phelan, Hicks and Turner—a small board with great business capacity. Finance Minister Ald. Bradburn, demonstrated his exceptional adaptability to his high office in an admirable manner. His keen financial acumen stood Council in good stead on many occasions. And he invariably kept one eye on the city's finances and the other on the committees' expenditures. It would be unfortunate indeed should Ald. Bradburn not be re-elected on Monday next, as his valuable services would be certainly missed.

The above is but a brief synopsis of some of the progressive work undertaken by 1910's Council, which stamps the present City Fathers as a civic body that has at least contributed some public mementos of their year's labors.

ABANDONMENT OF ARMAMENTS.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald has the following reference to an incident at the International Conference at the American Society for Judicial Settlement of International Disputes: There was a burst of enthusiasm just before the afternoon session adjourned, caused by informal remarks made by Dr. Eliot, of Harvard, and Justice William Renwick Riddell, of the High Court of Ontario, advocating the immediate abandonment of armaments by the United States on the Great Lakes. The discussion arose when John A. Stewart, of New York, called attention to the celebration planned for 1914 in commemoration of the centenary anniversary of the treaty of Ghent and one hundred years of peace. Dr. Eliot suggested that the date be shifted to 1917, so as to celebrate the first proposal, in 1817, by Canada for the removal of armaments on the Great Lakes. He was immediately followed by Justice Riddell, who read a letter from the Centenary Association of Toronto, urging that the United States might see fit to add to the celebration the permanent relinquishment of arms on the Great Lakes.

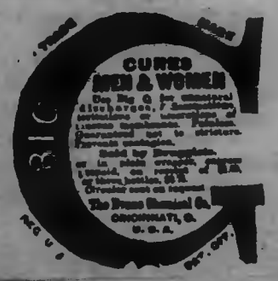
HANGED HIMSELF TO AVOID SPEECH.

Farmer who Was Shareholder in Farmers' Bank, Declined to Talk at Christmas Dinner.

Woodstock, Dec. 27.—A sensational suicide occurred at Lakeside yesterday afternoon, when Albert Baker, a wealthy farmer aged 43 years hanged himself from a rafter in the barn at the conclusion of the Christmas dinner. The Bakers were having a jolly family re-union at their home on the 12th line of East Nissouri, and at the conclusion of the meal a number of speeches were indulged in. The father was called upon to address the gathering. He had eaten a hearty meal and said that he would prefer to defer his remarks until after he did the chores. He went out to the barn, and when a young son went out to get some money with which to make some purchases at the village store, he found his father hanging from a beam with his feet three inches from the floor. Baker had taken a rope and tied his hands together, after first having tied another cord around his neck and attached it to the beam. He had only been dead a few minutes when found.

Baker was one of the shareholders in the defunct Farmers' Bank and it is known that his possible losses were preying on his mind to some extent, although his friends do not give this as the cause of his suicide. He was perfectly rational as far as could be seen and there is no insanity in the family.



THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

his back on the deck with Frank on top of him. The simplicity of the manoeuvre insured its success. Neither Mayne nor Winifred understood what had happened until Malcolm had disarmed the trooper, taken his cartridge pouch, and thrown him overboard to sink or swim as fate might direct. He regretted the loss of Akbab Khan, but he recalled the queer expression on the man's face when he read Bahadur Shah's sonorous titles.

"Light of the World, Renowned King of Kings, Lord of all India, Fuzilbabi, Panah-i-din!"

That appeal to the faith was too powerful to be withstood. Yet Malcolm was glad the man had been chivalrous in his fall, for he had taken a liking to him.

Chumru, of course, after the first gasp of surprise, appreciated the sahib's strategy.

"Shabash!" he cried, "Wao, wao, buzoor! May I never see the White Pond of the Prophet if that was not well planned."

"Oh, what is it?" came Winifred's startled exclamation. It was so dark, and the horses, no less than the sail, so obscured her view of the fore part of the boat, that she could only dimly make out Malcolm's figure, though the sounds of the scuffle and splashing were unmistakable.

"We are disbanding our native forces—that is all," said Frank. "Press the tiller more to the left, please. Yes, that is right. Now, keep it there until we touch the steps."

The shimmering surface of the river near the boat was broken up into ripples surrounding a black object. Malcolm heard the quick panting of one in whose lungs water had mixed with air and he hated to think of even a rebel drowning before his eyes. Moved by pity, he swung the big oar on its wooden rest until the blade touched the exhausted man, whose hands shot out in the hope of succor. After some spluttering a broken voice supplicated.

"Mercy, sahib! I saved you when you were in my power. Show pity now to me."

"It is true, then, that you meant to desert, Akbab Khan?" said Frank sternly.

"Yes, sahib. One cannot fight against one's brothers, but I swear by the Prophet—"

"Nay, your oaths are not needed. You, at least, did not wish to commit murder. Cling to that oar. The ghat is close at hand."

"Then, sahib, I can still show my gratitude. If you would save the miss-sahib, do not land here. The Magazine has been taken. The cavalry have looted the Treasury. All the sahib-log have fallen."

"Is this a true thing that thou sayest?"

"May I sink back into the pit if it be not the tale we heard at Bithoor!"

By this time Mayne was at Frank's side.

"I fear we have dropped into a hornets' nest," said he. "There is certainly an unusual turmoil in the bazaar, and houses are on fire in all directions."

Even while they were listening to the fitful bellowing of a distant mob bent on mad revel a crackle of musketry rang out, but died away as quickly. The budgerow grounded lightly when her prow ran against the stonework of the ghat. Again did Malcolm make up his mind on the spur of the moment.

"I will spare your life on one condition Akbab Khan," he said. "Go ashore and learn what has taken place at the Magazine. Return here, alone, within five minutes. Mark you, I say 'alone.' If I see more than one who comes I shall shoot."

"Huzoor, I shall not betray you."

"Go, then."

He drew the man through the water until his feet touched the steps. Climbing up unsteadily, Akbab Khan disappeared in the gloom. Then they waited in silence. The heavy breath of the bazaar was pungent in their nostrils, and, for a few seconds they listened to the trooper's retreating footsteps. Frank leaped ashore and pushed the boat off, while Mayne held her by jamming the leeward oar into the mud. It was best to make sure.

They did not speak. Their ears were strained as their tumultuous thoughts. At last, some one came, a man, and his firm tread of boot-shod feet betokened a soldier. It was the rebel who had become their scout.

"Sahib," said he, "it is even as I told you. Cawnpore is lost to you."

"And you, Akbab Khan, do you go or stay?"

"Would you have me draw sword against the men of my own faith?" was the despairing answer.

"It would not be for the first time," said Malcolm coldly. "But I could never trust thee again. Yet best thou choose wrongly, Akbab Khan. When thy day of reckoning comes, may it be remembered in thy favor that thou didst turn most unwillingly against thy masters!"

Akbab Khan raised his right hand in a military salute. Suddenly, his erect form became indistinct, and faded out of sight. The boat was travelling down stream once more. Around her the river lapped lazily, and the solemn quietude of the mist-covered waters was accentuated by the far-off turmoil in the city.

The huge sail thrust its yard high above the fog bank, and watchers on the river saw it. Some one hailed in the vernacular, and Chumru replied that they came from Bithoor with hay. Prompted by Malcolm he went on:

"How goes the good work, brother?"

"Rarely," came the voice. "I have already requited two bunnnahs to whom I owed money. Gold is to be had for the taking. Leave the budgerow at the bridge, friend, and join us."

The raucous, half-drunken accents substantiated Akbab Khan's story. The unseen speaker was evidently himself a boatman. He was rejoicing in the upheaval that permitted debts to be paid with a bludgeon and money to be made without toll.

Mayne caught Frank by the arm.

"We are drifting towards the bridge of boats that carries the road to Lucknow across the river," he said, in the hurried tone of a man who sees a new and paralysing danger. "There is a drawbridge for river traffic, but how shall we find it, and, in any event, we must be seen."

"Are there many houses on the opposite bank?" asked Malcolm.

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Mairs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayneete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

THE WAXWORKS AT WESTMINSTER

Wax Effigies of Some of the Most Notable Figures in History Find a Place There

People have a curiously mistaken idea that the only place in London where one can see really good wax figures is at Madame Tussaud's, but this is a great error on their part.

The waxworks at Westminster Abbey are also very interesting, and, from an historical point of view, they may also be regarded as most venerable antiquities.

Years ago, in the early days of English history, people liked to be sure of their facts. There were no newspapers to herald the goings on of royalties, and every piece of news that was handed on from one to another came originally from an eyewitness of the scene described.

Therefore, when a king died, as there were no newspapers in which one could read a discreet description of his dying moments, it became necessary to announce the fact in some more direct fashion. It was no use saying a king was dead, the statement had to be proved, and so it became customary to embalm the dead body of the king and to bear it openly upon the bier to its last resting-place, so that the populace might see for themselves that there was no deception.

After a bit fashions changed, as they will, and instead of the king being embalmed and placed upon his bier, he was embalmed and placed within it, and a waxen effigy of the deceased sovereign was modelled from his dead figure and dressed in his best Sunday going-to-meeting suit, and borne with pomp and heraldry on his coffin in the place of the poor, dead body.

When the body had received reverent burial at the Abbey the waxen effigy was placed upon the tomb, so that all might see what the sovereign had looked like upon earth. After a bit these effigies were found to lumber up the place, and it was decided to gather them together and to put them in the Islip Chamber, where they could be seen by the curious public for the small sum of threepence, which in those early days of which I write went into the pockets of the Minor Canons and Lay Vicars.

Sovereigns of Many Epochs

Many effigies were gathered in the chapel up the winding stair, but one by one they have crumbled to dust till only a few remain.

Queen Elizabeth is there in all her glory. Arrayed in the huge ruff with which her numerous pictures have made us so familiar, a velvet, gown, stitched with gold, a jewelled stomacher, and very high-heeled shoes.

She was so given over to the vanities of this world, that even when dying she insisted upon being arrayed in all her finery, and finally she died on the floor dressed as if for some great Court carnival, as you see her in the Islip Chamber. They say that the contents of her wardrobe on her death amazed everyone, so crowded was it with garments of all sorts, many of which the Queen had never even seen, much less worn.

By her side stands that merry monarch Charles II., in red velvet and priceless lace ruffles. There is a weird fascination in the pallid, ugly face of this well-known lady-killer, surrounded by a falling mass of ink-black curls. His face wears a half cynical smile, as if he found even death amusing. He was the most attractive scion of the very attractive house of Stuart, if historians are to be believed, and also the most unreliable.

Next him stands one of the fair ladies he loved so gaily, the beautiful Duchess of Richmond, clad in the robes she wore at the coronation of Queen Anne. This fair lady was so beautiful that she sat for the design of Britannia on the copper coinage, a compliment to her classical features that she no doubt much appreciated.

Sidelights on Royalty

The Duchess of Buckingham is also here, a lady who is historically notorious for taking the deepest interest in funerals and their trappings, even her own. When she lay a-dying she ordered the canopy that was to be held over her hearse to be brought for her inspection, to see if it met with her approval. A Duchess of Buckingham could not quit this mortal sphere without every attention being paid to what was due to her rank and position in life. She probably knew the old saying, that if you want a thing done well, you should do it yourself—and acted upon it.

William and Mary are also here, standing side by side, Mary completely over-topping her small, disagreeable-looking husband, whom she adored. They say that William, like many another husband, never fully appreciated his wife till she lay dying, and that then his grief knew no bounds.

William was a martyr to asthma, and this trying ailment may partly have accounted for his most uncertain temper, but in the death-chamber of his wife he strove to stifle his most persistent cough in case he might disturb her. But this kind attention on his part disturbed poor Queen Mary, more than the cough. He had never bestowed any petits soins on her in life, and so, poor lady, she did not look for them in death, and she repeatedly asked where her husband was, and could not believe he was by her side because she did not hear his cough. What curious side-lights these little domestic details throw upon our knowledge of history! What a pity a few more have not come down to us! Lord Chatham and Lord Nelson are also here, but they are not genuine effigies, only fakes.

Lord Chatham was added to the collection by way of making a larger show, and Lord Nelson, arrayed in the clothes he wore at the battle of Trafalgar, even down to the patch over one eye, was shamelessly put here to attract back the fickle public, who deserted Westminster Abbey for St. Paul's when the national hero was buried there.—M. de L. Bartlett.

It Will Be Worth Your While to Investigate

HAVE YOU MONEY TO INVEST?

If So, Here is a Proposition That Should Interest You

Everyone is familiar with the fortunes that have been and are daily being made out of holdings in the rapidly growing towns of the Canadian West. Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and many other Western cities have, by their almost supernatural development, filled the pockets of those who had the foresight to invest in realty when those places were in the making. Perhaps you missed those. Here, then, is another opportunity.

Have You Heard of Melville ?

Three years ago it had scarcely been conceived. Two years since it was born and now with that amazing progress which stamps certain towns as distinctly Western it has a population of 2500 which is growing by leaps and bounds.

In 1909 the assessed value of Melville's real estate was $521,360. This year it is $1,792,000 an increase in the past of 350 per cent.

A population of 10,000 for Melville will mean an increase many told in the values of its real estate. If real estate has advanced from 500 to 1500 per cent. in two years while the population was growing to 2500, is it not reasonable to expect a much larger proportion of increase while the town is advancing to the 10,000 mark ?

Melville—A Distributing Centre; Depot and Business Blocks in the Background.

Melville Has No Near Competitors

Melville's future as a commercial centre is assured. It has no dangerous competitors within striking distance. It is 279 miles from Winnipeg, nearly 100 from Regina, almost 200 from Saskatoon and over 150 from Brandon. These are the cities with which it must compete, and the distance from each is such as to permit Melville to expand and growing friendly rivalry and even with greater speed. To the North lies a vast territory, as yet practically undeveloped. This will be opened up by the building of the Hudson Bay Road and Melville is ready to take immediate advantage of this development and is, of all cities of Western Canada, the one best qualified to do so. The fact that it is sitting right at the gateway of this coming business is already recognized by wholesale and distributing firms who are erecting branch warehouses here as they have done at Edmonton, Saskatoon and numerous other points, and this will involve not only building expenditures and large monthly pay-rolls but also increased population and local business of a permanent and desirable character.

Melville's Excellent Strategic Position

But few towns in Western Canada can approach Melville in a matter of transportation facilitiest It is both a divisional and junction point on the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent—The Grand Trunk Pacific. The ardently desired Hudson Bay railway, the dream of the prairie pioneer, is now in process of construction, and is already completed from Melville to Canora, and trains are running between these points. This road will bring past the doors of Melville the bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada, and make it one of the great traffic centres of the country. Another branch line is now being constructed from Melville to Lethbridge, by way of Regina, from which point another branch line is being constructed to the International Boundary. When completed this line will give Melville transportation facilities to all points in the United States. This road is already completed from Melville to Balcarres, and trains are now operating between these points. The main line of the G.T.P. from Melville will afford five water outlets, namely, Prince Rupert, B.C., on the Pacific Ocean, Halifax, N.S., on the Atlantic Ocean, St. John, N.B., on Newfoundland Bay, Fort Churchill, on Hudson Bay, and Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior.

Melville has many unquestionable points of superiority over other Canadian towns in the matter of transportation facilities. It resembles Chicago in "sitting at the gates of trade." The junction point of railways so important as the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay Railway, must, in the natural course of events, become an important city.

Melville as a Manufacturing Centre

It is inevitable that Melville must become a jobbing centre of much importance. Already several big concerns have made it a distributing point for their goods, others are seeking locations there for branch houses. Two big implement concerns, two brewing companies and one oil company now use Melville as a distributing point and one other oil company has established a branch at Melville and is negotiating for a tract of land near the railroad.

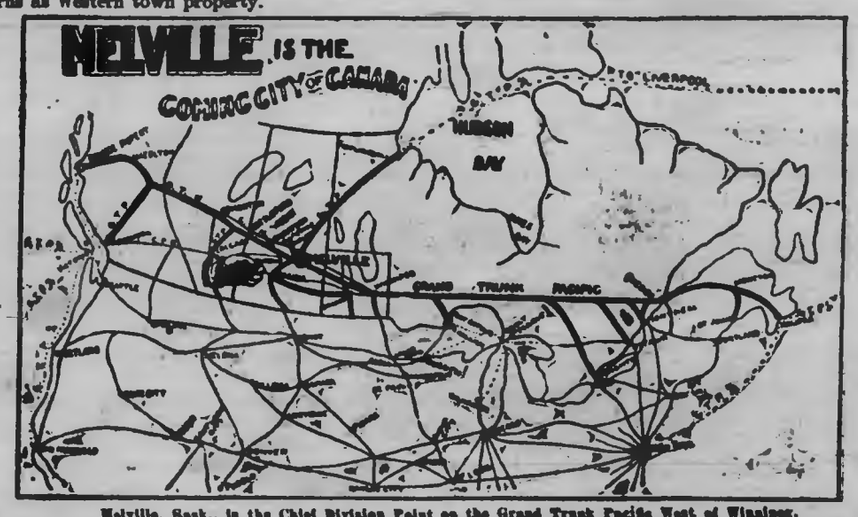
The lead taken by these institutions is about to be followed by others of similar importance, and in a short time the railway yards will be hedged in by warehouses and mercantile establishments.

As a distributing point, Melville has strategic advantages which wholesalers will not overlook. It will command a large part of the jobbing trade for a considerable distance up and down the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the two important branch lines which centre there. Its shipping facilities make it an especially advantageous location for manufactories. The completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line westward to Lethbridge will give Melville direct connection with the coal fields of Southern Alberta and provide one of the main requisites for a manufacturing centre—cheap fuel.

Backed by a rich agricultural district, an important railroad centre, a distributing centre and a manufacturing centre, Melville cannot help continuing to grow rapidly, and continued growth means continued increase in real estate valdes and big profits for those who invest in real estate there at present prices. To-day is the time to buy lots in Melville.

Over $100,000,000 Made in Western Town Property LAST YEAR

The most reliable statistics available indicate that the increase in the values of Western town property last year was over $100,000,000. There is every indication that next year's increase will be much greater. Melville has every advantage that a town could enfoy. It is the prinsipal divisional point West of Winnipeg on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, the greatest transcontinental railway on the American Continent. It is surrounded by an immense territory, rich in agriculture, which is just being opened up and developed. Never were the prospects brighter or more promising in any new town during the marvellous development of Western Canada than they now are at Melville. No line of investment has ever been so safe and at the same time shown such large returns as Western town property.



Melville, Sask., is the Chief Division Point on the Grand Trunk Pacific West of Winnipeg.

Theodore Roosevelt has said "Every person who invests in well selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adopts the surest and saftest method of becoming independent for REAL ESTATE IS THE BASIS OF ALL WEALTH," and Andrew Carnegie says "The wise young man or wage-earner of to-day invests his money in real estate."

Real estate always has been and always will be the SAFEST, SUREST, AND BEST INVESTMENT on earth.

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Rosslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

NEW STATION FOR GUELPH.

While in the West last week, First Vice President Fitzhugh met a committee representing the city of Guelph, and after several hours deliberation settled the long standing question of a new station, sub-ways and track elevation which has been on and off for the past ten years. Grand Trunk has to pay the city $9000, and has to construct a foot subway at Neeve St. On the other hand the city is to transfer to the Grand Trunk, Jubilee Park, one block west of the present station. Here the new station is to be erected.

A number of minor matters were settled involving the surrender by the Grand Trunk of a narrow strip of transfer to the Grand Trunk by the city of certain territory for freight facilities south of the new station. Also the city surrenders to the company certain lands which have been used by the city either for sites or lots, but which really was the property of the Grand Trunk.

All the members of the Committee expressed their satisfaction with the SUPPORT THE BY-LAW.

Representative Citizens Show Approval of the Bonner-Worth by-law.

Gentlemen,—We, the undersigned property owners and holders of twelve year leases, of Peterborough, respectfully submit to you our views regarding this by-law, and this factory, now before the people for approval.

We have carefully considered the matter and find—

1.—That the parties asking assistance are practical men who understand the proposed business.

2.—That they are men of good standing.

3.—That they have ample money for working capital.

4.—That they propose to buy land and erect a large factory three stories, with about 1 1-3 acres of floor space.

5.—The company will pay taxes on present value assessment and full school taxes.

6.—That they will give to the city all necessary for a loan of $12,000, a first mortgage on land, building and fixed machinery—much more than the amount of the loan.

7.—That they will ask for $6,000 advance when building is up, and the other $6,000 in one year from beginning work in factory. They will begin making payments in one year, then paying $1,000 each year thereafter.

We think this is a good proposition and that it should be accepted. It is too good to turn down. We cannot afford to do so. If we don't accept this industry, we may as well stop looking for other industries, as every little town in the province can now get power and offer inducements for factories.

We intend to vote for this by-law and to do all we can to insure its passing, and we respectfully ask our fellow property owners, and holders of leases extending over twelve years to turn out and do all they can to insure the required vote, which calls for three-fifths of the entire qualified votes.

Respectfully yours,

PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK

No Matter how great or how small your savings may be you want them to be earning something for you. If you are saving your money you are doing well. If you are saving your money and placing it at small interest you are doing better. IF YOU ARE SAVING YOUR MONEY AND SENDING IT OUT TO EARN MORE MONEY, YOU ARE DOING THE VERY BEST AND WISEST THING YOU POSSIBLY COULD DO.

The Combination of Opportunity and Capital

Is one that is sure to win. You want to combine your capital with this opportunity and secure a share of the profits that we intend to earn for the partners of this splendid enterprise.

Gold-Silver-Copper

The Gold Queen is mining all three. We want a mill to treat our ore. We want you to come in with us and help build this mill. We offer you a limited number of shares of stock in this big company at a price so low that you cannot afford to let the opportunity pass by. We fully expect Gold Queen shares to be selling at five times as much as we are now offering them to you for, just as soon as the mill is ready to handle the rich ore that we have blocked out in our mines.

THE OFFICERS OF OUR COMPANY

Are a sufficient guarantee that we mean business. They are all good, substantial and successful business men. Men who have clear sighted business judgment and rare executive ability. Men who will exert their every effort to make the Gold Queen Mines big producers and who will safeguard the interests of their partners in this money making enterprise at every turn.

THESE ARE THE KIND OF MEN YOU WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH.

The following from the Chaffee County Independent, published at Buena Xista, Colorado, tells the whole story :

The Gold Queen on Baron Mountain, just above St. Elmo, is to the front with a good strike, made recently in their new tunnel, the lore running assays of $50 in gold, silver and copper to the ton. This has hastened work on the various buildings and the machinery is being placed in position as fast as it arrives and can be taken to the mines from the railroad.

The vein is an exceedingly large one and at the time this is being sent out, the miner has not yet penetrated it, indicating that it is one of those bonanzas the camp is becoming so famous for. The exact width of the vein will not be known for some time. While it is not believed that the entire vein will give high assays, yet all of it will be of a good grade of milling and smelting ore. The mine has been under the personal direction of A. J. Stark for some time past, and it is to him that the company owes so much, for it was his thorough knowledge of the country that led them to the present rich vein. The company owns eight claims on Baron Mountain, which are intersect with a large number of tunnels and crosscut workings, all of which show excellent indications of high grade ore. The company held their annual meeting in St. Elmo recently, a large number of stockholders being present, and every one to a man, are highly elated over the bright future of the mine, and will push work on the property as fast as men and machinery can do it. The mine has shipped some ore in the past, but now they will block out ore and have it ready for their mill which they expect to erect in the very near future.

Shell Burst and Staff-Sergeant was Killed

Ottawa, Dec. 31:—As a result of an explosion of a small shell at the ordnance department here yesterday afternoon one man was killed and two others were wounded.

Armament Staff-Sergeant Renard, aged 38 years, formerly of Yorkshire England, was endeavoring to take apart a one-pound shell, when it exploded, and fragments penetrated his breast, causing almost instant death.

Armory Sergeant Smallwood, who was five or six yards away, was struck in the chest by a fragment and seriously hurt. He will be operated upon to-day.

Another man named Euclaire was in the room and was struck in the face. His injuries were not regarded as serious, but were of a sufficiently serious nature to require his removal to the hospital.

There will be an inquiry into the accident by a military court.

Entombed 12 Hours.

El Paso, Texas, Dec. 29.—Joaquim Chapparo was taken alive from the tunnel of the smelter plant which blew up yesterday afternoon, being entombed twelve hours. 200 cans of powder are still in the tunnel. They lend an element of danger to the rescue work.

A Happy New Year

Peterborough, Dec. 31st., 1910

To the Citizens of Peterborough,

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I wish you one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

W. G. MORROW,

Mayor.

To The Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Having served during the past nine years as a Water Commissioner with that attention to duties which has, I hope, been of help to my co-commissioners, and of some service to the City, I am desirous of continuing for another term for what I believe will be considered as fairly sufficient reasons. The ratepayers are aware that the Commissioners have had during the past two years under construction for the City a new water works dam and pumping station, which with the additional pumping power now supplied will, I am sure, prove one of the most effective systems in Ontario. The contracts have not yet all been completed for these works, nor settlements made, nor has all fear of difficulties with contractors passed. My co-Commissioners are anxious that I should continue on the Board for they think that I would be of assistance in these matters from my necessarily intimate knowledge of circumstances surroundir. these contracts.

I am inclined to think the ratepayers will approve of my course in presenting myself in view of what I have said, and therefore with some degree of confidence most respectfully ask for their support.

SOUTH WARD Municipal Elections

Your vote and influence is respectfully requested for

THOS. HOOPER

For Alderman for 1911.

A new man, and promising good, careful service if elected.

To The Electors of The Fifth Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

If elected I promise to promote to the best of my ability the extension of the Radial Railway to East City, also to bring all the pressure possible to have any industries that we may get here, to locate on the east side of the city, as there is a lot of available sights for them there. I will also stand, and stand firm, for getting our share of the expenditure of the city taxes, and will get it.

Respectfully yours,

R. F. SEDGWICK

For Water COMMISSIONER

Your vote and influence are respectfully solicited for

WILLIAM LANGFORD

For Water Commissioner.

To The Ratepayers of West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

At the request of a number of ratepayers of the city, I have been induced to stand for Alderman for the ensuing year. Should I be elected, I will endeavor to perform the duties in an impartial and satisfactory manner. My efforts will always be in the direction of greater economy and in keeping the tax rate down as low as possible, consistent with good city government.

Yours faithfully,

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Helen Manning (nee Brown) Dies at Toronto.

The Toronto papers of Saturday morning, announce the death in Toronto of Mrs. Helen Manning, wife of Wellington C. Manning, and formerly Miss Helen Brown of Peterborough. Her many friends will regret greatly to learn the sad news.

A CHARGE REFUTED.

To the Editor of The Times,—

Dear Sir,—I notice that Mr. Langford had a letter in the papers on Friday night, in which the only fault he has to find with the present water commissioners, is that they do not give sufficient publicity to their work. It seems to me that after an admittedly satisfactory service, otherwise for nine years, when this is the only fault to be found, except the desire for a change, it is a distinct compliment to their work—in fact a very high commendation.

Who would think of changing a servant whose work had been in every way satisfactory, except that he did not make enough noise about it? Would the work have been better done if Mr. Langford had been the commission? Is this the Mr. Langford who so strongly opposed the purchase of the waterworks by the City and predicted such dire consequences if the purchase were made? With such preconceived ideas, is he likely to do better in the management than a man who is and always has been in sympathy with it?

Is this Mr. Langford the man who so strongly opposed the purchase of the Hilliard farm—one of the best investments ever made by the city?

Answers to these questions would be welcome to the ratepayers.

Thanking you for this space, I am yours truly,

—CITIZEN.

Trustee Election May Now be Set Aside

Protestant Electors of S. S. No. 8, Otonabee, Make Protest

A representative deputation of Protestant ratepayers of Public School section No. 8, Otonabee, visited Inspector Lees at his office at the Court House on Saturday morning, to request the inspector as provided by the act, for a date for the hearing of evidence against the manner holding the last election of trustees in the section and with a view to having it set aside and a new election held. Saturday, January 14th, at 2 p.m., 1911, was set by the inspector for the hearing. The Statute says regarding the teaching of religion in public schools that (sec. 8, sub.-sec. one) "No pupil in a public school shall be required to read or study in or from any religious book or to join in any exercise of devotion or religion objected to by his parent or guardian." And (sub.-sec. two) "Subject to the regulations pupils shall be allowed to receive such religious instruction as their parents or guardians desire."

These would appear to be the only sections or clauses bearing on the teaching of religion in public schools and as a consequence such teaching would appear to be at the discretion of the trustees. Manifestly a public school under these circumstances may be turned into a separate school if the trustees are favorable. It is time that it was settled that public schools cannot be made sectarian at the request or dictation of anybody and it is this contention that is now being fought out in S.S. 8, Otonabee. Public opinion will back up the Protestants of No. 8, in their wish to bring about the complete secularization of public schools. The event is far-reaching and as has been shown in other places, the agitation is becoming general. It will be a surprise to many if the school act is as "wide-open" as it appears to be

Mrs. Stetson will Put Up a Strong Fight

New York, Dec. 31.—The first big conflict in the campaign of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson and her followers in New York to gain control of the Christian Science Church, will begin in this city early in January when the Stetsonites attempt to gain control of the first church of New York by electing five of the nine trustees of that institution. The keynote of the campaign, which is now on, will be the "Immortality of Mrs. Eddy." Mrs. Stetson declares that there are at least 800 members of the church who look to her rather than Virgin O. Strickler, who succeeded her as first reader when she was excommunicated, as their leader.

Early in January the election of nine trustees, the controlling body of the churches, will be held. The "immortal" faction claim that they will be able to elect five of their followers which will give them control of the first church in this city. This will be an opening wedge for control of the mother church in Boston, and eventually the entire sect with its adherents.

The "regulars" at the time of Mrs. Eddy's death, foreseeing an attempt to wrest control of the church from the directorate of the mother church in Boston, quietly adopted amendments to the constitution of the first church, having for their object the refusal of office to those who adhere to the interpretations of Mrs. Stetson.

The question of "heresy" will enter into the controversy before it is threshed out and eventually settled

A KITCHEN SHOWER.

At a kitchen shower given by Miss Bertha Curtis, Warsaw road, in honor of Miss Mary Pratley, who will soon leave for Sunny Slope, Alberta, where she is to be married, a very pleasant time was spent by the guests who numbered about twenty. Refreshments were served. A number of useful presents were received by Miss Pratley.

The List of Candidates that are Seeking Election—Two By-Laws

There is no great excitement about the elections to be held to-day and it is probable the vote will be small though all who are in favor of the Bonner-Worth By-law should not fail to turn out and make sure of its being carried.

There will also be some interest taken in the contest for water commissioner.

The law with regard to the election of the Board of Education seems to be a very absurd one as regards balloting. Why the name of a per-

No Charges Against Local Hotel Keepers

License Inspector Stewart has brought thirty charges for violation of the liquor law during the past year. The aggregate of the fines imposed was $410, ranging from $10 up. $100 of this amount was contributed by the proprietor of the Chemong Hotel for selling liquor without a license. Notwithstanding that there are no less than 66 names on the "Indian list" not a single charge was made against any hotel keeper in this city.

This speaks wellll for them and shows that they are doing their best to keep within the law. The whole of the $410 goes to the Government, but the hundred is set apart to the credit of Smith township as a local option fund for the enforcement of the law.

Bewdly Man Dead, was 111 Years Old

Cobourg, Dec. 31.—The funeral of Cesare Guyatt, perhaps the oldest man in Ontario, who died at Bewdly at the great age of 111 years and 9 months, took place here Friday. Born in what was then called Lower Canada, Mr. Guyatt was one of a family of sixteen, one of whom is still living. The latter is the youngest of the family, and is now 76 years of age.

Moving with his family early in life to Ontario, Cesare Guyatt saw the wilderness give place to peaceful homesteads and the Province take a proud place in commerce, education, arts, and agriculture. The funeral took place to St. Michael's Cemetery here. Service at the church was conducted by Rev. Father Murray.

THE MORNING TIMES

MONDAY, JANUARY 2, 1911.

ENGLISH NOT ALWAYS THE LANGUAGE.

The president of a great bank told us the other day that Canada was trying to assimilate an influx of of immigrants equal to one-twentieth of our present population. Assimilating immigrants! That is getting them to understand our ideals of civilization, making them acquainted with our institutions, and teaching them our language. It is difficult to have homogeneity in a nation that has diversity of language. While this is the universal opinion in Ontario, yet there is an uneasy feeling in the province that English is not always the language of the schools attended by French-Canadian children.

With our French-Canadian citizens race is a passion. They are aggressive in their efforts to extend their language. The French language has no moral nor technical claim for recognition in any Province in Canada outside of Quebec, except in the Federal Parliament and in Federal laws and documents. If French-Canadians from Quebec choose to settle and reside in Ontario they must accept the school laws of the Province and use the English language. There is nothing unfriendly to the French in making this assertion. Settlers coming to the Province should accept the conditions as a matter of course. The fearless investigation by the Government into conditions in Prescott, Glengarry, Russell and Stormont and the decisions to withhold the public grant in seven cases until the law is faithfully observed, show that it is the intention to have English recognized as the only official language and to make the schools in every essential particular conform to the regulations of the Department of Education.

The United States have followed a wise policy. They have never permitted a language problem to arise. From the beginning the rule has been strictly followed that English is and must continue to be the language of their Public Schools. Individual States have gone further and have assumed a supervision over private schools to the extent of compelling them to teach English to a certain degree of efficiency. Many French-Canadians have migrated from Quebec to the manufacturing centres of the New England States. Lowell, Fall River and Lawrence, Massachusetts, has each a large French-Canadian population. Some of their children attend the Public Schools of these cities, but the great majority attend parochial schools, exclusively French. In 1906 the State of Massachusetts amended its school law so as to forbid the employment of any minor under sixteen who cannot read and write English. That is, all children under sixteen who have not a command of English sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the law, must attend school every day. The operation of that law revealed a very bad state of things among the children of the French parochial schools of Massachusetts with respect to their knowledge of English.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

"Not many. They are mostly mud hovels. What is in your mind?"

"We might endeavor to cross the river before we reach the bridge. By riding boldly along the Lucknow Road we shall place many miles between ourselves and Cawnpore before day breaks."

"That certainly seems to offer our best chance. We have plenty of horses and we ought to be in Lucknow soon after dawn."

"What if matters are as bad there?"

"Impossible! Lawrence has a whole regiment with him, the 32nd, and plenty of guns. Poor Wheeler, at Cawnpore, commanded a depot, mostly officials on the staff, and invalids. At any rate, Malcolm, we must have some objective. Lucknow spells hope. Neither Meerut nor Allahabad is attainable. And what will become of Winifred if we fail to reach some station that still holds out?"

The girl herself now came to them.

"I refuse to remain alone any longer," she said. "I don't know a quarter of what is going on. I have tied the tiller with a rope. Please tell me what is happening and why a man shouted to Chumru from the bank."

She spoke calmly, with the pleasantly modulated voice of a well-bred Englishwoman. If aught were wanted to enhance the contrast between the peace of the river and the devildom of Cawnpore it was given in full measure by her presence there. How little did she realise the long drawn-out agony that was even then beginning for her sisters in that ill-fated entrenchment! It was the idle whim of fortune that she was not with them. And not one was destined to live—not one among hundreds!

But it was a time for action, not for speech. Malcolm asked her gently to go back to the helm and keep it jammed hard-a-starboard until they arrived at the left bank. Then he took an oar and Mayne and Chumru tackled the other. The three men pulled manfully athwart the stream. They could not tell what progress they were making, and the Ganges ran swiftly in mid-channel, being five times as wide as the Thames at London Bridge. Yet they toiled on with desperate energy. They had crossed the swirl of deep water when a low, straight-edged barrier appeared on the starboard side, and, before they could attempt to avert the calamity, the budgerow crashed against a pontoon and drove its bows under the superstructure. It was locked there so firmly that a score of men had to labor for hours next day ere it could be cleared.

Nevertheless, that which they regarded as a misfortune was a blessing. The shock of the collision alarmed the horses and one of them climbed like a cat on to the bridge. Frank sprang after him and caught the reins before the startled creature could break away. And that which one horse could do might be done by seven. Bidding Chumru arrange some planks to give the others better foothold, he told Winifred and Mayne to join him and help in holding the animals as they gained the roadway. A couple of natives who ran up from the Lucknow side were peremptorily ordered to stand. Indeed, they were harmless coolies and soon they offered to assist, for the deadly work in Cawnpore that night was scarcely known to them as yet. In a couple of minutes the fugitives were mounted, each of the men leading a spare horse, and advancing at a steady trot; though the bridge swayed and creaked a good deal under this forbidden pace, they soon found by the upward grade that they were crossing the sloping mud bank leading to the actual highway.

Thirty-five miles of excellent road now separated them from Lucknow. The hour was not late, about half past ten, so they had fully six hours of starlit obscurity in which to travel, because, though the month was June, India is not favored with the prolonged twilight of dawn and eve familiar to other latitudes.

They clattered through the outlying bazaar without disturbing a soul. Probably every man woman and child able to walk was adding to the din in the great city beyond the river. Pariah dogs yelped at them, some heavy carts drawn across the road caused a momentary halt, and a herd of untended buffaloes lying patiently near their byre told the story of the excitement that had drawn their keeper across the bridge.

Soon they were in the open, and a fast canter became permissible. They passed by many a temple devoted to Kali or elephant-headed Buddha, by many a sacred mosque or tomb of Mohammedan saint, by many a holy tree decorated with ribbons in honor of its tutelary deity. Now they were flying between lanes of sugar-cane or tall castor-oil plants, now traversing arid spaces where reh, the efflorescent salt of the earth, had killed all vegetation and reduced a once fertile land to a desert.

Five miles from Cawnpore they swept through the hamlet of Mungul war. They saw no one, and no one seemed to see them, though it is hard to say in India what eyes may not be peering through wattle screen or heavy barred door. In the larger village of Onao they met a group of chowkidars, or watchmen, in the main street. These men salaamed to the ashib-log, probably on account of the stir created by the horses. Without drawing rein, they pushed on to Buseerutgunge, crossing the river Sai, and neared the village of Bunnee.

If only men could read the future, how Malcolm's soldier spirit would have kindled as Mayne told him the names of those squalid communities! Each yard of that road was destined to be sprinkled with British blood, while its ditches would be choked with the bodies of mutineers. But these things were behind the veil, and the one dominant thought possessing Malcolm now was that unless Winifred and her uncle obtained food of some sort they must fall from their saddles with sheer exhaustion. He and his servant had made a substantial meal early in the evening, but the others had eaten nothing owing to the alarm and confusion that reigned at Bithoor.

Winifred, indeed, in response to a question, said faintly that she thought she could keep going if she had a drink of milk. Such an admission coming from her brave lips, warned Frank that he must call a halt regardless of loss of time. Assuredly, this was an occasion when the sacrifice [illegible] to be continued.

AFTER TREATMENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, boldness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 6 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW MERCHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish. W. "THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields,

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,625 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Mairs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayniete, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing mag gety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline, due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Nietoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least as far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $65,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

HANGED FOR CURIOSITY

His Head Swelled and the Hole Got Smaller

Once, when working on the Midland Railway, I had to go from Birmingham to Wolverhampton, says a correspondent. I was in a compartment alone, when I soon discovered that my mate had failed to put the lamp in at the top. Thinking he had just put it outside the aperture and forgotten it, I placed my box end-up on the seat, and, standing on it, squeezed my head through the hole to seek the lamp. Immediately my eyes were filled with smuts from the engine, and I tried to get my head back. Alas! my head seemed to have swollen, and the hole to have shrunk! In making desperate efforts to liberate myself, I succeeded in kicking my box over, and there I was, hanging from the roof, with my feet a good yard from the floor.

I kicked, yelled, groaned, and screamed for what seemed hours, and at last succeeded in attracting the attention of passengers in the next compartment, when the train was stopped and I was extricated, just as I thought all was up.

Although I nearly met my death from hanging, the company reprimanded me, and suspended me from work for a week.

JUGGLING WITH HER LIFE

A Woman's Desperate Method of Frightening Husband

Desperate measures were taken by Kate Hall, Halifax, England, to frighten her husband. Seeing a candle burning in a cellar window, P. C. Stevenson stopped on his beat shortly after midnight, and peered down into the basement. In the dim light he could see a woman in the cellar with a cord round her neck, suspended from a washing machine. She was shouting, "John," and her husband then appeared at the bottom of the cellar steps, and with a knife cut her down. The constable knocked at the door, and asked what the woman had been trying to do. She told him that her husband had threatened to leave her and that she had pretended to hang herself to frighten him. At the police court, Mrs. Wade was charged with attempting to commit suicide, and she was discharged on promising not to be so foolish again.

STRUCK A LION

Fulton Entered a Cage Where There Were Five Cubs

Some little excitement was created among visitors to Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie, located in Alloa Public Park, by a local publican, named William Fulton, entering alone a cage containing five large-sized lion cubs. One of the animals came forward and Fulton smacked it on the nose with his hand, and it retreated. He remained inside about five minutes and was loudly cheered when he stepped from the cage.

WROUGHT BY A HAMMER-HEAD

A few years ago when I was turning in some works in Sheffield, says H. Batchelor, I happened to be centering a bar of steel to put into my lathe, when my hammer head broke across the eye where the shaft fits through. One half remained on the shaft, and the other went flying into the air. Suddenly there was an awful trembling and bumping higher up the shop, and a great face-plate cracked, and let a large lugot, weighing about thirty tons, fall out. My hammer head had fallen into the gearing, broken all the teeth in the cogs, and split the face-plate. I expected I should be discharged, but they said it was marvellous that no one was killed.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

The woman in charge of the Pickleham post-office was strongly suspected of tampering with the packages and parcels entrusted to her care.

One day a rosy-cheeked youngster entered the post-office and carefully laid upon the counter a huge slice of rich iced cake.

"With my sister, the bride's, compliments," he said; "and will yer please to eat as much as yer possibly can?"

The post-mistress smiled delightedly.

"How very kind of the bride to remember me!" she cried. "Did she know I have a special weakness for wedding-cake?"

"She did that!" coldly replied the youngster. "And she thought she'd send yer a bit of it this afternoon, jest to take the edge off yer appertite before she posted any boxes to her friends!"

OFFENSIVE TO THE LANDSCAPE

In a certain Midland town there is a man who is so ugly that it has been said of him that his face is an "offence to the landscape."

One Bank Holiday he was seated on a rustic bridge some distance outside the town, when a tourist came by, and, after gazing at the "offence" a moment, he said:

"Eh, but th'art ugly!"

"Well," replied the other, in an aggrieved tone, "I can't help it, can I?"

The tourist pondered a moment, and then said:

"Tha might stay at whoam!"

MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE

"Edward, I'm ashamed of you. Bottom af a class of twenty-three younger boys? Disgraceful!"

"But, mother, it might have been worse."

"Worse! How could it have been worse?"

"There might have been more boys in the class."

RATS STEAL FALSE TEETH

A young woman of Burnley left her false teeth in a glass of water for the night, and the following morning they were missing. A haunt of rats under the kitchen slopstone was searched, and there, sure enough, were the missing molars intact. They were lying among some scraps which had been collected by the rats.

A DARING EXPLOIT

A Skilful Manoeuvre by Sir Archibald Hunter

The fact that Sir Archibald Hunter is with one exception the youngest officer of his rank in the Army, is sufficient proof of his soldierly qualities and his fighting skill, and he has well deserved the Governorship of Gibraltar which has been conferred upon him. He joined the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment thirty-six years ago, at eighteen. At twenty-nine he was a brevet-major, and at forty a full-fledged major-general. "Hunter's rag" it was that waved in the forefront of every battle during the last arduous campaign on the Nile, while the man whom it represented was known as "the point of the Sirdar's spear." One of Sir Archibald's most daring exploits was performed one dark night while at Ladysmith, when the General, with a little band of volunteers, crept over one of the surrounding hills and blew the head off a mischievous Long Tom. He led all the way on the dangerous task, surprised and overcame the Boers, and crippled the gun. Sir Archibald is one of the few British military officers to enjoy the personal friendship of the German Emperor, whom he once saved from a serious accident. During a visit of the Kaiser to Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny a few years ago, General Hunter was in command of the troops in Scotland, and was present in that capacity on the station platform to welcome the Emperor. Lord Rosebery's carriage was waiting, and the Emperor had just taken his seat in it when one of the horses commenced to plunge violently, and in another moment the pair would have bolted. Like a flash, however, General Hunter reached the animal and dealt it a smashing blow on the nose that quickly quieted it. Another pair of horses were soon secured, and Sir Archibald received the hearty thanks of the Kaiser for the smart way he grappled with the situation. Since that time he has been very popular with the Emperor, who never forgets a service, and he shares with Lord Roberts the distinction of being the only non-German soldier who has a standing invitation to visit the Royal palace at Potsdam.

ANTI-FASHION LEAGUE

An anti-fashion league has just been started in New York with the highly praiseworthy object of combating the spread of the ridiculous fashions and crazes adopted by the very rich among less well-to-do people, says M. A. P.

There is certainly plenty of work for such an organization to do here. Women who can with difficulty afford to spend as much as thirty or forty pounds a year on their dress, but yet insist on wearing hobble skirts, yards of hat, gloves up to their shoulders and similar absurdities—made fashionable for a moment by women who can afford to spend a thousand a year with their modistes and milliners—ought to be objects of special attention from the anti-fashion league.

Then there are various fashionable cults, the spread of which an anti-fashion league would be doing good work by combating. For example, the cult of expensive pets in the way of cats, dogs, mice, and lizards of rare type and breeds is all very well for women who can afford to pay five hundred pounds for such a pet without missing the money, but when Mrs Brown of Balham starts imitating their example by spending twenty or thirty pounds on some wretched animal probably not worth so many shillings, she badly needs some plain words of advice from an anti-fashion league.

MACHINE THAT "THINKS"

Sticks on Stamps and Politely But Firmly Refuses Foreign Coins

A machine which thinks, or at any rate discriminates, is being installed by the Post Office in London, England, and one has a vision of the crowds who will flock to it when duly attached to the corner lamp-post, for the purchase of forgotten postage-stamps on Sunday evenings.

Affixing postage-stamps by the natural process has never been either a pleasant or a wholesome practice; here is a machine which not only delivers a stamp for a penny, but obligingly sticks the stamp on the envelope for the purchaser.

Fraudulent lead discs it flings contemptuously into its interior; foreign coins it returns with the courteous assumption that the depositor has made a pardonable mistake.

With fair truthfulness the automaton is ready to do the fair thing by the purchaser, and to do it at the terrific rate of 4,000 stamped envelopes per hour. It will stamp post-paper wrappers, and at the same time register the number of stamps used, and it will stamp your letters up to 50,000 at a time. All you have to do is to put 50,000 pennies in a slot and press a knob 50,000 times.

WOMEN MAKE GOOD WAGES

Sixty women have gone from Spokane to Walla Walla to pick prunes, and they are making as high as $3.50 a day at the work. The crop this year is heavy, and stewed prunes promises to be a popular article of diet in many boarding houses next winter.

"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"

If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a real interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta.

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the most irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Alberta has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ago.

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your application by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots. On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

PROHIBITION IN NEW ZEALAND.

The war against the liquor traffic is taking a new form in the Dominion of New Zealand, and it is expected that the result will be either national or local prohibition, in forms which will lead the way for other sections of the Empire. A licensing bill now before the New Zealand Parliament contains these interesting provisions:

National prohibition is to be submitted as an issue at licensing polls; local no-license and national prohibition are to be carried by 55 per cent. of the votes (this percentage, according to a later message, has been raised to 60 per cent.) national prohibition is to come into force four years after its adoption at a poll, and local prohibition one year after adoption; if national prohibition is carried the subsequent votes (every three years) will be on national restoration, the 55 (60) per cent. majority operating and licenses to be restored in three months; during national prohibition liquor is not to be imported, manufactured, or sold in New Zealand; breweries and "depots" within five miles of a no-license district are to be prohibited; there is no provision to prevent any increase in the existing number of licenses; the employment of barmaids is to be prohibited, with certain exceptions; the age under which it is illegal to serve youths is to be extended to 21.

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Rosslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, they should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

HANDLING OF POTATOES

Some Useful Hints as to Digging, Sorting and Storing the Crop

If potatoes have not been affected with blight or rot, the best time to dig them is as soon as the tops have died, if the weather is favorable. Too often potatoes are dug just before the frost becomes severe enough to freeze the soil to the depth of an inch or so. This time of digging is usually chosen as a matter of convenience and quite irrespective of when the stalks die. The stalks dry up in many places about September and often before. If the potatoes are planted on sandy, loamy soil or a gravelly loam with good natural or artificial drainage there is not much danger of injuring the crop by leaving them in the ground a short time, but if there is no disease the sooner they are dug the better. Potatoes which have been killed by blight will usually rot as soon as the conditions are favorable, and for this reason a diseased crop is better left in the ground, as the tubers which are diseased will most of them show signs of rot before they have to be taken up in October. If diseased potatoes are dug and stored as soon as the tops are dead the disease will almost certainly develop in the pit or cellar, and healthy tubers will rot from contact with the diseased ones. It is not a good practice to dig diseased potatoes early and put them in the field. It is better to delay digging as long as possible and then put the potatoes in a cool, well ventilated cellar where the disease may be checked. Potatoes in wet soil should be dug sooner than those in that which is dryer and well drained. They should be dug in dry weather, so that when they are taken to the cellar or storeroom they will be perfectly dry. If the tubers are housed when wet the conditions become very favorable for the development of the disease which may affect them and for the rotting of the healthy potatoes from contact with those affected.

Digging

The old-fashioned way of digging with the fork is too slow and expensive a method. One man with a fork will dig little more than half an acre a day, while a good potato digger will dig from four to six acres a day. Where several acres of potatoes are grown a mechanical digger becomes almost a necessity and although the outlay for a digging machine amounts to fifty or sixty dollars or more it will harvest the crop at a much smaller cost per bushel than can be done by hand. Not only will it raise the crop more economically than by a fork or plough, but with it the grower is more likely to get his crop dug and picked up while the weather is fine, which is a great consideration.

Where large areas are grown it will be found most convenient to have a number of boxes laid here and there along the rows just far enough apart to allow a man to dump a pail full into them. These boxes should be made strong and of light material and capable of holding about one bushel. They can then be easily lifted by one man onto the wagon and drawn to the cellar or store-room.

Storing

Potatoes should be stored dry in a cool, well ventilated cellar or storeroom which is perfectly dark, as potatoes soon deteriorate in quality if exposed to light. There is no doubt that great loss occurs every year from the careless storing of potatoes by putting them in wet into warm and poorly ventilated cellars and piling them in great heaps. Instead of piling the potatoes against the wall or on the floor, slats should be nailed about one inch apart and about four inches from the wall and a temporary floor should be laid four inches above the permanent floor with small openings between the boards. This will allow air to circulate around and through the pile. If the piles have to be made very large, square ventilators of wood made partly with open slats on two sides and running from the top to the bottom of the pile could be put in here and there through the pile. Another good plan is to keep the potatoes in large crates made with slats nailed close enough together to prevent the potatoes from dropping through. Thousands of bushels of potatoes are lost every year through lack of ventilation. The temperature of the cellar or store-house should be kept as near to 33 to 35 degrees as possible. The cooler potatoes are kept without freezing the better. If too warm the value of the tubers for seed is lessened, since they sprout too easily. They are also much injured for eating.

A good sorting machine can now be obtained which lessens labor considerably. The practice of many growers is to sort and bag the potatoes just before marketing.

QUEER FOOD FOR BABIES

Mothers Who Give Them Beef, Onions and Blisters

The meetings and conferences in connection with the Royal Sanitary Institute were continued at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton. The Countess of Chichester was unavoidably prevented from presiding at the conference of women on hygiene, and her place was taken by the Mayoress of Brighton. Among the papers read was one by Mrs. W. MacDonald, of Uxbridge, dealing with the feeding of infants. She said that many mothers did not know that pickled onions, corned beef and blister heads were injurious food for their infants, and that in pure milk they had all the necessary nutrition to sustain infant life for the first six or eight months. One mother, when remonstrated with for giving her baby beef, said, "Well, what am I to do? He won't eat pork."

JUST WHAT HE MEANT

"John, I understand that you have been saying mean things about me to your acquaintances."

"Why, dearest! Everybody knows that isn't so. Why, I tell everybody that it is you that has made me what I am."

"That's what I mean."

A MONKEY'S FUNERAL

The Animal Lay in State in the Best Room and Cards Were Printed

[illegible] grief at the death of a pet monkey is shown by a Cardiff lady, who has made elaborate arrangements for its burial. The body has been enclosed in a handsome coffin with shining plate, on which is the inscription:—

"In loving memory of my dear Jenny, who died August 21, 1910."

Mourning cards have been printed, the coffin, covered by a shroud, has been placed in the chief room of the house, and the grief-stricken owner is applying to the Corporation for permission to have her pet buried in her mistress's favorite spot near a fountain in Victoria Park. Meanwhile, York Street, Canton, Cardiff, where "Jenny" breathed her last, is in mourning, and her owner, Mrs. Karinago, is only solaced in her bereavement by the sympathy of the neighbors, all the blinds being drawn down in the street. "Jenny" succumbed after a brave struggle to pull through an attack of pneumonia, following upon a chill. She had been one of the household for ten years, being originally brought from some land across the seas by Mr. Karinago, who was a mariner. During her period of illness "Jenny" was attended by four doctors, but all to no purpose. "Jenny" received extraordinary kindness, being regaled with all sorts of delicacies and fruit in abundance. She was rather fastidious in her tastes latterly, showing a marked liking for William pears and Jaffa oranges. Before being taken ill she was allowed the free run of the house, and in the middle room a little step-ladder, a table, and a mirror were provided for her exclusive benefit. Then when she was tired she could rest on the cushioned couch, or, for that matter, go to her own bedroom and lie down on her feather bed. "Jenny" lived a life of ease and comfort, if not of luxury. Dr. J. R. Smith, one of the four medical men attending "Jenny" professionally, said to an interviewer:—

"I had known the monkey for years, but I cannot say that she was endowed with more than ordinary simian intelligence. She was certainly well cared for, and I prescribed for her after having ascertained that she was suffering from bronchial catarrh and consumption. Mrs. Karingo was very anxious to apply hot poultices to "Jenny's" diaphragm, but I pointed out that her thick coat of fur was sufficient protection under the circumstances."

Passers-by in York Street, however, have noticed that "Jenny," although not poulticed, had to wear a thick chest-protector back and front whenever she wanted to sit by the window. "She was very obstreprous against taking ordinary medicine," added the doctor, in a tone of deep concern, "and I had to make it very sweet indeed. However, human aid failed, and 'Jenny' is no more." Since "Jenny" died there has been much excitement in York Street. One afternoon a police constable was called to the street to disperse a crowd of about 300 people who were clamoring to see "Jenny" in her oaken casket. When a correspondent knocked at the house he was answered by a solemn-visaged lady, and admitted, in company with three of the nursing staff from the Treborth Home in Crowbridge Road, who had come to offer their sympathy to the bereaved Mrs. Karinago. The front room is a delightfully furnished apartment, and on the couch, wrapped in a spotless shroud, in an oaken coffin supplied by one of the city's chief funeral furnishers, lay all that remained of poor "Jenny." She bore a peaceful expression, and on her body was laid the loveliest of little wreathe. Referring to her deceased favorite, Mrs. Karinago said:—

"Jenny was a dear creature, so intelligent that she seemed almost human. She understood every word I said to her. A month ago she was taken ill with bronchial catarrh that turned into rapid consumption. A doctor attended her for three weeks. She did not at first like his stethoscope, but she grew accustomed to it, and summitted to treatment. I used to keep her in the bedroom window upstairs, so that she could have the benefit of fresh air. She grew worse, however, and after screeching three times she died on the 21st. It nearly broke my heart. I think that people who like myself, are passionately fond of their pets, should be allowed to bury them in one of the public parks."

The Lord Mayor of Cardiff, in reply to a question put to him, said that no application had been made for permission to bury "Jenny" in Victoria Park. He suggested, however, that the remains should be cremated in their splendid crematorium for dumb animals. As an alternative to cremation, the lady can bury "Jenny" in Victoria Park by merely asking for permission of the parks superintendent.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

NEW STATION FOR GUELPH.

While in the West last week, First Vice President Fitzhugh met a committee representing the city of Guelph, and after several hours deliberation settled the long standing question of a new station, sub-ways and track elevation which has been up on and off for the past ten years. Under the arrangement made, the Grand Trunk has to pay the city $9000, and has to construct a foot subway at Neeve St. On the other hand the city is to transfer to the Grand Trunk, Jubilee Park, one block west of the present station. Here the new station is to be erected.

A number of minor matters were settled involving the surrender by the Grand Trunk of a narrow strip of land near the old station, and the transfer to the Grand Trunk by the city of certain territory for freight facilities south of the new station. Also the city surrenders to the company certain lands which have been used by the city either for sites or lots, but which really was the property of the Grand Trunk.

All the members of the Committee expressed their satisfaction with the outcome of the negotiations.

Ice Cream Galore !

Next summer the citizens of Peterborough will be able to procure all the ice cream they care to consume. Mr. G. A. Gillespie proposes to add an ice cream plant to his creamery on Aylmer street. This is a new industry for Peterborough and we wish Mr. Gillespie success.

Police Court.

John Irwin, who had been drinking and sleeping in the band hall and other places was sentenced to three months in jail with hard labor by the Police Magistrate. Michael Larse, pleaded not guilty and claimed he could get a job in the woods if discharged, was remanded till Tuesday to give him a chance.

Didn't Spend All Their Money.

Notwithstanding the heavy buying before Christmas, a glance into the different stores any day during the past week would show that there are still a goodly number of people who are anxious to trade off their coppers for all sorts of commodities, from candies to automobiles. May their pockets never be empty.

Vote Where Qualified.

There seems to be an impression amongst ratepayers who own property in more than one Ward, that they can vote only in one Ward for aldermen. This is not correct. They may vote wherever they have property qualifications.

There is little danger from a cold or frost an attack of the grip, except when followed by pneumonia, and this never happens when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. This remedy has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds and grip and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. For sale by all dealers.

Court of Revision for North Monaghan.

On December 28th the North Monaghan Court of Revision met in the County Committee room to consider the assessments under the local improvement by-law for the payment of the cost of concrete sidewalks on Morrow and Sherbourne streets. There being no appeals against the assessment it was confirmed on Motion of Mr. Morrow, and seconded by Mr. Robson.

A Tricky Thief.

Last week a young man called at Mr. G. W. Powell's, 590 George St., and engaged for board only. He said he was working for Mr. Carey. On Thursday morning he went out, but returned later in the day when the youngest son of Mr. Powell was the only occupant. He claimed that he was sick and induced the lad to go out to buy him some medicine. He took advantage of the boys' absence to make away with a suit case, an overcoat, razor, revolver, and other articles. He went east and is supposed to have changed at the Central Ontario Junction. He managed to escape the constable at Trenton who had been notified and ran across the ice. He left the suit case behind him, but it is not likely he can escape arrest for long.

"I do not believe that there is any other medicine so good for whooping cough as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. Francis Turpin, Junction City, Ore. This remedy is also unsurpassed for colds and croup. For sale by all dealers.

GAVE DINNER TO STAFF.

Prudential Insurance Co's. Staff Have a Good Time.

Mr. and Mrs. John I. Allen gave a dinner to the field staff of the Prudential Insurance Co. belonging to Peterborough and neighboring agencies at their residence on Homewood Avenue.

Mr. Allen stated that the past year was the most successful insurance year since he had been appointed superintendent.

The following gentlemen represented the different agencies :

The Port Hope office was represented by Assistant Superintendent Cornelius and agents Woodcock, Perkins and Isaacks ; Lindsay, by R. E. Sherry ; Oshawa, by Assistant Superintendent Seymour, and agents D. Morris, W. J. Donovan and R. E. Morris ; Peterborough, by Assistant Superintendents J. Leadbetter and R. F. Sedgwick, and agents C. Green J. Lonergan, A. R. Graham, J. Malane, H. T. Gambell and C. H. Patterson.

After a substantial repast was disposed of, various games and music were indulged in. A progressive euchre game was won by C. H. Patterson, while Mr. R. E. Sherry captured the coveted booby prize.

Songs were rendered by Assistant Superintendent J. Leadbetter and Agents A. R. Graham, H. T. Gambell and J. L. Lonergan, while the Prudential male quartette covered itself with glory by its fine rendering of part songs.

A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by a cordial vote of thanks to the host and hostess for their splendid entertainment, which was greatly appreciated by the staff.

HOCKEY TO-NIGHT.

Enthusiasm Over To-Night's Hockey Game.

A great deal of interest is being taken over the probable results of to-night's hockey game between the Argonauts of Toronto, a senior O.H.A. team and the intermediates of this city. The latter are in good shape, and it is expected they will make the seniors hustle to win. The game will be called at 8.30 sharp, and Mr. W. J. O'Brien of this city will handle the bell.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise oearning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say : "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

THE BIGAMY CASE.

Parties Get Off on Suspended Sentence.

While strictly according to law, Harvey Ellis and Hannah Clarke were guilty of bigamy, the evidence showed that they both had been advised that they could legally marry. Hannah Clapper had been married to John Clarke at the age of fifteen, though Clarke gave her age as eighteen to get the license.

They lived together for four years and had two children. He then asked her to live with her grandmother so he might get a start, but he never returned to her. That was twelve years ago last August. She had been told that after seven years absence she had a right to remarry.

She did not know at the time whether her first husband was alive or dead.

Harry Ellis on being called, stated that he could read a little, but could not write. His first wife had died five years ago and left him with ten children, the oldest of whom was fourteen. He had hired Mrs. Clarke to keep house for him and as they were advised to get married and he thought it was quite legal, they had done so.

Under the circumstances and for the sake of the children, His Honor, Judge Huycke, let them go under suspended sentence.

Twenty-seven members of the Glad Hand Club sat down to their second annual banquet at Coleman's new grill room on Friday evening. Mr. W. Cochrane occupied the chair.

Coleman, R. Briggs, Ed. Mann and W. Cochrane.

Truly Yours

W. H. BULLER

CARD OF THANKS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I desire to thank the thousand and odd ratepayers who voted for me for Water Commissioner.

The substantial vote I received should show that the people were not satisfied with things as they are, and I am sure, had full information been forthcoming, that public disapproval would have been so pronounced that it would have shown itself in my return as a protest against what we know exists.

My efforts have certainly not been in vain, if the Commissioners have been shown that they are the servants of the people, and not a close corporation.

Thanking you one and all, and with the compliments of the season.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM LONGFORD

A DESPERATE BATTLE IN OLD LONDON—EIGHT MEN KILLED

COUNTLESS THOUSANDS OF THE WORLD'S METROPOLIS CROWD NEIGHBORING STREETS TO WATCH THE SPECTACLE.

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill Was Reckless and Daring—Home Secretary Visits Scene and Ignores Flying Bullets—Tried to Take the Anarchists Alive.

London, Jan 3.—Eight men, six of them desperate anarchists, and two of them firemen, killed, and a score of police, soldiers of the Scots Guards and spectators were wounded in a desperate battle between a band of anarchists besieged in a house on Sidney street, east end, and nearly 1,200 soldiers and police to-day. The battle raged over eight hours and was watched by more than half a million people. It was the most spectacular conflict in a century's history of London.

FOUGHT LIKE FANATICS.

The anarchists knew it was hopeless fight, but they laughed and cursed as they poured volleys into the ranks of their besiegers, and kept the struggle up for eight hours.

The men fought to their death in the burning building, which they had set on fire themselves, evidently with a hope of escaping under cover of smoke.

In desperation they fought on until the fire reached their ammunition, which exploded, leaving them defenceless. Then they disappeared one by one from the roof where they had been driven by the flames.

The fire department was called out after dozens of volleys had been sent into the building.

BELL PHONE CHANGES.

Increasing Business Demands Separation of Commercial and Operating Departments.

For some time past important changes in operating the local Bell Telephone plant have been in contemplation and will now be made, greatly facilitating the despatch of business. The commercial and operating departments will be separated, each being under its own head official.

Mr. A. A. Smith will be in sole charge of the operating end of the company, while Mr. F. W. Doan, will supervise the commercial side. A competent man will be brought here, also to act under Mr. Doan's direction.

Mr. Harry Soanes will continue to be wire chief.

COUNTY COUNCIL PRACTICALLY UNCHANGED.

Mr. Samuel Killen Elected Reeve of Eastmore by Small Majority Over Mr. John Young, Last Year's Incumbent.

There were only three elections on Monday and in two of these last year's reeves were re-elected.

The only change in the council, therefore, will be the substitution of Mr. Samuel Killen for Mr. John Young.

The council for 1911 will be as follows:

A. Breault, Norwood, reeve; E. A. Tanner, Lakefield, reeve; J. Knox, Havelock, reeve; W. Comstock, Asphodel, reeve; J. W. Russell, Belmont, etc., reeve; W. Tucker, Burleigh, etc., reeve; W. Hales, Chandos, reeve; C. J. Darling, Dummer, reeve; F. Moher, Douro, reeve; Samuel Killen, Eastmore, reeve; C. Coben, Galway, etc., reeve; R. Shaw, Harvey, reeve; W. G. Howden, Monaghan, reeve; W. J. Porter, Otonabee, reeve; W. B. Stewart, Otonabee, deputy-reeve; T. H. Graham, Smith, reeve; J. H. Garbutt, Smith, deputy-reeve.

RESULTS OF THE ELECTION IN THE CITY.

Both By-laws Carried—Mr. W. H. Hill Re-Elected as Water Commissioner—A New Man, Mr. Jas. Browne Polls the Largest Aldermanic Vote.

Four of last year's members of the Council declined to be candidates again this year and two of the old members of the Council were defeated, so that there will be six new faces on the Council board.

While the Bonner-Worth By-law received a very large majority of those who voted, it is to be regretted that so many who doubtless favored it, did not cast their votes. They evidently were too sure of its being carried.

Under the circumstances the City Council will be fully justified in applying to the legislature for authority to carry the By-law into effect.

As was anticipated the vote cast was much smaller than last year, according to the estimate 1000 less.

The following are the results of the election:

FIREMEN ENJOY THEMSELVES.

Annual Banquet Held at the Fire Hall—Music, Singing and a Few Speeches.

As is customary at this season of the year, the firemen held their annual banquet at the Aylmer street fire hall on Monday night.

The hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion.

The four aldermen who were retiring from the council were invited to attend, but only ex-Ald. Batten and Gillespie were able to be present, the other two being detained by important business.

The company was limited to the firemen and their immediate friends.

The tables which were set out and decorated by the firemen showed a great deal of artistic taste and were greatly admired by the guests.

Supper was served at 7 o'clock, and full justice was done to the good things which had been provided in great abundance.

After supper, music, singing and speech making kept the company in a happy frame of mind and all enjoyed themselves highly.

Fortunately there were no alarms this year to interrupt the joviality. Last year the firemen's banquet was interrupted twice, the first time just as the guests were about to sit down and the second time towards the end.

We congratulate them on the success of their entertainment.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effectual. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It allays the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Thousands have testified to its superior excellence. Sold by all dealers.

GLOWING REFERENCES MADE TO HIS LONG, FAITHFUL AND VALUED SERVICES BY HIS COLLEGES. MR. DUMBLE IS PROUD OF PETERBOROUGH'S EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES.

The Board of Education met in regular monthly session last night to wind up all business for 1910. The new board for 1911 will meet on Thursday evening.

There were present chairman L. M. Hayes, and Trustees D. W. Dumble, B. F. Ackerman, Col. Miller, T. H. Adams, R. Fair, John Crane, Dr. Morrison, W. H. Hill and Dr. Burnham.

The occasion was one of sincerest regret at the voluntary retirement of Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., one of the board's oldest and most energetic members. And,

Mr. W. H. Hill moved, seconded by Dr. Morrison, that in view of the retirement of Mr. D. W. Dumble, K. C., one of the oldest members of the board, and who has for many years, and at different periods given most valuable services to the people of this city as a member of this board: "Be it, therefore, resolved, that a vote of thanks be tendered Mr. Dumble for his able, active and efficient services in connection with the work of this board in the past, and we wish him many years of good health and usefulness in the community in which he is so well known and so highly esteemed and respected."

It is unnecessary to say that the foregoing resolution was carried unanimously.

Mr. Hill spoke in strongest eulogy of Mr. Dumble's valuable services as a school trustee. He doubted if any member had ever accomplished as much work in the interests of education as the retiring gentleman had during his long service on the Board of Education. His untiring energy and active interest had been specially marked during the erection of the Collegiate Institute, the King Edward School and the enlargement of the Queen Alexandra School. Mr. Dumble, he said, is retiring full of honors; the members of the Board, one and all deeply regret his retirement, and heartily wish him long years of happiness and prosperity in the community he has served so faithfully, and in which he is so highly esteemed. Although retiring from active service on the Board, it is to be hoped Mr Dumble will still interest himself in the city's educational welfare.

Dr. Morrison heartily endorsed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Hill. He knew of no man who had devoted so much time to the demands of his office as had Mr. Dumble, whose services to the Building Committee during the erection of the Institute and new schools had been very acceptable and highly valued.

Chairman L. M. Hayes, cordially acquiesced in the foregoing remarks. Personally he had known Mr. Dumble for twenty-five years, and highly appreciated his many good qualities and sterling worth. In conclusion, the chairman offered that the retiring member's energetic co-operation had been of much assistance to him, and, while regretting his retirement, it afforded him much pleasure to tender Mr. Dumble the Board's unanimous thanks.

Mr. Dumble appreciated the Board's generous expression of good will, which he thought was more than he merited. To sympathise with the Board of Education in the laudable efforts to make Peterborough's educational institutions a credit to the city, and equal to all requirements, was natural to him in view of his long residence in the community. He was proud of his association with the Board and had always taken pleasure in helping the Board to attain the best results. We have no academy in Peterborough; boys and girls, from the highest to the humblest, sit side by side in our schools and enjoy the same educational advantages. And, he had never heard any complaint from those who could well afford to patronize private schools, that there children suffered from adverse influence in having to so associate with poorer little folk. On the other hand, the humblest child must necessarily be elevated and refined by the quiet influence and example of those children who had greater advantages in life. Mr. Dumble here paid a glowing eulogy to our teachers, many of whom, he characterized as possessing qualifications not a long way removed from those of some of the best professors. As to school taxes, he offered to the expenditure was justified, for what better can a father do for his children than to give them school advantages such as are available in Peterborough, that will equip them for life highly educated and cultured—assets of which they cannot be subsequently deprived. He was proud of Peterborough's educational system. Referring to his long experience on the Board, Mr. Dumble was gratified to say that all business had been conducted in a courteous and harmonious manner, free from any jar whatever, and every effort had been exercised to attain the best results. In conclusion, he said that his retirement was due to need of rest and home comfort after a long and active public life. "I leave you all with considerable reluctance; you have my highest respect and good will, together with best wishes for the fullest measure of success in the exercise of those high duties you are performing for this city and country."

CHAIRMAN RETIRES.

Mr. L. M. Hayes here signified his intention of retiring from the chairmanship at the Board's next meeting. He deeply appreciated the honor accorded him as presiding officer of the Board the past two years, and tendered his heartiest thanks to all members, collectively and individually, for their courtesy and acceptable co-operation during his terms of chairmanship.

Mr. Hayes is the first Separate School representative on the Board of Education who has held the office of chairman. His retirement is actuated by his opinion that after two years in the chair, the honor of the position should be voluntarily left open for another member.

FOUGHT FLAMES IN SHADOW OF DEATH.

Forty Firemen Conquered Fire Amid Vast Quantity of Paints and Explosives.

New York, Dec. 31.—Fighting in the shadow of death with vast quantities of paints and explosive materials only a few feet from the flames, forty firemen conquered a fire that partly destroyed the wall paper and paint factory of Jos. Ryan at Fulton street and New York avenue, Brooklyn, to-day. Three hundred girls and men who had just gone to work in a pipe factory next door, fled in a panic when the flames broke out. One fireman was overcome by smoke and several had narrow escapes. The loss is $50,000.

The Lessons of the Municipal Elections

To the Editor of The Times,—

Sir,—It is a long time since events took the turn in Peterborough that they took on Monday, and the occasion is too marked a one to allow it to pass without comment. Feelings have been harrowed and lines drawn. Let us see if this is the product of mere fury or the natural result of things that are happening the world over; I am persuaded that it is a serious mistake to suppose that mere bigotry or blind passion has been the moving force on either side. First of all, however, let us say that those men who are "stale" as all these questions are a danger to any community. They are always "stale" on anything that disturbs their business, since it is apt to produce financial loss or that disturbs their minds since life to them is a time of trouble, a sort of nuisance anyway, to be taken as quietly as possible. But recent events in Peterborough are not in any sense due to local causes, although they may appear to be. The Church of Rome is already asserting that the rebellion against her in Portugal has fizzled out, and that the people there and the government also are greatly modifying their first craze for a liberty which the Church has pointed out cannot exist anywhere. The Emperor of Germany has declared to the monks of St. Benedict before all Europe that his throne depends upon the altar, and the Church of Rome rejoices to the uttermost parts of the earth accordingly. Every R.C. newspaper says "We told you so."

The Church continues to fulminate against democracy. Protestantism is by no means in a thoroughly strong position. It is more varied and divided than ever. The Church claims that her hour of triumph is at hand. That means the triumph of the Church over the People. Can anybody who reads and thinks at all deny this? Is it not a matter of more importance than anything that has happened in our time? Is it froth, folly and fury to talk of what even the blind can see? Is it honest to deny it? Is it wise to shirk it? The question will never be settled until the Church's exclusive claims are abandoned, or the people through fear, neglect a conviction return to the fold. "Englishmen," says the Record, "are learning that their ancestors were robbed of their faith and possessions." Are they? Who robbed them? Nevertheless the fact remains that the Church is moving, and we must give her credit for the courage of her convictions. Do not let the thing pass as a joke or a nuisance. It is neither. It is a most serious business—not for any one part, but for all the people.

Yours,

CITIZEN.

Faced Death with a Smile on His Face

Ossining, N.Y., Jan. 3.—With a smile on his lips, Samuel Austin, a former soldier in the United States army, paid the penalty for wife murder with his life in the electric chair at Sing Sing at 6 a.m. to-day.

Austin is said to have been the coolest man that was ever electrocuted in Sing Sing. He was convicted for the murder of his wife, Irene, at White Plains last year.

There was no hesitancy on Austin's part as he walked into the death room. His bearing was erect and military, and as he took his seat in the chair of death he smiled broadly.

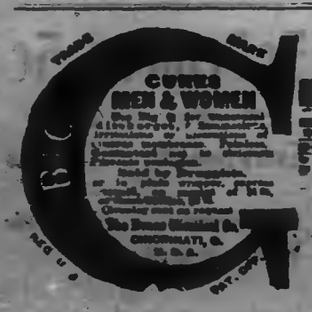
THE REAL DEMOCRACY.

In these days of Lloyd George budgets we hear much about the triumphant march of democracy. By the friends and by the enemies of democracy it is regarded as something portentous. More than a century ago Alexander Hamilton said, "Your democracy, sir, is a great beast." The notion of something wild, terrible, voracious, is always in the minds of those who are opposed to the movement. We do not like the expression "a great beast," but, after all, there are beasts and beasts; and the name of democracy really means that the rights of the ox and the horse are to be asserted against the force and the appetite of the lion and the tiger.

When one reads these alarms about the coming of democracy, and the terrible things the common people will do when they come into their own, and compares them with the actual conditions, he scarcely knows whether the result is farce or pathos. For he finds that for ages the masses of the people have been so humble—humble not like Uriah Heep, but like Tom Pinch—so weak in the assertion of their rights, yet so strong in service and in toil—so dumb, so lacking in the means of effective expression. Even to-day, and in countries where democracy is said to be all-powerful, anyone who really studies types of men will find a ludicrous or pathetic contrast between the pictures of the fierce and arrogant democracy and the demeanor of flesh-and-blood mechanics, laborers, and farmers whom he meets in his daily life. They do look and act and speak so little like tyrants—so much like men who would be amply satisfied with a fair chance and something equal opportunities.

The truth is that democracy simply means self-government—the right of each man to manage his own affairs, to have his fair share of the bounty of Providence, and to pay taxes according to his means. It is quite true that in the progress of democracy one occasionally hears extreme assertions of the power of majorities. But these represent a reaction against tyranny worse than that of the majority. It is true that a hundred and one men have no Divine right to rule a hundred; but the system is a protection against the two hundred being ruled by one. Denunciations are hurled against the demagogue who "sways the multitude." He attracts notice because, perforce, he makes a great deal of noise. But a far greater danger is the man who works in the dark, by intrigue, whispering in the ears of influential people. "Swaying the multitude" is not nearly so dangerous a thing when the multitude knows that it is being swayed as when the thing is done in secret.

The average man means well; human nature on the whole is good, not evil. This is the real safety of democracy. When the minds and the hearts of the people are really applied to the management of public affairs, there is not the least fear that the minority will be oppressed, or that individual energy and genius will be smothered.



THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

(CONLINUED.)

of a few minutes might avoid the grave risk of a breakdown after daybreak. So when they entered Bunnee they pulled up, and discussed ways and means of getting something to eat.

It was then that Malcolm gave evidence that his devotion to the soldier's art had not been practised in vain. Mr. Mayne thought they should rouse the household at the first reputable looking dwelling they found.

"No," said Frank. "Mounted, and in motion, we have some chance of escape unless we fall in with hostile cavalry. On foot, we are at the mercy of any prowling rascals who may be on the warpath. Let us rather look out for a place somewhat removed from the main road. There we do not court observation, and we are sufficiently well armed to protect ourselves from any hostile move on the part of those we summon."

The older man agreed. Rank and wealth count for little in the great crises of life. Here was a Judicial Commissioner of Oudh a fugitive in his own province, and ready to obey a subaltern's slightest wish!

Chumru quickly picked out the house of a zemindar, or land-owner, which stood in its own walled enclosure behind a clump of trees. A rough track led to the gate, and Frank knocked loudly on an iron-studded door.

He used the butt end of a revolver so his rat-tat was imperative enough, but the garden might have been a graveyard for all the notice that was taken by the inhabitants. He knocked again, with equal vehemence and with the same result. But he knew his zemindar, and after waiting a reasonable interval he said clearly:

"Unless the door is opened at once it will be forced. I am an officer of the Company, and I demand an entry."

"Coming, sahib," said an anxious voice. "We knew not who knocked, and there are many budmashes about these nights."

The door yielded to the withdrawal of bolts, but it was still held on a chain. A man peeped out, satisfied himself that there really were sahibs waiting at his gate, and then unfastened the chain, with apologies for his forgetfulness. Three men servants, armed with lathis, long sticks with heavy iron ferrules at both ends, stood behind him, and they all appeared to be exceedingly relieved when they heard that their midnight visitors only asked for water, milk, eggs, and chupaties, on the score that they were belated and had no food.

The zemindar civilly invited them to enter, but Frank as civilly declined, fearing that the smallness of their number, the absence of a retinue, and the cavalry accoutrements of the horses, might arouse comment, if not suspicion.

Happily the owner of the house recognized Mr. Mayne, and then he bestirred himself. All they sought for, and more, was brought. Chairs were provided—rare luxuries in native dwellings at that date—and, this being a Mohammedan family, some excellent cooked meat was added to the feast. Before long Winifred was able to smile and say that she had not been so disgracefully hungry since she left school.

The zemindar courteously insisted that they should taste some mangoes on which he prided himself, and he also staged a quantity of lichis, a delicious fruit, closely resembling a plover's egg in appearance, peculiar to India. Nor were the horses forgotten. They were watered and fed, and if by this time the nature of the cavalcade had been recognized, there was no change in the man's hospitable demeanor.

Not for an instant did Frank's watchful attitude relax. While Mr. Mayne and the zemindar discoursed on the disturbed state of the country he snatched the opportunity to exchange a few tender words with Winifred. But his eyes and his ears were alert, and he was the first to hear the advent of a large body of horses along the main road.

He stood up instantly, blew out a lantern which was placed on the ground for the benefit of himself and the others, and said quietly:

"A regiment of cavalry is approaching. We do not wish to be seen by them. Let no man stir or show a light until they have gone."

He had the military trick of putting an emphatic order in the fewest and simplest words. A threat was out of the question, after the manner in which the party had been received, but it is likely that each native present felt that his life would not be of great value if he attempted to draw the attention of the passers-by to the presence of Europeans at the door of that secluded zemindari.

The tramp of horses' feet and the jingle of arms and trappings could now be distinguished plainly. At first Winifred feared that they were troops sent in pursuit of them by the Nana, and she whispered the question:

"Are they from Cawnpore, Frank?"

"No," he answered, placing a reassuring hand on her shoulder. "I cannot see them, but their horses are walking, so they cannot have come our way. They are cavalry advancing from the direction of Lucknow."

"Perhaps they are marching to the relief of Cawnpore?"

"Let us hope so. But we must not risk being seen."

"Your words are despondent, dear. Do you think the whole native army is against us?"

"I scarcely know what to think, sweetheart. Things look black in so many directions. Once we are in Lucknow, and able to hear what has really happened elsewhere, we shall be better able to judge."

The ghostly squadrons clanked past, unseen and unseeing. When the road was quiet again Winifred and her small bodyguard remounted. The zemindar was not a man who would accept payment, so Mr. Mayne gave his servants some money. It may be that this Mohammedan gentleman wondered if he had acted rightly when the emissaries of the Nana scoured the country next day for news of the missahib and two sahibs who rode towards Lucknow in the small hours of the morning. Being a wise man he held his peace. He had cast his bread upon the waters, and did not regret it, though he little reckoned on the return it would make after many days.

Refreshed and invigorated by the excellent meal,

MAKING HENS LAY

Prof. Elford Tells What a Quebec Woman Has Done

Prof. E. Elford, Macdonald College Quebec, says: For the future of the poultry industry we must look to the farmer. No. 100-acre farm should be without 100 hens. These 100 hens should yield at least $300 a year. I have no sympathy with the man who says poultry does not pay when he gives his fowl no care whatever.

As a sample of what poultry can be made to yield, I will tell you what Mrs. Shepherd, a lady living near Montreal, has done. From a flock of 10 hens she has a revenue of $300 a year. She keeps a good uniform lot of pure bred hens. She makes a specialty of winter eggs and gets the best price for a fancy article. In the spring she sells eggs for hatching. Her cockerels are sold for breeding purposes. She changes her hens every year, believing that pullets make the best winter layers.

When I was a boy on a farm in Huron county, Ontario, the poultry were considered a bother and were left to the women folk. Then, hens were not expected to lay in the winter. On that farm to-day there is one of the finest poultry plants in Ontario. About $1,500 worth of poultry produced was marketed last year. This affords some idea of the possibilities in the poultry industry.

THE PRODUCTION OF EGGS

Some Good Hints on Getting the Hens to Work

Along about December it is more than probable that fresh eggs will be in fairly active demand, and will, if the experiences of other years be any guide, continue so during winter. Of course everyone who keeps hens wants to profit by this condition, but the difficulty is in getting the hens started to lay. Early pullets are seldom depended upon to produce all the eggs, and the idleness of the older hens is excusable on account of their moulting at a time when the market for eggs is strong is one of the features of poultry-keeping that needs remedying. The intensive operator meets the difficulty by compelling the hens to moult in late summer, and thus gets the flock down to business early in the fall. To accomplish this he reduces the feed allowance to the minimum for a week or ten days, and also limits the range for exercise. At the end of this time the birds are quickly brought back to full feed, which has the effect of causing them to shed their feathers, after which laying soon begins. The experiment is so simple and has proved so effective that it is well worth trying, even where only a few fowl are kept.

GET RID OF USELESS HENS

Hens that have been laying for two seasons should be got rid of as soon as they cease laying, and, if possible, before they begin to moult. When they once have commenced to drop their feathers they rapidly lose flesh, and are of little value for eating. The cocks should be separated from the hens at this time. They are fierce and spiteful when moulting, especially ill-treating some of the hens at feeding-time. The cocks will take longer than the hens to grow their new feathers, particularly the sickles. The poultry must have access to shelter during rainy weather. A thorough soaking may do much mischief. Sometimes when a fowl is thick in the moult it will be seen constantly pecking at one special place on its body. This may be caused by one or more of the new feathers failing to pass through the skin and causing great irritation. If a needle is passed under the covered end of the feather it will enable it to be drawn above the skin.

DECIDED BY THE SNAKES.

Have you ever been to the Isle of Man? If so, you will know that it takes a steamship three hours to get there from England, for the isle has water all round it, and it is just about half-way between England and Ireland.

Long ago, before anyone went there for a holiday, some men once began to quarrel about the Isle of Man. Some of them said it belonged to England, and others said it belonged to Ireland.

At last one of the men said, "Let us bring some snakes to the isle, and then we shall know. For if they live, the isle must belong to England. If they die, the isle must belong to Ireland."

You will remember, of course, that good St. Patrick killed all the snakes in Ireland, so if the Isle of Man really belonged to Ireland, the Snakes that the men were going to take there would soon die, for good St. Patrick said that there would never be any more snakes in Ireland.

Well, the men got some snakes, and they carried them to the Isle of Man, and there they kept them to see what would happen. And after they had watched them for ever so long they saw that, instead of the snakes all dying, they got bigger and bigger, and fatter and fatter!

Indeed, it seemed as if the air of the Isle of Man was doing the snakes as much good as it does to boys and girls who go there! So the men who had said that the Isle was English now said, "You see, we were right after all."

I think they must have taken the snakes away again, though, for when I was in the Isle of Man a little while ago I never saw even one, and a big policeman whom I asked said he had never seen one either!

A PIG-STEALING ITEM

Magistrate: "You admit that you stole the pig?"

Prisoner: "I 'ave to."

Magistrate: "Very well then. There has been a lot of pig-stealing going on lately, and I am going to make an example of you, or none of us will be safe."

BLOOD HOUNDS KILL BURGLAR.

Break Away From Owner, Corner Victim and Tear His Body to Pieces.

Mount Vernon, Ill., Dec. 31.—A coroner's jury to-day exonerated John Roberts, owner of the pack of blood hounds which killed an unidentified man, trailed as a burglar, and tore his body to pieces.

The hounds, which followed the trail from Carrier Mills into the country, upon getting close to the suspect, broke away from Roberts and cornered their victim in a shed. Worn out by fleeing, the man was unable to get out of danger and was pounced upon and killed by the maddened animals before Roberts reached the scene.

No clue to the identity of the man has been found. His face and body were so badly lacerated by the hounds that the body bears only a faint resemblance to that of a human being. The body was buried in the pauper's field to-day.

The dead man was suspected of robbing a house at Carrier Mills of several hundred dollars. The constable was unable to trace him and called on Roberts to aid with his hounds.

A GREAT VIOLINIST

A Few Stories That are Told of Jan Kubelik

Many amusing and interesting stories are told of Kubelik, the great violinist. Here are a few of them:

One of Kubelik's most treasured possessions was a violin made by Guarnerius, for which he paid £2,000. Some time ago young Franz von Vecsey, the prodigy, visited Kubelik, and was permitted to play upon the costly instrument. When the boy had finished, Kubelik deprived him of his breath by presenting him with the violin. Kubelik uses a "Strad," the gift of Mrs. Walter Palmer, and a Tourte bow which belonged to the famous violinist Ernst, and was given to him by that artiste's widow.

At a very small London party a lady gave a start on opening her programme. "Oh, Kubelik," she exclaimed. "How delightful! I have heard so much of Kubelik. But what is it? Is it a new game? A kind of ping pong, I suppose?"

At a reception at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, Kubelik retired to a corner after playing, rather ill at ease and silent. A young girl, approaching him, said, "Pardon me, sir, but your handkerchief is hanging out of your pocket." "Thank you," said Kubelik—"thank you for this warning. You know the company better than I do!"

In the cause of charity, Kubelik is ever ready with his art. Once he was asked to play in a lunatic asylum because the resident medico thought, with Congreve, that music had charms to "soften rocks." The violinist mounted the improvised platform and played a lively Slav dance. The patients seated about the concert-room seemed deeply interested, and beat time with feet and heads. When Kubelik finished, a pretty young woman rose and beckoned to him. The musician imagined that she wanted an encore, and asked the doctor to inquire what she would like. Before the doctor could approach her she cried at the top of her voice: "Well, to think of the likes of me being here, while the likes of him should be at large in the world!" This was Kubelik's first and last experience of a lunatic asylum.

Kubelik's English has not always been so good as it is now; indeed, he speaks it brokenly still. When he was a guest of Canon Fleming at York, and was being shown round the Canon's house, he shook his luxuriant head of hair in front of the Canon's parrot. The bird naturally expressed considerable surprise. "Ha," exclaimed the violinist, "he tink I am an ourang-outang!"

DESCRIBED HIS PARENT

A Twelve-Year-Old Boy's Essay on "My Father"

The twelve-year-old son of a well known Liverpool doctor was asked the other day to write an essay on "My Father." This is what he produced, and the doctor himself confesses that the portrait is not a bad one:—

"My father is a very moody person. Sometimes when he comes home on Saturday he will give me sixpence instead of three pence. When he is in a bad mood, I ask him for my threepence, and he says 'Humph,' and after a good deal of grumbling he gives it to me. The way to make him in a bad mood is to ask him the time when he is reading his paper. On Sunday morning he generally devolops; he is rather good at enlargements and has been working wildly at them. Whenever he drops a plate and smashes it, he is a little farther off Heaven and nearer to the other place—I do not think I need mention it. On Saturday he generally goes to a football match all by himself. At one time he took up German, but that has altogether died out. In the morning from about eight or nine he is very bobbish and sings and dances all over the place. His favorite song is 'The Songs of Araby.' Whether he sings all this because of the night before I do not know, but I do not think so. He is very fond of smoking, and once made himself ill. He likes playing the piano, but when you want him to play nothing will induce him, simply because he is not in a mood. Altogether he is not a bad sort."

A GREAT FIGHTER

An Incident in the Career of General Hills-Johnes

General Sir James Hills-Johnes had only been in the Bengal Artillery four years when he won the coveted V.C. in the Indian Muttay, in 1857, at the age of twenty-four. He was in charge of a cavalry picket outside Delhi when a large body of Sowars suddenly dashed from the side. To save his guns, Lieutenant Hills actually charged the enemy alone, thinking that the diversion he would cause would give his gunners time to load. For the next few minutes he had a very lively time indeed, for he was plunged into a series of hand-to-hand fights such as we read of in stories of the old crusading days. Two men did the young officer put out of action one after the other, but no sooner was he rid of these opponents than he was charged by two more, and he and his horse were sent flying. However, he went on fighting till his sword was twisted out of his hand and then he fought with his fists, being eventually rescued from certain death by the late Sir Henry Tombs, who also gained his V.C. on that memorable day.

A REVOLUTION.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 29.—Advices received here late last night say that a revolution has broken out in Honduras and fighting is going on along the Honduras-Nicaraguan border 20 miles below Cape Gracias, Nicaragua.

The forces are being led, according to wireless reports, by General Lee Christmas, who was to have met 1,000 men on the Nicaraguan border with forty days' provisions.

It is known that the Davila Government moved $55,000 in silver Puerto Cortez to Ceiba and the latter city is believed to be the objective point of the advancing revolutionists.

"THE KLONDYKE'S MOTHER LODE"

The storehouse from which the famous placer creeks, Bonanza and Eldorado, receive their fabulous wealth, have been uncovered on the claims of The Victoria Gulch Mines, situated on the ridge at the head of Victoria and Gay gulches. The company's holdings consist of four quartz claims and about 200 acres 14 miles from Dawson, on a good wagon road and two miles from the Klondyke Mines R.R. There are two true quartz veins, between perfect walls 6 and 10 feet wide on the property, the free milling ore from which is literally encrusted with the yellow metal. Read what some of the world's greatest authorities say:

R. G. McConnell, B.A., of the Geological Survey, says in his report on the Klondyke Goldfields.

"A sample in which no free gold could be detected with the naked eye, or an ordinary magnifying glass, was assayed in the laboratory of the survey and gave 2,626 oz. of gold and 3,267 oz. of silver to the ton."

Pro. Henry A. Meirs, D. Sc. F.R.S., Wayneto, Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Oxford, in collaboration with Professor A. P. Coleman in a report to the Minister of the Interior, says: "At the head of Victoria Gulch which runs into Bonanza, a creek opposite Gay Gulch, a tributary of Eldorado, and at a height of about 2,300 feet above Dawson, has been opened, what appears to be a true quartz vein, showing nuggety gold in abundance. The gold is distinctly crystalline in character, and the crystals are of a peculiar form having a triangular outline, due to the fact that they are octahedra, and in particular a remarkable variety known as "spinel twins." Now it is significant that the gold found in Victoria gulch is also crystalline and has the same characteristic outline, here then we have fairly convincing evidence that the gold found in a stream gravel is identical with that found in situ in a quartz at the head of the valley and in this instance there can be little doubt as to the origin of the gold."

Dr. Eugene Haanel, Director of Mines, a noted authority on mineralogy in a report to the department in 1902, says: "Masses of quartz were seen protruding from the surface all about the locality, and it needed only to wet the surface of the quartz with water to reveal the bright specks of gold adhering to their surface.

"Gay gulch and Victoria gulch, the former a tributary of Eldorado creek, the latter of Bonanza creeks, limit Victoria Hill toward the sources of Bonanza and Eldorado creeks. Above Victoria and Gay gulches, Bonanza and Eldorado creeks respectively are unproductive, below these gulches the creeks are rich. It seems a reasonable conclusion that the gold in these creeks, at least so far as they flank the side of Victoria Hill, was derived from Victoria Hill."

Mr. R. W. Brock, Director Geological Survey, says: "The district is not glaciated. Gold in the recent gravel freshly derived from its original source is similar to gold in the corresponding White Channel gravel. Many of the gold grains and most of the nuggets, enclose quartz. Quartz pebbles are found containing gold, some at least very rich in gold. The quartz of the boulders is similar to the quartz of the veins, and gold of the veins to gold of the gravels. From the foregoing and other facts, it is obvious that the gold is absolutely local in origin, derived from the basins of the pay gulches and creeks."

Fred. T. Congdon, Member for the Yukon, stated on the floor of the House of Commons last January that some of the richest gold quartz in the world was being mined close to Dawson.

Just stop and think of the immense possibilities of rich returns from the development of the claims of The Victoria Gulch mines, when two miles of the Mother Lode runs through the property from which the $55,000,000 in placer gold has been already won from Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, the one-third the Klondyke's entire output. 100,000 shares of treasury stock of the par value of $1 is now offered for public subscription at 25 cents per share fully paid and non-assessable.

No further issue of treasury stock will have to be made at this price.

ASSAULT CASES AMUSE COURT

The Man Who Went Back After a Black Eye and Various Other Facial Adornments

It was less the fight in a grocer's shop than the quaint way in which the assistant told how his master belabored him which created uproarious merriment at the Guildhall, London.

Thomas Walter Capp, the assistant, was complainant, and his employer, Wm. Mortimer Phelan, defendant. A quarrel took place in the shop over monetary matters, and Capp said he called his employer "a liar." He said it emphatically and with an adjective. Thereupon Phelan told him, "If you say that again I will give you that."

"What was 'that'?" asked the clerk.

"Well, first a black eye," the shop assistant replied, amid laughter. "Then he gave me a blow behind the ear, and knocked me down. He asked me to get up, and knocked me down again. (Laughter.) Then he asked me to get up again, and once more knocked me down. (Laughter.) I went away then. (Laughter.) Some time afterwards I went back——"

"What for?" asked the solicitor.

"Only to show him what he had done," Capp answered, to the great amusement of the court. "Not to get any more," he explained. Thereupon there was a peal of laughter. But Phelan told him if he did not go away he really would give him some more.

Curious, by this time, to know the end of the incident, the magistrate asked, "What did he do?"

Complainant: Well, he gave me some more. (Much laughter.) This time he loosened some of my teeth. I couldn't open my eye for three days, and could eat nothing for four. (Laughter.)

Alderman Sir David Burnett, the magistrate: I must say that if anybody called me the name complainant admits using to defendant, I——"

Mr. Peet, complainant's solicitor: Would strike?

The Magistrate: Yes, I think I should.

Mr Peet: Then it's no use going any further.

The Magistrate: But I should legally be in the wrong. No words would justify an assault.

Mr. Peet: I will go on with the case, then.

The defendant contended that all he did was to turn Capp out of the shop.

Another witness said that complainant, after the first bout, returned to the scene, remarking, "I've had one eye closed up and I want the other done, too. I don't know whether that'll come off this time." (Laughter.)

Sir David Burnett dismissed the summons.

THE BABY ESKIMO

Always Healthy—His Mother Licks Him in Lieu of Washing

What do we know of the childhood of the Eskimo in his natural state? He is certainly not born with the proverbial silver spoon in his mouth. Silver and gold are practically unknown quantities in Eskimo land. Riches—as civilization understands riches—have no attraction for the little man. The height of his ambition probably is to have plenty of seal meat to eat and sufficient seal skins to make his clothes. His Eskimo superstition says it makes babies cross to wash them, so the youngster has to get accustomed to dirt and make the best of it. I once came across an Eskimo child several weeks old that had never been washed; the only cleansing it had ever undergone was the occasional lick from its mother's tongue, and I have reason to believe that was by no means an isolated case. In this instance I succeeded by stealth in getting the baby washed. Wishing to employ the mother for a short time, I persuaded her to give her baby into the care of a Christian Eskimo woman, and, having accomplished that, the remainder was an easy matter.

The wife hunted up some baby's clothing, and she and the Christian Eskimo together undertook the task of spring-cleaning the poor little bairn. When the mother returned she was delighted to see her child looking so nice, and, far from being offended, she was profuse with her thanks. I never heard that the baby was cross or that it cried more after that much-needed tubbing.

Some one will possibly exclaim: "But how can a baby possibly thrive in so much dirt and filth?" Yet they do thrive, and it is surprising what chubby, fat-faced babies one sees among the heathen Eskimo, in spite of the dirt. The baby's clothing is often very scanty; in fact, one occasionally sees a baby being carried in its mother's hood with only a cotton shirt on, despite the fact that the thermometer registers 20 degrees below zero. The mother's hood is the baby's cradle. Being made of seal or deer skin, it is warm and wind-proof; the infant also has the benefit of the heat of the mother's body, and is out of harm's way. If it were laid in a basket cradle in the tent it would be very much in the way, and would always be in danger of falling a prey to the wolfish Eskimo dogs that prowl around the door by day and night, ever ready to pick up a dainty morsel.—Wide World Magazine.

SHOEBLACK TO OPERA SINGER

How a Notable New Tenor Was Discovered in Humble Life—He Delighted Mascagni

A new tenor who, it is quite possible will one day rank with the world's greatest singers, has appeared in London, England. This is Mr. B. Nevada Landino, who, like many another famous vocalist, began life in a humble way. Mr. Landino, who is twenty-seven years of age, is a Russian Pole of Jewish extraction. His family emigrated years ago to Cleveland, Ohio, and young Barney earned his living by blacking boots and selling newspapers. On the Sabbath he sang in the Synagogue, for among the Jewish colony his naturally fine voice was much appreciated.

Presently young Landino went to work as a cigar-maker, and in that capacity met a girl who was also one day to be raised to a much higher position in the social scale—Rose Pastor, who subsequently married a millionaire, and devoted her time and money to the betterment of the conditions of her less fortunate sisters.

Miss Pastor often told Landino that with his beautiful voice he ought to make a name. He was anxious enough to improve his condition, but who was there to help? At last, however, the editor of the Cleveland Press drew attention in an article called "A New Tenor" to Landino's abilities. This attracted the attention of Mr. Alfred Arthur, director of the Cleveland School of Music, who sent for him and gave him lessons gratis.

Later on Landino drifted to New York. One day he was passing the Grand Opera House with a friend and saw that Mascagni was to conduct. "Now's your chance," said the friend; "go in and try your voice." Landino went, but he was terribly nervous. Mascagni, who was producing "Iris," was testing the voices of the singers. Landino, shy and afraid, was the last. When he had finished Mascagni slapped him on the back shouted "Bravo!" and there and then gave him a part.

For two years he worked hard under Emma Nevada in Milan, and that is how he comes by part of his name. She was so proud of her pupil that she wished it. The new tenors repertoire embraces seventeen operas and two hundred songs, and he sings in four languages. He is a teetotaler and a non-smoker.

ABRUZZI'S STORY

The Young Eskimo Who Loved a Beautiful Maiden

The Duke of the Abruzzi is one of the most successful of living explorers, in which capacity he has had a fair share of adventures and hair-breadth escapes. During his North Pole expedition he had his right hand so severely frozen that two of his fingers had to be partially amputated. Another time during an ascent of the Ruwenzori range, as the Duke was making an observation in advance of his party, he slipped on a bank of loose stones and fell to the edge of an immense precipice, where he remained a prisoner for three hours. The Duke has picked up many interesting stories in the course of his various travels. Here is one of them, which he heard in the Far North. A young Eskimo loved a beautiful maid on whose father's hut was near his own, but, as is so often the case, the girl's parents would not hear of the match. One night a great storm ripped up a crevice in the ice, and between the two huts there yawned an abyss bridged only by a slender strip of ice. Here was the chance which the young lover sought. He crossed the frail bridge in the dead of night, and crept to the home of his sweet heart to steal her from her cruel father. The Eskimos sleep in bags of sealskin, and, with bated breath and loudly beating heart, he hoisted on to his back the one in which he thought his lady-love slumbered. He recrossed the strip of ice, and, safe on the other side, he broke it down with the blow of an axe, so that no one could pursue him save by the aid of a boat. Regaining his own hut he opened the bag to gaze upon the fair one, when, with a cry of horror, he staggered back dumbfounded, for, in his haste to get the affair over, he had stolen his sweetheart's father by mistake.

SCRAP DREADNOUGHTS

Remarkable Development in the Construction of Battleships

When his Majesty's battleship Dreadnought was launched in February, 1906, one had the feeling that finality had surely been reached in the matter of naval construction; but the navies of the world have been making giant strides ever since.

First came greater Dreadnoughts, and then Dreadnought cruisers, Boadicea scouts, and Tribal destroyers, entirely turbine-driven, followed by great steps in the use of oil-fuel.

And in the past few weeks several startling announcements have been put forward. Within a few days we had talk of motor-driven battleships, and a report of a coming small destroyer, of a height only 36 inches above the water, and with only two guns, but of such power and rapidity of fire that the money spent on Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts might as well have been thrown into the sea. These guns are to be of 17 inch bore, and will fire a weight of 6,822 pounds.

Nor must we forget the battleship cruiser Lion. She is more powerful than the most powerful Dreadnought, and faster than the fastest destroyer. The St. Vincent, the largest Dreadnought now in commission, has only 19,560 tons displacement, as against the Lion's 26,560 tons.

THE TASKMASTER

By Charles Kingston

The deputation twirled their caps awkwardly as they stood in the presence of Ephraim Elliss. At first the three men sent to place the grievances of their fellow-workers before the old cotton master had maintained a spirit of dogged hostility, but Elliss soon showed by his manner that he knew how to deal with the class from which he had himself sprung.

"I've little to say, men," he began, in a deep voice "but that little will be to the point. I'm one of yourselves—I worked in a mill for years and I know what it is. You ask for a ten per cent. increase. I refuse it."

"But our wages were reduced twenty per cent., sir," put in the boldest of the three; "that was a year ago, and you said that if trade improved you would give it us back."

"Trade has not improved," snapped Ephraim.

"Give us back half, sir," pleaded another. "We cannot live on the present wage."

A sudden anger took possession of the cotton master, and he strode over to the fireplace, where he touched a bell.

"I do."

"Then you'll not have a worker in your mills to-morrow."

"I can do without you," said Ephraim, with emphasis. "Perhaps you'll find it difficult to do without me."

"We'll try at any rate," retorted Dunne, before the servant arrived to escort them to the door.

"It's goin' to be a fight to the death, mates," he whispered, as they descended, "but we must never give in."

The cotton workers of Gread Dedbury were true to the words of their leader, and within twenty-four hours a great strike was proclaimed.

Had any of the thousands of starving men women and children in Great Dedbury known the story of Ephraim Ellis' life the strike could have been ended immediately. The cotton master had had an extraordnarily adventurous car er, containing several episodes that frightened him whenever he recalled them. His father had been a rag and bone dealer, and Ephraim succeeded to the business, married at thirty, and then became the father of one child, a girl. That was thirty-five years before, and he had not seen his daughter for twenty-eight years. The reason was simple enough. Ephraim, whose real name was John Fox, had tried the profession of receiver of stolen goods, and when the inevitable discovery came a stern judge sent him to penal servitude for seven years. While in prison his wife died, and his daughter had disappeared—at any rate, when he came out of prison she was nowhere to be found, and he was not over-anxious to find her. Changing his name, Ephraim began speculating in a small way, obtained some money by false pretenses, was not discovered, made more money with it, and finally bought a mill, to which he added as prosperity permitted him. For years, whatever he touched turned to gold, and at sixty-five he was a millionaire and the employer of ten thousand persons. If he had been a man o' greater imagination his prosperity would have frightened him, but he took it as a matter of course, and firmly believed that he had lived down his past.

Lately he had endeavored to trace his daughter, but it seemed a hopeless task after all these years. A private detective had drawn some hundreds of pounds from him on account of expenses, but no daughter had as yet come to light.

The crisis came with terrible suddenness. For a week Ephraim had remained indoors, and the change from the solitude of his house to the fury of the mob was terrifying.

"Your lifes in danger, sir," cried his butler, dashing into the millionaire's study; "the strikers are coming."

Ephraim rose with a grim smile and walked to the window, but what he saw chilled him to the heart, and in that moment he realised the awfulness of hate. Through the great carriage drive a motley mob of several thousand men and women were advancing carrying burning torches. They were coming to burn him out.

"Quick—telephone for the police," cried Ephraim.

"The police can't save us," groaned the butler. "Look, sir."

He pointed to the onward rush of the infuriated strikers as they swept away the small band of detectives which had been living on the premises, and immediately the house was surrounded. It was lighted at a dozen different points, and soon the mansion was blazing. Ephraim escaped, owing to the insane fury of the mob, which did not recognise him in his servant's livery, and it was in his refuge at a neighboring town that he learned the reason for the desperate act. Two women once his employes, had died of starvation. That had roused the madness of the mob, and they would have burned Ephraim alive had they found him.

Two women had starved to death while nine mills were lying idle. It was a terrible blotch on our civilisation. Elizabeth Crowther and Mary Fish had died the most terrible of deaths, and Elizabeth Crowther was Ephraim's daughter. He would not believe it when his detective brought him the news, but his proof was overwhelming.

"I came to tell you, sir, the day they burnt your house," said the man. "I only found her an hour before she died. For ten years she was employed by you, but, of course, her married name hid her. What bad luck! Died of starvation, and she could have had a million for the asking."

Ephraim groaned in his agony.

DEFINITION OF TEDDY

"What great wandering body," asked the teacher, "which is largely composed of gas, and which travels at terrific speed and puzzles the scientists while amazing and alarming nearly all its beholders, is now attracting the attention of the entire world?" "Teddy Roosevelt," yawned the fat boy at the end of the row.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roselyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, ey should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description w ll be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

NEW STATION FOR GUELPH.

While in the West last week, First Vice President Fitzhugh met a committee representing the city of Guelph, and after several hours deliberation settled the long standing question of a new station, subways and track elevation, which has been up on and off for the past ten years. Under the arrangement made, the Grand Trunk has to pay the city $50,000, and has to construct a foot subway at Neave St. On the other hand the city is to transfer to the Grand Trunk, Jubilee Park, one block west of the present station. Here the new station is to be erected.

A number of minor matters were settled involving the surrender by the Grand Trunk of a narrow strip of land near the old station, and the transfer to the Grand Trunk by the city of certain territory for freight facilities south of the new station. Also the city surrenders to the company certain lands which have been sold by the city either for sites or lots, but which really are the property of the Grand Trunk.

All the members of the Committee expressed their satisfaction with the outcome of the negotiations.

MAKING BREAD IN MANY WAYS

A Few of the Numerous Methods By Which It Is Manufactured

In visiting Greece I was struck with the primitive ovens built behind most of the houses in small towns, says a Greece letter in the Bakers' Weekly. They were like large beehives, built of clay; they were evidently solid up to the sole, then had the arched roof over, with a door at one side. They are heated with fires of straw and twigs.

In some places we find holes dug in the earth and lined with stones in which a fire is kept burning until sufficient heat is raised, the bread being then put in and a stone laid over the opening, with a fire on it to keep up the cooking heat.

In these ovens, we are told, the South Sea Islanders bake their bread, fruit, yams and roast pork, and doubtless they answer the purposes very well. In some eastern countries fire is put into a large earthen jar with small mouth and sloping sides, the cakes of bread being stuck on the outside of the jar to bake.

Then we know the old fashioned girdle, so much used in old Scotch houses, on which scones, bannocks and oatcakes are fried. This is also employed in Scandinavia for baking the universal "Flad brod," and it is also in use in many other countries in various shapes.

In Cornwall the old kettle style of oven is still used for home baking, the dough being laid on the hot hearthstone with a large round iron pot inverted over it. Fire outside of this keeps up the baking heat and the Cornish "kettle bread" is very good eating indeed, even if it is a little puddingly in the centre sometimes.

Even more primitive means of baking have to be used sometimes, as when the Austrian digger rolls up his "damper" in leaves and covers it with hot ashes to bake; but still all methods from hot stones to draw plate ovens are used for the one great purpose, to make bread, and the variety of means used for this end goes to show the universal importance of that article. Regular bakehouses with proper ovens seem to have been in use however, for hundreds of years, and doubtless many relics of them are still in existence.

CLEANING AND POLISHING

How to Keep Glass and Silver Ware In Good Condition

A chamois of extra fine quality, put up in clean, separate oiled paper packages, is now to be had. One can polish glass, silver or enamel with it, using any of the usual polishing agents, then wash and dry the chamois, with the happiest of results. It will not become hard and stiff. When dry it may be pulled in shape and will be found as soft as when purchased. This has been tested in our Experimental Station, in comparison with higher priced imported skins, much to the disadvantage of the latter.

The larger pieces of silver, especially the ornamental pieces, hard to clean, may be immersed in a bath of boiling water to which considerable washing soda or borax has been added. Let boil for an hour, then dry, and polish with chamois and whiting. Rub a paste of whiting on the smaller silver and then polish with the chamois. This paste is best made with alcohol. If ammonia is used the silver will have to be repolished sooner.

The cleaning of table pads is a problem. The small asbestos pads may be cleansed by putting them in the furnace and letting them burn clean, a plan which is not feasible with the pad that covers the table. This will have to be cleaned with benzine, sponging the spots as in the case of any fabric.—Good Housekeeping.

PRIDE TOOK A FALL.

Once upon a time a poor beggar man, who lived in a country where the king was called a Sultan, stood in a street and begged.

By and by there came walking along the street a man who was dressed in very fine clothes.

The beggar, who knew that such a man would have money in his pocket, cried out in a loud voice for help. Now the man in very fine clothes lived in the palace of the Sultan, and he was called the Sultan's favourite. But instead of giving the beggar man some money he just picked up a stone from the ground and threw it at him. And the beggar man picked up the stone and put it into his pocket.

"Perhaps some day," said he, "I shall be able to throw it back at the haughty fellow and revenge myself."

Well, week after week passed by, and at last the beggar saw the haughty man who had thrown the stone at him riding on the back of a camel. But the man was not haughty now for the Sultan had sent him away. And as he rode on the back of the camel to prison all the other beggar men threw stones at him.

The beggar man took his stone out of his pocket. But instead of throwing it he dropped it onto the ground.

"No," said the beggar man, "I will not threw it back, though he threw it at me. It is mean and cruel to revenge oneself on a man who has become poor and unhappy."

NO WICKED MARYS

We cannot remember any book with a wicked Mary in it. And when the poets sing their songs to women, they have the sweetest, purest, and most serious—sometimes their saddest—when they sing to a Mary.—Chamber's Journal.

A SENSE OF HUMOR

"Every time the baby looks into my face he smiles," said Mr. Meeklus.

"Well," answered his wife, "it may not be exactly polite, but it shows he has a sense of humor."

WILL CROSS OCEAN.

Brucker Has Announced His Intention to Attempt It in March.

Berlin, Dec. 29.—Joseph Brucker, who has announced his intention of attempting in March or April next to cross the Atlantic from the Cape Verde Islands to the Barbadoes or Trinidad, in the airship Suchard will utilize a novel system to keep his gas cool and prevent loss from radiation. This will be accomplished by sprinklers constructed at the top of the envelope which will spray water over the surface of the balloon.

The water supply will be hand drawn from the ocean in torpedo-shaped cylinders offering a minimum resistance to the waves, and after being taken on board will be pumped through a hose to the sprinklers.

Brucker proposes to carry a crew of six in his craft which will be equipped with two motors, each of 100 horse power. A non-sinkable lifeboat will be taken along. He hopes to arrive on the other side after four or five days and six nights of the air, taking advantage of the trade winds as far as possible.

HINTS ON FOOD

Marion Harland Gives Some Advice to Housewives

"Things to avoid in food and drink" is the subject of an interesting article in The Public Health Journal of Canada, by Marion Harland, who says in part:

Mouldy bread is a lurking place for ptomaines. I have heard housekeepers gravely assert that "mould does not hurt bread." A woman who had studied domestic science in college argued with me, to her own satisfaction, that mould, being a vegetable growth, when it appears on stale bread, is as harmless as yeast. "Of which it may be said to be a by product," she concluded, "Under the microscope you would see a miniature forest in that slice of mouldy bread. Toast it and you have dead wood—nothing worse."

She may have been right. I may err in trying to keep bread from moulding. If possible, and to throw it to pigs and chickens when the blue-edged forests appear upon it. I do the same with regard to musty loaves. I am positive in the conviction that musty flour and souring indian meal are unsafe as food for human creatures. Left to their own destruction as foods, the flour will develop weevils and the meal mealworms in due time. The germs of both must have been in the must and sourness. I actually knew one frugal housewife who sifted the weevils out of the flour and put it back into the barrel for family use! It never occurred to her that there might be as many invisible germs in the sifted flour as there were living wrigglers before she used the sieve.

Sprouting potatoes are unwholesome. I maintain that the water in which raw potatoes are cooked should be thrown away as unfit for culinary purposes. In some countries it is reckoned poisonous. Old potatoes should be cooked in two waters. Sprouting potatoes should not be cooked at all, except for chickens and pigs. Luckily, the rank smell that goes with the pale, dingy green of the peeled vegetable repels the would-be eater.

Since prevention is, always and everywhere, better than cure, it behooves the wise manager of the household to shield her provisions, raw and cooked, from the peril of contagion. A fly will deposit enough eggs in meat in a second of time to stock it with larvae in less than forty-eight hours. Therefore, keep meats behind wire, and if they are to be kept a day or two without cooking, wash over with vinegar and a dash of red pepper.

Lay a lump of charcoal in the bottom of the chamber of the refrigerator in which milk and butter are kept.

Make free use of the whitewash brush in the root cellar, and everywhere let in the free air and sunshine once a day. Have wire screens in your windows and doors all summer.

Corruption breeds in warm darkness, and is carried into your dwellings upon the feet and feelers of insects. The price of security from perils, visible and microscopic, is intelligent vigilance.

FEEDING CATTLE WANTED

The Supply of Feeders is Far Behind the Demand

The demand for feeding cattle has come on with a rush. On Toronto cattle market one day last week there were ten buyers for every load of stockers and feeders offered. Good feeders are scarce at any price, and farmers who are accustomed to put up a bunch of feeding cattle at this season are finding it very hard to have their wants supplied. Ontario will have a lot of rough feed this year, and will be able to make use of a larger number than usual of cattle for feeding purposes. That the supply is so small will serve to remove any doubts there may be regarding the future of the cattle market. Cheap cattle are a good ways off and the farmer who is so fortunate as to have choice, well finished cattle for sale this coming winter is likely to realize pretty well on his investment. The situation is being relieved somewhat by Western feeding cattle which have been offering in larger numbers of late. But even with this larger supply it looks as if there will not be enough of the good kind to go around.—Canadian Farmer.

POTATOES THAT HUSTLE

Planted on June 7th, Ready for Digging on August 27th.

The Ontario Colonization Bureau has received a letter from one of their new settlers at Cochrane, 433 miles north of Toronto, with a beautiful basket of potatoes, which were shown at the National Exhibition. The land was cleared on June 1st of this year, the seed planted on June 7th, and they stop dug on August 27th.

MILK POINTS

Don't keep milk where it will get warmer than 50 degrees.

Don't leave it in an open dish or pan.

Keep the cow's tail still by banishing flies. A simple spray will do it.

Strain all milk thoroughly. Germs cling to the dirt particles and may thus be eliminated.

Sterilize all crocks, pails, cans and bottles by boiling.

TRIED TO MILK MULE

Dan Friedman's baby cried lustily for his milk earlier than usual one morning recently and Dan stumbled out in the darkness to the shed of his home in Maspeth, L.I., to seek out a gentle Jersey cow.

TOOTLEBOOM TRIES A MOTOR CAR

There was really no reason why Tootleboom should buy a motor-car. Unless it was that this particular one was going cheap, which was a very good excuse for snapping it up, when you come to think of it. If people are not to take advantage of a drop in prices to purchase things they don't want, what would be the use of summer sales?
